Health Grams

An epidemic of book burning seems to have fastened itself upon Illinois. Like other sorts of epidemics it appears to respect no bounds of ordinary reason. Starting as a piece of political strategy it has recently been used as a disinfectant to stop the spread of disease.

One public health nurse reports that the books of all children in a school room were burnt when a case of scarlet fever was discovered in one of the pupils. Fire is absolute death for disease germs alright but these crafty little organisms don't travel very much on books. Children in a school room are much more likely to swap air from their lungs through coughs and sneezes. Germs are much more apt to get from one to another via the door knob, the pump handle, the drinking cup, the game that requires close contact, than by books. Germs ordinarily live but a short while when outside the body on a dry surface.

Next to a trip from one person to another via a kiss, a cough, a handshake or the like, germs like best to travel via food, milk, water and eating utensils. They can travel by books but that's a hard, slow, dangerous journey and they avoid it when possible. Those which survive a trip on a book are usually reduced to such a weakened condition that they are not exceedingly dangerous.

Soap and water liberally applied to the hands and face before eating and to dishes between meals and to floors and furniture in rooms where the sick have been are far superior methods than book burning in the control of contagion. To stop scarlet fever it is far more effective to test the well children for susceptibility and vaccinate the non-immunes than to burn books.

"Big Parade" A Great War Epic

"The Big Parade," which has been rightly called the biggest picture in screen history, will be shown at the Broadlands Opera House on Friday and Saturday nights, Dec. 2 and 3.

Briefly the story of "The Big Parade" centers in Jim Apperson, a typical fun-loving American and much like every other rich man's son. In the spring of 1917 fired by a new patriotism, he enlists and departs for service in France. The succeeding scenes show Jim and his two buddies; Bull, a former Bowery bartender, and Slim, an ex-riveter, and their life in the doughboys' billets in rural France. Mr. Stallings is said to have created a trio as original as Kipling's "Soldiers Three."

And then Jim meets Melisande—as played by Renee Adoree—and forgets about his American sweetheart. This little French girl in her wooden sabots and milkmaid garb is a figure of high romance. Some of the most touching scenes ever filmed are those of the lovemaking of Jim and Melisande. Then comes the advance to the front and the lovers are separated. Vital moments of drama are shown in the advance through the forest, the attack on the French village, the trenches, shell-holes, machine gun nests, the wounding of Jim and the final fight for his two pals. Then home again and the reconstruction period when the two lovers are reunited. Realism dominates every scene.

Danville Business Places Damaged By Big Fire

Damage estimated at between $45,000 and $50,000 was caused by fire, smoke and water during a blaze which originated from an unknown cause early Wednesday morning, swept thru the basements of the Buy and Beard buildings, located in the southwest angle of Redden Square, attacked the first and second floors of the Beard building and threatened for more than two hours to spread to the Plaza hotel and other buildings on West Main and South Vermilion streets.

It was impossible to make a complete check on the damages to either the Buy or Beard building, on account of the flooded condition of the basements. The management of the Plaza hotel also said it was impossible at this time to give more than a guess at the damage suffered by the hotel company, but that $5,000 probably would cover it.

It was indicated that the losses suffered by the owners and tenants of the buildings would be more than two-thirds covered by insurance.

New Ford Gives Unusual Mileage

Four wheel brakes, standard selective gear transmission, extraordinary acceleration, a speed of 60 miles an hour or more, a practically vibrationless engine and unusual beauty in line and color are among the outstanding features of the new Ford cars, the first of which will be shown all over the country today.

The generator, oiling system, steering gear and rear axle are of new Ford design it is announced, and its 40-horsepower engine has been so designed that it runs 20 to 30 miles an hour on a gallon of gasoline.

This car, which is to succeed the famous Model T line, will be shown Friday by Ford dealers in many of the larger cities of the country. In Broadlands, photographs and descriptive charts of the new cars will be on display at the Harden Sales & Service show rooms, where the public will be given the complete story of the new Ford car. Later, various models will be on display here.

So far, the new cars have been examined only by those who will have charge of the first showings and demonstrations. Salesmen and demonstrators are studying charts and diagrams which are to be used in explaining the various details of design, appearance and performance.

For months factory models of the new car have been undergoing severe performance tests in and around Detroit. One of these factory models made a road run of 20 miles in 24 minutes. This run, it is said, was made on an ordinary paved highway near Detroit.

Local dealers, in commenting on the forthcoming show, said their first view of the new Ford had substantiated Henry Ford's statement that "there is nothing quite like it in quality and price."

"Mr. Ford's statement had prepared us for a surprise, but the new Ford car is better even than we had hoped for. It is certain to make history in the automotive industry, just as its predecessor, the famous Model T, has made history for 20 years."

Prices of the new Ford car show a range of from $385 to $570 for the various types of pleasure cars and $460 to $610 for the various truck types.

The various types, and their prices f. o. b. Detroit, are:

Peabody Coal Mine Re-opened

About a dozen men were put to work at the Peabody mine, four miles south of Catlin, on Wednesday, breaking seals to the mine and getting ready for actual mining of coal as soon as the entries can be cleared up and the machinery put in condition.

Fire was built under several of the furnaces and the fans were started. As soon as inspectors can go through the mine and determine just how much work is to be done to get the mine in shape for working, after being idle for more than two and one-half years, a force of probably fifty men will be put to work. It will take at least two months to get the mine ready for work, according to Joseph McFadden, the superintendent.

Before the shut-down on April 1, 1925 the Peabody mine employed close to nine hundred men and the pay roll was close to $75,000 every two weeks. It was stated Tuesday, that as soon as the mine is ready it will employ about the same number of men as it formerly did.

My Project Story

I entered my third year of high school at Longview, early in September of the year nineteen twenty six. Having observed the subjects which I could take, I learned that Agriculture had been entered as a subject. It was divided into two divisions: Animal Husbandry and Agronomy. I chose Animal Husbandry because I liked animals and because I was unable to take Agronomy on account of conflicts. Some of my reasons for taking Animal Husbandry were: It was an interesting study of farm animals; it afforded experience as well as knowledge, and a successfully completed project meant another half credit added to my grade card.

My next task was to select the project. I had two projects in view, either the care and management of dairy cattle or the care and management of hens for egg production. After considering the outlook for each project I chose Poultry.

After deciding upon my project my first task was to secure a poultry house, fencing and other equipment. I had a fairly good poultry house on hand, which needed only a thorough cleaning and disinfecting. I finished this task in about three hours. Next I turned my attention to the lot around the house. It had been in use for several years and was probably a harbor for disease. I cleaned all trash off the lot and to make it hard on disease, I spaded up the whole thing. Then I fenced it with regular poultry fencing, about five feet high. Then I placed a litter of straw on the floor of the house and placed in it a trough for mash and a watering device. My next task was to secure the chickens. They were all on the place, not making it necessary to buy them, but they were scattered in all kinds of places, from the top of the pear tree to the fences along the cornfield where they roosted. I went out alone and caught about forty pullets of the Buff Orpington breed. Then I procured about thirty more Buff Orpington hens and put them into the house. This made me a total of about seventy pullets and hens. The chickens then being ready for the project I started thinking of a good ration and as to how I should carry on the project. I knew that the Buff Orpington breed of chicken was not credited with any egg records and that I would have to feed them carefully in order to make a profit from their egg production. I finally devised a ration composed of: ground corn 3 parts, ground oats 3 parts, bran 3 parts, tankage 2 parts, and one part of a specially prepared commercial feed called 'Egg-a-day'. The scratch ration was composed of shelled corn, 2 parts, oats 2 parts.

I fed the mash in a trough at the beginning of the project, but later built a hopper for that purpose. I fed scratch feed each morning and evening. After the hens had begun laying I culled out twenty of the non-layers and sold them. The remaining fifty gradually increased in egg production until they had laid thirty-five eggs a day, which I considered a fair production scale for that breed of chickens.

After I had carried on my project for a few months, I constructed a dropping board in the house. I found that this was a big saving in time and labor and that it made the house much cleaner for the poultry. I cleaned and disinfected the house once each week and during my whole project, lost only one hen from sickness which shows that cleanliness is an important point in the care of poultry.

At the end of my project I sold twenty more of the hens and kept the remaining thirty. After checking up on the cost and income of my project I found that

I was ahead about nine dollars. After closing my project I felt that I had learned something about feeding poultry as well as receiving the real experience.

Thomas Edison Sees Himself In Talking Movie

West Orange, N. J., Nov. 25.—The wizard of West Orange tonight saw and heard himself as others see and hear him. Thomas A. Edison, attending the first showing of a talking movie of his recent radio interview, sat back in his chair, watching and listening as the film flashed his likeness on the screen and as a radio loud speaker changed into words and sentences the tiny lines impressed on the celluloid by his voice.

The picture was the work of the General Electric company, which showed it to the inventor in his laboratory. Only members of the Edison household and a few friends were present.

A dexterous synchronization of two electric motors made possible the realistic appearance of Mr. Edison on the screen. Picture and voice were recorded nearly 200 miles apart, the former in the Edison library, where the interview was held, and the latter in the General Electric research laboratory at Schenectady.

The inventor's replies to the questions of his interrogator were carried as electric impulses over a telephone wire to the upstate city where they were recorded on a film moving at exactly the rate of speed of the camera that was taking the pictures here.

Drove Turkeys To Chicago

Tuscola, Ill. Nov. 26.—Turkeys had a hard life in 1852, but they get all the gravy now!

Take it on the word of "Uncle Charlie" Smith, 92, Civil War veteran of this city—these days the turkeys have lots to be thankful for.

Away back in 1852 Uncle Charlie drove turkeys on foot from Paris, Ill., to Chicago—then a hike of 175 weary miles for men and turks.

With 470 turkeys Uncle Charlie that year turkey-trotted for nine days to old Fort Dearborn where the gobblers met their executioner and continued their journey from there on in "full dress."

Nowadays? Huh! Turkeys have no adventures at all. They leave home fully dressed, travel to market in fast express trains and get no chance to display their plumage or talents at trotting at all.

In those days gobblers brought 50 to 75 cents each. The boys who escorted them to market did not tarry long after the sales, but bought a "little coffee and sugar" and started straight home like good boys.

At least, Uncle Charlie says they did.

Sells Himself Into Slavery

Fort Worth, Texas, Nov. 28.—An able bodied white man will be sold into slavery at a public auction on the lawn of Tarrant county court house at noon, Wednesday. County authorities today said they would not interrupt the auction.

The man, Alexander Christian Maddox, 31, of Fort Worth, a World war veteran, declared he was unable to provide food and clothing for his wife and five children and as a last desperate means of raising money he intends to sell himself into a year's voluntary slavery.

Maddox said that the only terms he will ask of his "buyer" is that the children be provided with the necessities of life. His 'master' will have the right to impose any kind of work or hours upon him that his owner wishes.

Dr. Hoyd, the Chicago Optician, has been detained at Villa Grove the past few days. He will be at the home of H. Kilian the latter part of this week.
