The Three C's of Credit

Here are the three qualities that determine a man's credit at this bank:

CHARACTER—That's another way of saying honor, and honor is the foundation of banking. We like to do business with men who can be trusted and in whom folks have confidence.

CAPACITY—Can the borrower manage his affairs so as to pay the note when it comes due? Has he the capacity to make the loan profitable?

CAPITAL—The man who has been successful in saving his money and putting it to profitable use has demonstrated that he has something to back up a request for a loan.

Hundreds Killed As Dam Breaks

Los Angeles, March 13.—More than 300 persons were swept to death early today in San Francisco canyon, north of here, when St. Francis dam in-pounding part of the Los Angeles water supply burst and unloosed a 75 foot wall of water into the narrow valley. Officials expressed fear that the death toll might reach 400.

A telegram received at the sheriff's office, said that 100 bodies had been recovered where the flood waters entered the Santa Paula and Santa Clara rivers.

With only the flash of a short circuited high power line to serve as a warning to the hundreds who lived in cabins and ranch homes the length of the valley, a great unshackled wave estimated to have been 75 feet high rushed furiously toward the sea. Nothing stood before it.

Mountain cabins, ranch homes, a city power plant and it is believed a tented city inhabited by 75 or more southern California Edison company workers, were carried away.

So great was the volume of water that poured thru the wide break in the dam that, despite the 36,000 acre feet of supply in the big reservoir, the flood spent itself in a few hours.

William Mulholland, Los Angeles city engineer, expressed the opinion that seepage had caused a portion of the hill at the west side of the dam to crumble, causing the collapse of the huge structure built about a year ago.

Remedies For Hard Water

Some of the water used in Illinois towns is hard enough to excite the suspicion of prohibition agents, according to A. M. Buswell, professor of Sanitary Chemistry at the U. of I. and chief of the State Water Survey located at the University.

He explained that there are two remedies for hard water, the one is to get soft water and the other is to take the hardness out of the water.

But soft water isn't so easy to get, he remarked. Cisterns collect rain water which is naturally soft since it has no chance to come in contact with lime to make it hard. But there is lime in the mortar used in making a brick cistern and there is also lime in Portland cement of which cisterns are sometimes built. This lime from the cement always dissolves in the rain water and makes it more or less hard. Sometimes in water from new cisterns there is more lime than is found in very hard well water.

The best thing to do to fix the lime or cement in a cistern is to wash down the walls and bottom with a solution of ordinary baking soda. Do not be afraid to use plenty.

The best soft water for household use is obtained by filtering the water from your regular supply through a special kind of sand belonging to a class of minerals known as the zeolites. These minerals have rather surprising ability to take lime out of water.

A tank something like a hot water tank but provided with special valves and bottom, is filled to within a foot or more of the top with zeolite sand. It is then connected to the water system in such a way that the water to be used will be allowed to flow thru the sand bed. The lime is completely removed and the water completely softened. The number of gallons of water which may be softened in this way depends on the amount of lime in the water and the amount of zeolite sand in the filter. When this amount of water has been passed through the filter it must be regenerated by treatment with salt. It takes about a half hour to regenerate a softener in this way and it has to be done once a week or once in two weeks.

Mayor Does Good Deed On The Sabbath Day

Mayor C. D. McCormick was taking up a sewer on the north side of town last Sunday morning, and some of the passers-by thought it was a terrible thing for him to be ditching on the Lord's day. But—our honorable mayor was not ditching—he was digging up a sewer to save the life of a dog which had become fastened in the same. Folks had heard the dog barking for several days, but didn't locate it till late Saturday night. The canine was very weak when released but soon revived. The supposition is that the dog had chased a rabbit in the sewer and after digging the dirt around himself was unable to get out.

"The Calgary Stampede"

"The Calgary Stampede," the Universal-Jewel which comes to the Broadlands Opera House on Saturday night March 17, might be tersely described as a glorified Western.

Hoot Gibson, the star of this picture, is the ideal type of manhood come to life and presented to the world via the silver screen. He is strong, fearless and energetic, and combines his feats of horsemanship with a real gift of acting.

"The Calgary Stampede" is a well told tale and the picture is thoroughly interesting, affording some of the finest bits of action ever used in a picture in which the predominant tone is outdoor action. The few shots showing the stampede of a herd of about 7,000 buffalo is decidedly impressive.

Part of the action takes place on the Prince of Wales ranch.

The colorful stampede has donated its kaleidoscopic moments to paint a most impressive background for this thrilling story of the west.

Along with its pictorial splendor "The Calgary Stampede" presents a gripping story of cow-punchers, Mounted Police, love, humor and the fighting of men.

Dogs Kill Judge Loomis Fat Hens

Judge O. D. Loomis had the misfortune to have about a dozen hens killed by dogs last Sunday morning. The chickens were killed by three dogs, Mr. Loomis recognizing two of the animals. He went to the owners of the two, who promptly paid the damage he claimed. Thus far, Mr. Loomis has not been able to find the owner of the third dog. We pity the unclaimed dog, if the judge ever gets a shot at him with that large horse pistol he keeps handy.

I Thank You!

I take this means of thanking the voters for their support of my candidacy for commissioner of Ayers township at the caucus last Saturday. I appreciate your help very much, and solicit its continuance at the regular election which will be held on Tuesday, April 3.

Sincerely,
Ray L. Bowman.

Bovine Bicuspid Of Gold Are Found

Portland, Ore., March 6.—In the golden west cows have gold teeth.

If you don't believe it, take a look at these, said Bert Edwards, Salem cattle buyer, today, displaying a handful of gold-plated teeth, salvaged from a slaughterhouse where he sold eight of his herd.

Pure gold, he added. A jeweler said so.

Edward's opinion is that the cows grazed most of their lives on a plain virtually carpeted with gold under the grass. Thus, in some unexplained manner, the precious metal adhered to their teeth.

My Corn Project

When I was deciding on my project I came to the conclusion that corn was the thing for me to take for the simple reason that it is the largest and most profitable crop grown in this locality and also in the whole state. After I had signed my bulletin for corn I then began to make plans how I was going to produce a large yield so that I would have a large sum of money when I sold the corn. I wanted to raise more and better corn than my father had raised up to this time, then I would have proof that I was a better corn grower than he was.

In the fall my father and I wandered around in the cornfield trying to find some seed ears. We found they were very scarce, but finally gathered up enough for my ten acre plot. We brot the corn in and hung it up to dry. In a few weeks I took forty ears to school one morning and let them finish drying there, and later I tested them for germination and disease. I found the corn was very badly diseased and did not germinate very good. Later on after I had studied it over I decided to buy the seed and it cost me three dollars and ninety cents per bushel.

On May the fourth and fifth the ground was plowed and harrowed after each days plowing and also at noon in order to crush the clods while they were fresh and moist. Then on May fourteenth it was disked twice and harrowed a few rounds which put the ground in good shape. Sixteen rows were planted in the evening but that night it rained and kept raining for several days after that. On June sixth we got back in the field again and on that day the rest was double disked, harrowed and planted. It was a hard proposition to decide whether to leave the sixteen rows that we planted earlier or to replant them because they had germinated very poorly due to the fact that we left a little old corn in the planter boxes from last year, but we decided to leave it because it was so late in the season and it would be better to have a little as none at all when the corn was matured. Then in four days the ground was harrowed again in order to check the weeds and level the ground a little more.

On June twenty-fourth the corn was plowed for the first time, and on July second it was crossed and on July twelfth the corn was laid by making the third and last time it was plowed. The ground was clean and in fairly good shape after each plowing but the grass came in it after the last plowing caused by a rain after it was plowed. It should have been plowed again to check this grass but I thought it was too late and the corn would be more matured and solid if the plow was kept out of the field. Along in August and September the corn looked very poorly due to the fact that it was so late, but along that time it looked like there would be a large yield if it ever matured and got dry. In a few weeks the leaves and stalks began to dry and on November fourteenth we began husking the corn. It made forty-three and one half bushel per acre, which was fairly good for the conditions and as late as it was planted.

When I figured up how much I had made on my corn I found I went in the hole about three hundred dollars, not because of a poor yield but due to the fact that land went down and I lost five hundred dollars on the land. If it hadn't been for this I'd have had a profit of about two hundred dollars, but no one can help it if you go in the hole, so I will have to try and make this back and more too if possible the next time.

Walter Logan.

Way Up in the Air

By AD SCHUSTER

(Copyright.)

"IN MORE ways than one," Bessie Lind looked admiringly at her suitor, "I wish you would live closer to the ground."

"You mean you're afraid I might fall?" He smiled. "I've been laying bricks for seven years now and never slipped once."

"I know, but you're so absent-minded. Some day you might forget you are standing on a little platform way up in the air and step off. You know, Norton, you've done some very—well—foolish things when you were thinking of something else."

"When I am at work that's all I think of," Norton was a little offended, "and besides, if I do think of anything else, it's you."

"All the same I wish you had a job in which you could keep both feet on the ground, literally and figuratively."

"The job is putting a little in the bank each week and in a year—maybe before—there will be enough," Norton Nodd took her hand, "enough for us to get married. Don't you go making fun of my job."

As if to answer the girl's wish, a remarkable thing happened to Norton the next morning. As he descended the stairs in his rooming house he saw the fat letter awaiting him on the hall radiator, and as he hurried on to work he read it. A draft for ten thousand dollars! Old Uncle Arthur had remembered him. There would be a wedding now. Right after work he would hasten to Bessie, tell her the news and, if she were willing, hunt up the preacher. Norton shoved the letter and draft into his lunch box and hurried on. He could not quit the boss without notice and, anyway, people did not retire from work on ten thousand dollars.

As the bricklayer placed brick to form a tall chimney his mind was on the happiness of Bessie after she had heard the story. He worked mechanically and well, hoisted up the platform as the chimney grew and had the satisfaction of fitting the top brick before noon. He came down for lunch, looked around for the box, and could not find it.

In vain he pleaded with the others not to hide his lunch for a joke. There was something in it, he insisted, that he could not afford to lose. He took the afternoon off and searched everywhere, even retraced his steps to the boarding house. A dream of happiness had been held before his face only to be taken away. He wondered if he dared tell Bessie.

Instead of a triumphant, happy lover it was a sorry one who called that evening and Bessie was left wondering as to the cause of his grief. For a week he went about his work hoping the missing box would turn up and then, all attempts failing, he confessed.

"We'll have to find it, that's all." The girl, facing him with the business-like air he had always envied, questioned him minutely as to all his movements on the day of the loss.

"And the box, was it that one I gave you last Christmas?" Suddenly her eyes took the light of hope. She was almost afraid of the idea that occurred to her.

"Norton Nodd," said Bessie, "you will have to take me up that chimney tomorrow."

Norton studied her soberly. When Bessie said "have" she meant it.

"All right," he answered. "I'll see you don't fall, but it will be a job getting the rigging up again."

Slowly he pulled the rope which took them up the pile of bricks he had laid so accurately but a week before. Near the top, where he had been working on the day of his misfortune, Bessie gave the signal and progress became even more slow as she tapped each brick with a small hammer. Then she laughed, a sobbing cry of happiness.

"Oh, Norton, here it is. The little red lunch box I gave you, plastered in the chimney like a brick!"

Just as He Feared

Lillie Langtry, "the Jersey Lily," was once staying at the home of Lord Malmesbury, the diplomatist, who was farious as a wit and raconteur.

"One day he discovered me in tears," confides Mrs. Langtry in memoirs. "The Days I Knew," "and I told him that I had written a harmless but indiscreet letter at the writing table in my room, that Mr. Langtry had found it reproduced on the blotting paper and it had made him—to put it mildly—cross."

"The diplomatist expressed sympathy with me, but stormed at his servants, who, he said, had strict orders to renew the blotting paper throughout the house every day to prevent just such a contretemps."—Kansas City Star.

Immense Crowds Greeting Small

Springfield, Ill., March 8.—Increased attendance and enthusiasm marked addresses of Governor Len Small during the week. Large delegations from surrounding towns gathered at the centers in which meetings were held. The week opened with a meeting at Pittsfield on Monday afternoon, attended by more than 3,000, with the crowd waiting patiently nearly three hours due to delay in arrival of the governor or who was detained in Springfield by the first session of the State Certification Board.

Earl C. Smith, president of the Illinois Agricultural Association, urged support for Governor Small on the record of his administration, the position taken being most significant as the pledge of support is the first given by an official of the association to any state candidate. Tuesday afternoon Governor Small addressed a capacity audience at Farmington, and on Wednesday the Community high school at Walnut was unable to accommodate the crowd. Thursday's meeting was held at Ottawa with the promise that LaSalle county will roll up a large majority in the primary. The Brewer-Chevrolet Sales advertises in this issue.

Improved Uniform International Sunday School Lesson

(By REV. P. B. FITZWATER, D.D., Dean Moody Bible Institute of Chicago.) (©, 1923, Western Newspaper Union.)

Lesson for March 18

JESUS TEACHES SINCERITY

LESSON TEXT—Mark 7:1-23.
GOLDEN TEXT—Keep thy heart with all diligence, for out of it are the issues of life.
PRIMARY TOPIC—Obeying God and Our Parents.
JUNIOR TOPIC—Honoring God and Our Parents.
INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—Sincerity in Religion.
YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—Jesus Denounces Formalism.

I. The Emptiness of Formal Worship (vv. 1-7).

The tendency of the human heart is to depart from the life and to choose the mere form which is calculated to express the life. The traditions and customs adopted by men for the temporary help of the spiritual life frequently are crystallized into laws and made to supersede the laws and institutions of God.

- The charge against Christ (v. 2). This was that Christ's disciples ate bread with unwashed hands. The charge was not on the basis of physical uncleanness, but their disregard of custom which was to engage in the thorough washing of the hands before eating, as well as washing the pots and vessels.
- Examples of empty forms (vv. 2-4).
  - Washing of the hands before eating (v. 3). They not only washed their hands often but diligently and intensely.
  - Washing of cups, tables, pots and brazen vessels. The ceremonial washing applied to the vessels as well as the hands.
  - Explanation demanded by the Pharisees (v. 5). They asked Christ to explain why His disciples ignored the tradition of the elders with reference to ceremonial cleansing.
  - Christ's answer (vv. 6, 7). He declared that worship which centered in forms was as empty and meaningless as was lip service where the heart was away from God. This He calls hypocrisy, even such as foretold by Isaiah, the prophet. Men of his day made much of external observance and of religious rites, while their hearts remained unchanged.

II. Making the Word of God of None Effect (vv. 8-13).

- How it may be done (v. 8). It was done by punctiliously observing the precepts of man, such as washing of the hands, pots, etc., while ignoring the commandments of God. This is being done by those who make much of the externalities of religion but at the same time are indifferent to the moral requirements.
- An instance cited (vv. 9-13). The law of God as given by Moses said, "Honor thy father and thy mother, and whoso curseth father or mother, let him die the death: but ye say, if a man shall say to his father or mother, it is Corban, that is to say, a gift, by whatsoever thou mightest be profited by me, he shall be free, and ye suffer him no more to do ought for his father or his mother." The law of God demands of children that they care and provide for parents in their need. According to an accepted tradition among the Jews, if a man should consecrate his goods or possessions to the Lord's service by pronouncing over them the word "Corban," which means "the gift," his goods would be thus dedicated to God, and would not be available for help to his parents. It was possible, therefore, for a man to be enjoying wealth while his parents were in destitution.

III. The Real Source of Defilement and Impurity (vv. 14-23).

- Sin is moral and spiritual. Uncleanness before God is not of the body save as the body is directed by the soul. A man is not defiled by that which enters his mouth but by that which springs out of his soul.
- That which springs out of the heart—the deliberate choice of the will—is the source of defilement (v. 20).
- A list of evils springing out of the heart (vv. 21, 22). The awful list is as follows: Evil thoughts, adulteries, fornications, murders, thefts, covetousness, wickedness, deceit, lasciviousness, an evil eye, blasphemy, pride, foolishness, which all come from within. This catalogue includes every possible form of evil. Every one of them originate in the heart and when they become acts of the will and life they defile the man. It is only when temptations and solicitations lead to indulgence by the deliberate act of the will that they corrupt a man.

Our reporter noticed Joe Craig driving a new manure spreader out of town Wednesday. It is one of the most valuable implements on the farm. He reports covering about ten acres up to this time. He has enough to cover about 40 acres more ground. This is probably as good a fertilizer as limestone.

How Did He Know?

A couple of travelers reached a California village and tried to put up at the only hotel. The proprietor informed them that there wasn't a room to be had. As they turned away in despair, however, he suggested this alternative to them: "One of you guys can come to my room. I think I'll be able to give you a cot there. The other go up to room 33. There's two beds in that room. In one there is a dame. But there are two screens around her bed. Just you crawl into the other bed and she won't mind."

His offer was eagerly accepted but in a few minutes the man who went to room 33 returned in great agitation, "Mine Gott," he said, "That woman in the other bed is dead."

"I know," said the landlord. "But how the devil did you find out?"

An Open Letter

To Champaign County Farm Bureau, Champaign, Illinois.

The following articles appeared in your leaflet under date of March 2, 1928:—

THE PUZZLING WHY

"We wonder why it is going to be necessary to borrow money to pay county bills right away, when ordinarily the county doesn't get tax money until April and May and much of it later than that."

STRETCHING AUTHORITY

"We wonder how it is that a county treasurer can fail to show the Board of Supervisors definitely how much money there is in the county treasury—especially when the Supervisors are supposed to borrow money to fill that lack."

It is possible that above statements may have created a wrong impression in the minds of the uninformed. We will presume that this was not the intention of the articles.

THE FACTS ARE

In 1926 the tax books were completed and delivered to the County Collector beginning February 15th and ending March 2nd. Collections began February 15, 1926, and from that date to and including March 10, 1926, there had been collected the sum of $332,831.98.

In 1927 the tax books were completed and delivered to the County Collector beginning February 19th and ending March 1st. Collections began February 21, 1927 and from that date to and including March 10, 1927, there had been collected the sum of $310,382.37.

In the present year (1928) the tax books have not been completed or delivered to the County Collector and no taxes have been collected.

This should answer "THE PUZZLING WHY."

The paragraph headed "Stretching Authority" seems to be what it is an insinuation—and not a statement of facts.

The Board of Supervisors are advised that the balance in the hands of the County Treasurer available for payment of bills, March 6, 1928, was $3,626.54.

The county tax levy consists of 34 different items or funds, from one of which (General Fund) money may be and is, by order of the County Board, transferred to other funds as the amounts in such funds are insufficient. The Board or the proper committee thereof, must and does know the condition of those funds when such transfers are made.

Chas. W. Dale,
County Treasurer.

His Probable Condition

How's yore livestock coming on, Gap? asked an acquaintance from over beyond Presbyterian Hill.

Well, I'm powerful nigh out of hogs just at present, replied Gap Johnson of Rumpus Ridge.

Don't you feel sorta lonesome?

Soft Soap

He: You are a little Fairy. May I hold you Palmolive?

She: Not on your Lifebuoy. Your head's solid Ivory.

He: This is where I get the Colgate.

She: I Woodbury that joke if I were you.

As Everywhere

A tourist passing through a country village found that his watch had stopped. Seeing a little boy standing outside of the village shop, he went up to him and said: Can you tell me the time, sonny?

Just 12 o'clock, was the reply. Only 12, said the tourist, I thot it was more than that.

It's never more in these parts, sir, answered the boy. It goes up to 12 o'clock and then commences again at 1.
