The Three C's of Credit

Here are the three qualities that determine a man's credit at this bank:

CHARACTER—That's another way of saying honor, and honor is the foundation of banking. We like to do business with men who can be trusted and in whom folks have confidence.

CAPACITY—Can the borrower manage his affairs so as to pay the note when it comes due? Has he the capacity to make the loan profitable?

CAPITAL—The man who has been successful in saving his money and putting it to profitable use has demonstrated that he has something to back up a request for a loan.

A PIONEER LAID TO REST

Allerton, March 17.—Funeral services for Mrs. Hannah Cooper Warters, who died at 11:20 o'clock on Wednesday night, March 14th, were held this afternoon at the Methodist church, with Rev. A. R. Wassell officiating. He was assisted by the local pastor, Rev. C. T. Pilch. The pall bearers were the oldest grandsons in each family and all other grandsons acted as honorary pall bearers and the granddaughters were flower girls. Mrs. Warters was laid beside her husband in Pleasant Ridge cemetery, five miles south of Allerton. The scripture was read from her bible brought here from England. It was printed in 1805.

Mrs. Warters was born in the village of Fimber Yorkshire, England, Aug. 10, 1829, where she spent her girlhood days. On March 16, 1850 she was married to William Warters and a month later they started to America. They left England on a sailing vessel and were over three weeks making the voyage. After landing in New York they took up their westward voyage, coming by river and canal to Beardstown. This voyage also took over three weeks. They then set out overland to a farm near Jacksonville, Ill. They lived here for 22 years and it was here that their 11 children were born.

In 1873 Mr. Warters moved his family to a farm which he had previously purchased, including a several square miles tract of land lying south of Homer. This land was called Broadlands on account of the broad expanse of level land. The tract was owned by two cousins, M. P. and A. E. Ayers of Jacksonville. It was from these men that Ayers township got its name. The towns of Broadlands and Allerton were not built until after the C. and E. I. was put through this territory.

About a mile north of the present village of Broadlands was a large dwelling occupied by E. N. Raynor who was manager of the Ayers land. It was to this home that the new comers came and stayed until they could get to their respective farms.

Practically all of the new settlers came here from the English settlement near Jacksonville. The Warters family was the first of these English emigrants to locate here.

The Warters farm is one mile west of the present village of Allerton.

The house which they built nearly 60 years ago still stands and is in good state of repairs. It had been added to and modernized from time to time, and has since its erection housed some of the Warters family.

Homer, Sidney and Newman furnished the market for these early pioneers. Sidney was a little farther away than the others but got its share of trade because of the grist mill where the farmers got their flour and corn meal.

John Hayes who lived a few miles to the north carried the mail from Homer to the scattered postoffices. One was located on the Ayers headquarters. Another on the Sullivan farm which is now known as the Allerton ranch. Mr. and Mrs. Warters also kept an office where the neighbors came for the few scanty pieces of mail but which meant much to them. The carrier usually made the trip either on horseback or on foot. There were no roads at this time and the old trail from Paris to Champaign passed thru the Warters front yard.

A few schools had been organized and houses erected, but far apart of course. Mr. Warters was an ordained Methodist minister who preached far and near, holding services in school houses, private homes and churches. He was instrumental in organizing several churches. He had the Allerton charge well under way when he died.

There were many hardships experienced in this pioneer life, for the land contained many swamps and in the swamps lurked typhoid fever, malaria, chills, and poisonous snakes. But it also contained its joys for a social gathering meant much to them. The surviving sons tell that this region abounded in wild game and many times they have seen flocks of geese which darkened the sky on account of their vast numbers. And that deer grazed unafraid.

To this pioneer couple 11 children were born, five of whom survive. The deceased are: Mrs. Jane Hodgson, Mrs. Mary Darley, Mrs. Hattie Hodgson, Mrs. Sarah Hodgson, Miss Grace and Matthew. The survivors are John, James and Thomas of Allerton, Joseph of Sidell and William of Philo. Mrs. Warters outlived all her daughters. Her husband died 39 years ago. Thirty-four years ago she moved to the new village of Allerton where she resided until her death.

Twenty-eight years ago she joined a party of friends and made a trip back to England where she spent a few weeks.

Mrs. Warters joined the church while yet a girl and when the Allerton church was organized, she was one of its charter members and attended as long as her health permitted.

Hikes From Illinois To New Jersey; May Lose Both His Feet

Bayonne, N. J., March 20.—"Say, my feet gone dead on me" announced Robert McCrae to the captain in charge at Bayonne police headquarters last night. The man staggered and collapsed. To a police surgeon, McCrae explained he had walked from his home in Belleville, Ill., to Bayonne in search of work.

His feet, he said, lost all feeling several days ago and he had finished his journey with difficulty. He was sent to Bayonne hospital.

At the hospital McCrae's condition was said to be bad and that one or both of his feet might have to be amputated. When told of this McCrae said:

"Mister, them dogs has carried me more'n a thousand miles and I figure to use 'em a lot yet. Don't come around me with no knives. What I need is oatmeal."

CARL ZENKE SUMMONED

Mr. Carl Zenke, one of our prominent and most highly respected citizens passed away at the Jarman hospital, at Tuscola early last Monday morning. The citizens of Broadlands and vicinity were shocked and grieved to hear of his sudden death which was caused by pneumonia.

Funeral rites were held at the late residence last Wednesday morning at 10 o'clock, followed by services at the St. John's Evangelical church at 10:30 o'clock. Rev. E. Busekros, pastor of the church, conducted the services.

A large concourse of sorrowing relatives and friends attended the last sad rites, many having to remain outside during the services. There was a profusion of flowers, attesting the high esteem in which the deceased was held.

Music was furnished by a sextet composed of Mesdames Emil Schumacher, Philip Limp, Frank Frick, Miss Florence Schumacher, Messrs. Henry Kilian, Jr. and Adolph Bretz, with Mrs. E. Busekros presiding at the piano. The pallbearers were Messrs. Fred Messman, Henry Messman, Carl Benschneider, Henry Kilian, Jr., Philip Limp, and Arnold Smith. Interment was made in the St. John's Evangelical cemetery.

The following obituary was read at the funeral:

Carl Zenke, born May 17, 1846 in Darsov Kraiss Stob Pommerin, Germany, son of Carl and Augusta Zenke, came to this country in the year 1872. He first settled in Champaign, Illinois. On the first of May, 1876 he was united in the holy bonds of wedlock with Miss Mary Dohme of Tolono, Illinois. In 1878 they moved to their farm near Broadlands and resided there until the year 1903, when they took up their residence in Broadlands.

He was baptised and confirmed in the Christian faith and remained throughout life a loyal follower of Christ. He was one of the founders of St. John's Evangelical church.

He was one of the pioneers of this country and we shall miss him deeply, for he has made himself a place in the hearts of young and old.

Of the five children born to their union, one son, Alfred, preceded him in death, passing beyond in 1897. And one brother, John, who died about 25 years ago, awaits him on the other shore.

He leaves to mourn his loss: his loving wife; three sons, Alvin and William of Broadlands, Roy of Danville; and one daughter, Mrs. Alma Baum of Chicago; three sisters, Mrs. Minnie Reusk and Mrs. Bertha Rater of Chicago, and Mrs. Augusta Keuschel of Detroit, Mich.; six grandchildren and a host of friends.

They had spent the winter months at Hot Springs, but he was anxious to come home. They were on their way when sickness overtook him in St. Louis, on Thursday night of last week. A doctor and a nurse declared last Friday morning that he was well, and he said too, he was feeling well. They continued their way home but another siege of illness overtook him on the train. And in its nature it became so serious that his good wife persuaded him to get off the train at Tuscola and rest at the hospital there. And it was there on Monday morning at 3:15 that the Angel of Death spread her mantle over him. And now he has gone home.

Small's Road Record Defies Enemies Attack

One of our weekly contemporaries endeavors to belittle the good roads work of Governor Small by stating that "any business man could have built the roads, with a smaller outlay of money."

This reminds us that William Wordsworth once intimated to a group of his cronies that anyone could have written Shakespeare's plays if he had the mind. And the reply of Samuel Johnson, the Jim Reed of that day: "It's too bad, William, that you did not have the mind."

The road issue appears to us the most futile weapon of the Governor's enemies. There is no denying the facts in the case. The roads are here to speak for themselves.

The hard highways of Illinois are of comparatively recent development. Before them the mud—soft, slippery, gooey, impassable. Mud—and an undeveloped country. And that mud has been inseparably identified with Illinois traffic from immemorial.

Now we learn that during all these years any business man could have replaced all this mud with good roads. The natural question is, why didn't some one do it? Insofar as we have been able to ascertain, Len Small has never claimed a copyright on his road building ideas. But it was only after he put his plans into operation that road building in Illinois really moved forward.

Looking on, impartially, we cannot help thinking the anti-Small forces have picked a puerile issue when they attack the Governor's good road record.

Democratic Chairman Predicts Small Nomination

Springfield, Ill., March 22nd—Thomas F. Donovan, of Joliet, chairman of the Democratic state central committee, who has completed a tour of the state, predicts the renomination of Governor Small in the April primaries.

"During the last week, I had occasion to visit a number of downstate districts," says Mr. Donovan. "While Secretary of State Louis L. Emmerson is strong in certain sections, Governor Small is running ahead of him. The Small group always has been organized and is functioning perfectly."

Bongard Elevator Destroyed By Fire

Philo, Ill., March 19.—The south Bongard elevator, seven miles southeast of here, burned early Sunday morning, causing a loss of $10,000 or more. Grain valued at $2,000 was destroyed. Origin of the fire is unknown.

The fire was discovered about 1 o'clock by William Mooney, manager, who lives near the elevator. Neighbors were called and by throwing water on the roof of the north elevator, it was saved. The engine room of the north building was destroyed. The loss is partially covered by insurance.

Dam Disaster Toll Reaches Total of 449

Los Angeles, March 19.—The total loss of life in the St. Francis dam disaster was computed today at 449 persons—272 known dead and 177 missing and believed to have perished.

While the search for the dead continued, with an army of more than 100 motor tractors being used to tear through the big piles of debris, authorities in the stricken zone decided to confine their efforts only to reclaimable land. Debris on the unreclaimable area occupied by the old bed of the Santa Clara river will be burned.

The huge fires will serve as funeral pyres for an unknown number of dead. Authorities said it would be impossible to put a large enough force at work to recover the bodies on the unreclaimable land within a reasonable length of time, and that with the available organization the process would require so much time that the purpose of seeking them will be defeated.

Chinese Kill 51 To Repay Nanking Acts

London, March 19.—The Manchester guardian received a dispatch from Shanghai today which said the Chinese Nationalist government had announced the execution of 51 Chinese soldiers and Nanking bandits, responsible for the famous Nanking incident last spring, which led to anti-Foreign demonstrations.

A warrant has been issued for Lin Chu-han, former director of the Nationalist army's political department, who is accused of having instigated the plot to rob and murder foreigners at Nanking, the dispatch, added.

And what have you been drawing Mary?

Mary replied: Please teacher I tried to draw you, but it wasn't right, so I put a tail to it and made it a sheep.

My Project Story

I selected a ten acre piece of ground which was to raise my corn. Because the plot contained a good stand of timothy I was forced to let it stand over for pasture. Next I selected another ten acres of the farm which was new sod ground. After I had prepared the seed-bed the long period of wet weather presented itself. As this piece was on low ground it remained under water or unworkable until the middle of June. I knew that I could not raise corn if it was planted this late.

On the highest portion of the farm there were approximately ten acres of corn which had not been drowned out; therefore I decided to gather the data concerning this plot and take it as my project.

This ground was broken during the latter part of March. After much more winter weather had come and gone the ground dried and warmed enough to be planted in corn which was about May 15th.

When the shoots appeared above the ground they did not grow well. During this time the grass and weeds grew normally. As the ground was very hard the plants grew slowly, so I cultivated it with a flat shovel cultivator as soon as possible. This first cultivator loosened the ground and killed most of the weeds. Three or four days later I crossed the corn. My corn now grew very rapidly which I think was due mostly to loosening of the soil. I did not lay the corn by until three weeks later. We did not have very good nights for corn growing but each morning I could see a difference in the height of the plants.

Just after the corn was past roasting ear stage I cut off the tassels just above the connection of the shank with the stock and fed them to the cattle as green feed. They were very fond of this feed and were restless each day until fed.

I noticed that the corn which was topped in this manner matured and dried out ahead of the rest.

After the corn was husked I found that it yielded forty-six bushels per acre.

Two things that I learned from this project are: one, corn will not grow well in a hard seed bed and, two, the plants can be topped to an advantage.

Charles Schwartz.

Longview To Build

According to reports the village of Longview will enjoy a building boom in the business district this spring, which should add much to the appearance of its main street.

Clarence Churchill will erect a new store building on the vacant lot next to the bank building. This will consist of a grocery and meat market and will be occupied by Jim Hart.

The Longview Lumber company will build next to the store, which will be used as a hardware store. This will complete the north side of main street.

This will be a great improvement as the blacksmith shop is the only building standing on the south side of the street since the fire destroyed the T. M. Sullivan grocery, John Peden barber shop, Mark Allen meat market, and Charles Hopkins poultry house.

If you prefer a "one-sided" car we haven't got what you want. But if value comes first, you'll choose an All-American Six.

For here is style attained only in bodies by Fisher. Long, low lines. Smart colors. Grace, poise and swank. Here is size that results from 117 inches of wheelbase... and from Fisher construction famed for scientific distribution of space.
