Corn Crop Guess Looks Too High

Incomplete husking returns, not only from Illinois, but from other states also, leads one to believe that the final returns on the corn crop will show a yield of fewer bushels than was indicated by the government report issued recently, says H. I. Baldwin in his weekly crop and market letter.

Ruth Snyder Denied Plea For Appeal

Albany, N. Y., Nov. 23.—Mrs. Ruth Brown Snyder and Henry Judd Gray lost their last court fight for life today when the court of appeals denied their appeal from conviction for the murder of Albert Snyder, the woman's husband.

The chief ground on which the appeal was asked by both defendants was that their legal rights had been prejudiced by the fact that they were tried jointly instead of separately.

The court handed down a two line statement that it affirmed the judgment of conviction of each defendant.

"The Turn of The Tide"

The sparkling comedy drama, "The Turn of the Tide," will be presented by the Community Orchestra of Rankin, at the Broadlands Opera House, on Friday night, Nov. 25. The entertainment is sponsored by the Royal Neighbor lodge of Broadlands. Two former citizens, J. E. and J. L. Benefiel are in the cast. The play is said to be a knockout and all who fail to see it will miss a real treat.

Icy Wave Hits North

Chicago, Nov. 22.—Riding on an icy wind from the northwest, a cold wave was settling over the middle west today. The drop in temperature hit North Dakota, Minnesota and Nebraska last night and zero weather was forecast for today.

It was eight degrees above zero at Dodge City and Williston, N. D., while Moorehead, Minn., reported 12 above. Sub zero temperatures were recorded from Canadian points, Edmonton, Alberta, reported 30 below.

Companionate Marriage Is Consummated

Girard, Kan., Nov. 22.—An 18-year-old school girl was united in "companionate" marriage here today with a 20-year-old school boy.

Josephine Haldeman-Julius, daughter of E. Haldeman-Julius, publisher, of this city, pledged "love and faith" to Aubrey Clay Roselle before the Rev. L. M. Birkhead, Unitarian minister of Kansas City.

The ceremony was described as a "human agreement," admitting the possibility of failure. It was the regular Unitarian marriage service.

The decision to hold the ceremony today after having previously announced it for Thanksgiving was suddenly decided upon last night by Mrs. Haldeman-Julius "to stop an extraordinary volume of publicity."

Mrs. Haldeman-Julius explained the marriage is legal in every way and the only distinction between it and a regular union is that Josephine and Aubrey will not be obligated to each other for support until both have finished school and mutually decide whether the wedlock shall continue. The groom is employed temporarily by the Haldeman-Julius publishing company here and will return to college within a short time. The bride is a junior in high school here.

Horse Jumps On Radiator

Hindsboro, Nov. 21.—Friday evening as Elby Harvey and a friend were returning from Arcola they met with a queer accident. About three miles east of Arcola they met three horses running loose on the right of way. Mr. Harvey stopped the car but didn't get out of the way of one of the horses which jumped upon the front of the car damaging it quite a little. The radiator was damaged and the headlights torn off. The car was pulled into town to a local garage. As far as is known the horse was not injured.

Let Us Be Thankful

Be thankful for small things, for from small beginnings all great things grow.

The blessings which we enjoy in this modern day would never have been ours were it not for the Pilgrims, who, with naught but courage, determination, and faith in God, set sail for the new world in 1620.

The crude homes established in the wilderness by this little band of Christians, called the settlement of Plymouth, was the beginning of our United States, and Plymouth Rock the cornerstone of our great American Nation.

In a brief 307 years, America has become a recognized power, representing the descendants of these first settlers. Let us be thankful for our heritage and do all that is within us to keep the traditions of our country intact.

Man In The Saddle With Hoot Gibson

Another highly amusing and wholly entertaining picture with that popular screen star, Hoot Gibson, in the featured role, is to be presented at the Broadlands opera house on Saturday night Nov. 26th.

Gibson again is cast in the type of role that fits him so well—that of the comedy cowboy, and "The Man in the Saddle" makes a thoroughly diverting picture, without a dull moment from the opening scene to the final fadeout.

It is almost entirely comedy of the lightest and most whimsical nature, with Gibson moving from adventure to adventure with a breezy and engaging manner productive of the highest type of entertainment.

The story is most unusual, both in plot and treatment particularly for a western, and places Hoot in the role of a romantic but misguided young man of the west who is occasionally getting into trouble because of his insatiable ambition to be heroic and romantic.

He stumbles onto a ranch whose main purpose is the boarding and entertainment of eastern tourists. The tourists are looking for excitement and thrills in this wild west, and the ranch conveniently provides both for them by staging synthetic hold-ups, gun fights and lynchings. Gibson, taking all these affairs seriously, makes himself a general nuisance, but adds materially to the entertainment possibilities of the picture.

Fay Wray plays the feminine lead opposite the star.

Minnesota Says Illinois Is Champion

Minneapolis, Minn., Nov. 21.—The University of Illinois today was given a clear claim to the Big Ten football championship title and the University of Minnesota stepped out of its mathematical tie with Illinois.

In a statement issued by president Lotus D. Coffman, president of the university, Minnesota withdrew all claims to a share in the championship.

President Coffman's statement follows:

"As far as Minnesota can see, there is no tie. Illinois has the title. Minnesota has sufficient glory in the great record of the Maroon and Gold team. Our record is sufficient; claims to the title could add nothing to it."

The university's action has cleared up a muddle which had started an argument all over the country as to whether Illinois and Minnesota had tied for the Big Ten title.

John Griffith Big Ten athletic director, said Minnesota was entitled to a mathematical tie for the title on the basis of percentage on which the title had usually been figured. Sports writers disagreed. Some gave Illinois the title. Others gave Minnesota and Illinois a tie.

President Coffman's statement today leaves Illinois the undisputed champion.

Health Grams

The shot gun and rifle were the most trustworthy weapons used by parents and community officials to protect the lives of school children in the Illinois country a hundred or so years ago. Now the microscope and the test tube are the principal arms employed for that purpose.

Faith in the shot gun and rifle was implicit. When confidence in the test tube and microscope reaches the same degree, the bacteria which spread contagious diseases today will begin to vanish at the rate which marked the disappearance of the Indian as a hazard to life a century ago.

In the days of the Red man it was the venturesome fellow and the family on the outposts of civilization that suffered from massacre. Rarely did the Indian attack heavily populated communities. Today those who lag behind the progress science has made against disease are the ones who bear the brunt of ill health.

Decent morals, correct dietary habits, reasonable sleeping hours, exercise sufficient to stimulate healthful elimination, sunshine enough to tan the skin and the breathing of air that God made for bathing the lungs will prevent syphilis, gonorrhoea, malnutrition, rickets, tuberculosis and a number of other plagues that man has invited by his habits to prey upon him.

In the frontier days the schoolhouse was built in a place from which trees and underbrush had been cleared away. Teachers and others who were active in protecting the school children searched the surrounding territory with their eyes for signs of treacherous Indians and kept close at hand the trusty gun.

The health officer, the school physician and the school nurse are a special kind of police whose business it is to keep order and peace between bacteria and school children. They know their business, these police, and if the parents give them proper support they will keep order in their field about as well as that maintained by the ordinary bluecoats, and the soldiers and sailors in their field.

Hundred Hurt In Capital State

Washington, Nov. 18.—Under the guiding hand of the Red Cross whose physical and financial resources already were strained as a result of floods, explosions and other catastrophies, rehabilitation of the tornado-stricken areas of Washington and nearby communities proceeded rapidly today.

District of Columbia engineers after an official inspection, estimated the damage from yesterday's storm in Washington at between $700,000 and $800,000.

While more than a hundred persons suffered more or less minor injuries, only eight were reported to have been severely hurt, but none of these were expected to die. Only one death occurred, a negro woman being struck by lightning while crossing a bridge.

Stages Battle With Chicken Hawk

Gibson City, Nov. 17.—It's very seldom that a person living in town has to battle a chicken hawk, but Tuesday evening a large hawk was shot on the front porch of the home of John P. Christiansen on East Eleventh street, where it had taken refuge.

Mr. and Mrs. Christiansen and children returned to their home about 5:30 Tuesday evening from town and their son, Bobby, was sent up to the house to unlock the front door while the others were getting out of the car. When the boy walked up the steps of the porch he was frightened by the hawk, which had its wings spread out, ready for an attack. He called his father and Hampton Bergstrom and they experienced great difficulty in killing the hawk. Mr. Christiansen fired three shots into the body of the bird and this failed to kill him. Mr. Bergstrom secured a club and clubbed it to death.

The hawk measured four feet and a half between the tip of its wings. Its beak was as sharp as a knife and its claws were very long and sharp.

Don't Be Too Modest But Tell Us About It

Modesty keeps many of us from reporting to the home newspaper items of local interest; news of that little social gathering at which you were host or hostess, or at least a guest. But it is false modesty that keeps us in most instances from telling the reporter about it. Remember that the community is interested and that everyone concerned will be pleased to see his or her name in print and that the editor really wants you to call up or drop around to the office and tell it. He simply can't keep up with all these affairs that interest you and your set but he will appreciate your cooperation every time, and he'll reciprocate by treating you right.

Peace Time Program Of The Red Cross

There are those who believe that the work of the Red Cross died when the Armistice was signed. Our soldiers are not marching in khaki before us today as they were in war times, but many of them are lying disabled in hospitals. Surely they are yet deserving. The Red Cross is not forgetting—it still serves these boys, but your support is that which makes the service possible.

In the Army, Navy, and Marine Corps camps, and in the government hospitals, where lie 25,000 disabled veterans of the World War, the American Red Cross has assisted an average of nearly 24,000 persons each month during the last year.

The Wrong Camp Grounds

By H. LOUIS RAYBOLD

(Copyright.)

THE Streeters had been "out" a month, and by that I don't mean out of jail, but on the road, in the great Out-of-doors, hitting the trail, or what you will in camp lingo.

To look at them, you would know they had been out for some time. A thick coating of dust hid the newness of duffle bags, suitcases, stove, umbrella tent, telescope cot, and collapsible table, all stowed on running boards, fenders, bumpers and either side of the hood.

The latter arrangement was very awkward, for Mr. Streeter when putting in oil but, as his wife said, it was one of those small inconveniences which one shouldn't mind. And she didn't.

Mrs. Streeter had been the instigator of the trip. She had had difficulty in persuading her husband to go. As for Darrienne, their daughter, it required all of their combined parental authority to get her to accompany them. And it was because of her that they were any of them there.

"We must get Darry away from that plumber's boy," Mrs. Streeter had insisted. "I suggest that we take the car and go touring."

"Stopping at hotels, of course?" "Nothing of the kind. It isn't being done as it used to be. We will put up at those lovely state parks and municipal camps you hear tell of. The Dunbars were out all last summer and they said they just rode all day long, looking forward to the camp at night, some of which had electric lights, caretakers, showers, and everything!"

So here they were on this warm August day doing a mean forty-five and hoping to reach a camp the man in the chain store where they had bought some groceries had told them about. "Somebody's camp grounds or other, it says on a sign."

However, darkness, unrelieved by moon or stars, for the night was cloudy, had descended before the Streeters reached their destination. Sure enough, there was the sign, on which, aided by the spotlight, they could at least make out the welcome words "camp grounds." In the background, a dark bulk, as of a tent loomed up, and a general trodden down appearance of the level ground seemed to indicate that other campers had preceded them.

Within an hour, mother, father and daughter were wipped in slumber. Darry's sleep, to be sure, was interwoven with pleasant dreams of Charley regarding whom her heart grew fonder.

The sun had been up some time, when Mrs. Streeter awoke with a start. Then she nudged her husband. "Listen, Ed, am I dreaming or do I hear an awful lot of people outside?"

Ed turned over drowsily, roused up, and peeked through the tent flap. Then he sat up suddenly. "There are at least two hundred," he said, "sitting around and acting as if they were waiting."

"Waiting?" cried Mrs. Streeter, in a loud whisper, "waiting for what?" "Well," groaned Mr. Streeter, "they look as if they were waiting for us to get up!"

"And that canvas thing in back we thought was a tent," broke in Darry, who had been doing some peeping on her own account, "looks like a statue waiting to be unveiled!"

Those storied Arabs, who folded their tents and silently stole away, had nothing on the Streeters that morning. In utter stillness and with never a glance at one another, they crept into their clothes, packed up their equipment and climbed into their car.

Just as Ed put his foot on the starter, a portly woman rushed over to them and shook Mrs. Streeter's hand violently. "We do hope we didn't disturb you, but you know we're a club made up of his descendants and we've come to dedicate this statue in his honor on the anniversary of his birthday. If you would like to stay—"

But Mrs. Streeter declined her well-meant invitation kindly but firmly. Not until they were many miles away did she open her mouth again. Then, "well, I would like to know whose descendants they were, but I don't suppose I ever shall, for never, in all my born days will I come back this way again."

"Well, I can tell you, Momma," said Darry bitterly: "It was Joshua Putnam. While she was talking to you, I looked over at that sign we half read last night and it said: 'Joshua Putnam Camp Grounds. Where Joshua Putnam made his headquarters in 1777.' We weren't camped in what we think of as camp grounds. We were sleeping in a public park, and if you say another word against Charley, I shall tell everybody at home the whole thing. I just guess it isn't any more disgraceful to marry a plumber's son than it is to hold up an unveiling celebration while you get your clothes on!"

Next day, Charley received a telegram. "Dearest Charley, we are coming right home because Momma is sick of camping. She says no more camping for her. But let's you and I go camping on our wedding trip. It's all right if you go with the right party and camp before dark so you know where you're at."

"Love and kisses, 'DARRY.'"

'Unloaded' Gun Takes Life of Hume Youth

Conrad Pracht, 15, was accidentally shot at the home of his foster mother, Miss Frances E. Smith, of Hume, at 7:50 o'clock Friday morning, when a 22 calibre rifle was accidentally exploded, and died of shock and hemorrhage from the wound at St. Elizabeth's hospital at 3:10 o'clock, that afternoon.

His younger brother, Herbert, who got the gun for him had laid it across the top of a heating stove and still had hold of the butt when the older brother entered the room. The rifle which was pointed directly at the door, was accidentally discharged and the bullet struck Conrad in the abdomen.

The boys were preparing to leave home when the accident occurred, the older one to look after some traps he had set for furbearing animals and the younger boy to school.

The boys who were orphans had been sent to an orphanage at Alton and were later adopted by Miss Smith.

Freight Car Runs Wild Twenty Children Injured

Nogales, Ariz., Nov. 19.—Twenty school children and two teachers were injured near Nogales, Sonora, Mexico, today when a runaway railway flat car crashed into a picnic party of more than 100 children trapped on a railroad bridge across which they were walking.

Several of the smaller children escaped uninjured by lying between the rails while the car passed over them. Many leaped from the bridge 20 feet to the ground.

The railway car traveling down grade at a high rate of speed, had just rounded a curve and some of the children failed to see it until the car was almost upon them. Those who hesitated were knocked from the bridge.

All available physicians in the Mexican town were called to the hospital to administer medical aid. Gil Medina, chief of police of Nogales, Sonora, said the accident was unavoidable and no arrests were made.

The Burning Question

The newly appointed pastor of a negro church faced a packed audience when he arose to deliver a sermon on the burning question: "Is There a Hell?"

Bredren, he said, de Lord made de world round like a ball.

Amen! agreed the congregation.

And de Lord made two axles for de world to go round on, one axle at de North Pole and one axle at de Souf Pole.

And de Lord put a lot of oil and grease in de center of de world so as to keep de axles well greased and oiled.

Amen! said the congregation. And then a lot of sinners dug wells in Pennsylvania, Kentucky, Louisiana, Oklahoma, Texas and Mexico and steal de Lord's oil and grease.

And some day dey will have all ob de Lord's oil and grease, and dem axles is gonna git hot. And den, dat will be hell, bredren, dat will be hell.

Urges Music in Schools

As a Vocational Study

Elkhart, Ind.—The student who wishes to take up music as a life-work has as much right to prepare himself for his vocation in the public schools as the doctor, the lawyer or engineer, according to Benjamin F. Comfort, principal of the Cass Technical high school, Detroit, in a contribution to a symposium on school music by the Conn Music Center here.

Mr. Comfort wrote: "For many years I have been an advocate of musical instruction in the public schools; primary, secondary and collegiate. A student who has a talent and wishes to follow the profession of music has as much right to prepare himself for his vocation in the public schools as another who chooses medicine, engineering, science, law or any of the other many professions which may be learned from beginning to end in our colleges and universities.

"There is need for good music today which can be supplied only through the proper and general establishment of musical training in our schools throughout the nation."

Find Music Big Help to Quell Delinquency

Music in the leisure hours of children is a safeguard for the proper development of juvenile character, according to the Conn Music Center. Because of this, educators look upon music as one of the most constructive subjects taught in the public schools.

"Character building is the cornerstone of education," says Alice Rodgers, director of public school music at Santa Monica, Calif. "One who works with juveniles will tell you that the reason there is so much delinquency is because children have not been taught to use their leisure properly. It is what the boy or girl does with his leisure that determines character. Music furnishes one of the best ways of occupying leisure in a profitable way."

Miss Rodgers believes that too much stress has been laid on the theory that mathematics must be studied for proper mind training. She ranks music favorably with mathematics as mental discipline.

My Wheat Project

When school started in the fall of the year 1926, our agriculture teacher told us that he would like for every one of the agriculture boys to have a project. I was taking the course of agronomy and therefore had to decide among the crops which I would choose.

After studying it over and consulting my father I decided to take the project of growing wheat. I chose this because of many reasons. One was that the work came in the time of the year that a person wasn't so busy and had time to take care of the crop. Another was that this crop required less labor than most other crops. This country grows good wheat and therefore I thought it would be a good, profitable project. There was only one other student in the class taking that project so I thought it would be something a little different.

My project consisted of twelve acres of wheat sown on good, rich, black ground. When I plowed the ground I turned under a fine stand of red clover. Then the ground was double disked twice, harrowed and rolled. After this ground was worked down and the wheat sown we applied limestone to the parts that needed it. This was done rather late because the weather had been rainy and bad and wheat sowing was put off until late.

The wheat came up and I had a good stand. It grew very well and all indications were that it was going to be a good crop. Then, in the spring of the year there came a flood and the water stood on two sides of the field. This damaged these sides and affected the yield of the crop. When the crop was ready to be harvested we could tell that where the water had stood the crop would be light. We harvested the crop and it yielded better than we expected. The wheat had some smut because the seed had not been treated. But this smut did not affect the grading of the wheat. When the wheat was threshed it averaged twenty-one and two-thirds bushels to the acre which was a fair crop even if the water had damaged it.

I felt as if the project had been a success and to those who in the future wish some project I would advise them not to stand back on wheat.

WOMAN'S ACT THAT SAVED KING'S LIFE

History refers to the unfortunate inauguration of masquerades at the court of Charles VI as the "Burning Ballet." This famous dance was held January 29, 1393, in connection with a festival in the royal palace at Paris. The desire of a certain gentleman to create a sensation by having a dance of wild men to please the women resulted in the selection of King Charles and four of his nobles to participate in the revel.
 They had themselves sewn up in tight-fitting linen suits covered with resin, on which a quantity of tow was glued. In this guise they performed their weird dance. The duke of Orleans, in attempting to discover their identity, approached too near one of them with a lighted taper. The tow caught fire and the flames quickly enveloped the luckless performers. The king was saved from death by the presence of mind of one of the women, who enveloped him in the lengthy train attached to her gown. The shock, however, proved too great, and he never fully recovered.—Kansas City Star.

Smile Awhile

Was she shy when you asked her age?
 Yes, I imagine about ten years.
 Ben—My hair is falling out. Know anything good to keep it in?
 Gus—Yes, a small box.
 Oh, Tommie, how did you ever get such a black eye?
 Because I did not choose to run, Mother.
 Teacher—James, why is the English language called the 'mother tongue'?
 James—Because father never gets to use it.
 Do you believe a rabbit's foot brings good luck?
 Rather! My wife found one in my pocket once and thought it was a mouse.
 It was because of her past that I did not marry her.
 What's the matter with her past?
 Too long.
 Nervous Woman (to persistent beggar): If I give you a piece of pie you'll never return, will you?
 Beggar: Well, lady, you know your pie better than I do.
 Aunt—Dear, what are you two doing so much quarreling about?
 Hubby—Why, I'd made up my mind to stay in tonight, and now Flo has made up her face to go out.
 Sailor—Hello, is this the weather bureau?
 Yep.
 What about a shower this afternoon?
 I dunno. If you need one, take it.
 Wife: John, this article says there are sounds that the human ear can't hear.
 Husband (trying to read): Yes,

but unfortunately none made by the human tongue.
 Kind Lady: You should brace up, my poor man. Remember what you owe to society.
 Hobo: I don't owe society nuthin', lady. What do you think I've been doin'—playin' bridge?
 She had debated for many months the question of whether or not to bob, and two or three times had turned back at the tonorial Rubicon.
 Here she was at last, though, properly shrouded in a barber's chair, a trifle pale, but grimly determined.
 How shall I cut it? asked the barber, callously displaying his full kit of gleaming instruments.
 The patient gazed at them in fascinated horror, hesitated, then quavered: I think you better give me gas.
