Assessors Get Their Instructions

Geo. E. Walker, assessor for Ayers township, was in Urbana last Friday afternoon attending a meeting of the assessors of the county with County Treasurer Dale. This year's work of assessing began on Monday.

In assessing household goods the assessors will assess radios and frigidaire plants separately.

All schedules are to be signed by the owner of the property or his agent to save disputes afterward.

Corn is to be assessed at 70c; wheat at $1; soy beans, $1; oats 40c; best of beef cattle 10c and others lower; cows $40; hogs 7c; mules $40; sheep $8; horses $40.

Corn, and so on, is assessed at 100 per cent and cut in half for taxation. In other words, corn is assessed at 70 cents per bushel, but the basis of taxation is 35c.

Buildings on leased ground are to be assessed as personal property and the improvement is not to be charged against the lot. This holds true with many elevators and oil stations.

Jackie Coogan In "Buttons"

Jackie Coogan—adventurer on the high seas!

This is the latest role of the screen's most famous child—or perhaps one can't just call him a child any more—as he plays a "near grown up" role in his newest picture which appears at the Broadlands opera house on Saturday night, April 7.

Jackie is a page or bellboy on a great transatlantic liner, in a remarkable combination of adventure, thrills, and a very human heart interest story running through it. Staged in a spectacular manner, it is perhaps the most pretentious offering Jackie has given the screen in some time.

As a boy, on the threshold of a career in the British Merchant Marine, worshipping his ship and the captain with an adulation hard to describe, but always seen in the service, he has a truly remarkable role. The thrilling wreck, the rescue at sea, and other details of the play, blended with some comedy, all surround a gripping heart-interest story that is the central theme of the big picture.

Road Building Is Big Achievement
Of Len Small

The big thing which Len Small has done in his terms as governor of the state of Illinois, is the carrying out of the biggest hard road program which any state in the union has dared attempt. Under his supervision more than 5,300 of the 6,675 miles of state highways now enjoyed in the state have been built, without a single cent of direct taxation.

In designating roads over the state the governor has shown an impartial attitude. Advocates of a particular route for a state highway have been given the opportunity to present their claims. The route serving the greatest number has always been ordered.

Mainly Governor Small's whole effort has been to get the main arteries built first, and when this was done, to connect them with laterals, having in mind always that finally every village and hamlet in the state will have a connection with the arterial highways which will allow them contact with all other sections of the state.

Re-nomination and re-election of Len Small as governor of Illinois for another four years will keep in operation the greatest road building department of any state in the union, and insure the early completion of the state highway program, with all of the interests of the general public safeguarded as in the past.

O'Neal Should Be Nominated

With but a short time remaining until the April primary, the Republican voters are becoming more convinced that the party needs the strongest man possible nominated for the office of sheriff. The sentiment seems to be strong that W. B. O'Neal is the man who should be named to make the race on that ticket. His record as a deputy proves that he is a man who can be relied upon at all times and his honesty and integrity has never been questioned. He has always been fair and square in all his dealings and has never faltered when it came to a question of enforcing the law.

A visit down in the southwest part of the county, in the community where Mr. O'Neal resided for so many years, reveals the high esteem in which he is held by those who know him best. These people do not hesitate to endorse Mr. O'Neal, for they regard him as the man who will fill the office of sheriff in a manner that will bring general satisfaction.

A little history of Mr. O'Neal might not be amiss. He and his wife came to this county and to the country around Sadorus 39 years ago this month. During this period of years he also moved to Sadorus where he served for two terms as village president and in church work has taken an active part, as well as for civic and moral uplift.

Mr. O'Neal was raised on a farm and spent practically his entire life farming until he moved to Champaign. He served two years as president of the Champaign County Farmer's Institute and also for two years was treasurer of this organization. Some two score years ago when the saloons left the Twin Cities Mr. O'Neal was then president of the Champaign County Law Enforcement organization. He is a charter member of the Farm Bureau.

As a married man, he has been a pal to his two sons and a companion to his three daughters. One son served during the World War as a lieutenant of artillery.

In fraternal circles he ranks high among the Masons and for years has been a leader in the Woodman fraternity; besides he says he is a Republican and belongs to the Methodist church, in which he has been an ardent active worker, for 20 odd years, and at present belongs to the Men's Bible Class of the First M. E. Church in Champaign, said to be the largest class of men in Champaign county.

With these qualifications there can be no doubt but that Mr. O'Neal will make a good sheriff. One thing you can be assured of and that is that everyone will get a square deal. The voters will make no mistake by nominating Mr. O'Neal for his election is then assured.

Many Birds Kill
Selves On Highways

Hard roads have spelled suicide for many birds, Dr. F. C. Baker, curator of the natural history museum at the University of Illinois, Monday noon, told members of the Exchange club in their regular weekly luncheon meeting.

When wet, the hard-surfaced pavements closely resemble a stream of water and the birds, mistaking the shining strip for a creek or a river, fly into it only to dash their brains out on the concrete. Thus, many of the dead birds seen along the highway have come to their end thru self destruction and not at the hands of some speeding automobile, he added.

A Reminder

A colored preacher was vehemently denouncing the sins of his congregation. "Bredern an' sistern, Ah warns yo' 'gainst de heinous sin ob shootin' craps! Ah charges yo' 'gainst de black rascality of liftin' pullets. But, above all else, bredern an' sistern, Ah demolishes yo' 'gainst de crime of melon stealin'."

A brother in the back seat made an odd sound with his lips, rose and snapped his fingers. Then he sat down again with an abashed look.

"Whuffo', my fren', said the parson, sternly, does yo' r'ar up an' snap yo' fingers when Ah speaks of melon-stealin'?"

"Yo' jes' remind's me, parson, the man in the back seat answered, meekly, whar Ah lef' mah knife."

POOREST DENTAL BUILDING

U. of I. Dental Faculty the Finest but Work Retarded by Lamentable Building.

"Perhaps the finest faculty but undoubtedly the poorest building," is the characterization that has been applied to the University of Illinois College of Dentistry in Chicago.

Unlike other studies, almost individual instruction is essential in dentistry and so we find an average of only ten students to each instructor and each of the instructors thoroughly competent, in this branch of the state university. There are 72 members on the faculty and 136 students. Of course, part of this number of instructors are part-time dentists who maintain a private practice that takes up a part of their time, but the full-time staff is sufficient to maintain the class average mentioned.

During the past year 3,375 patients were examined in the dental infirmary of the school. Of this number 2,774 were given treatment for cavities. There were 1,944 amalgam fillings put in, 983 cements, 1,033 gold foils and 913 inlays making a total of 3,857 fillings of the various kinds mentioned.

In the orthodontia division, the division where crooked teeth are straightened, a total of 82 patients were handled and 150 consultations held and examinations made. There were 681 crowns and bridges made and 349 plates fitted.

More than 3,500 therapeutic treatments were given during the year and 3,880 patients handled by the radiology department. This department took 11,400 X-ray films, made 23 lantern slides, exposed 620 negatives and made 230 prints of various kinds.

IMPROVE MEDICAL TEACHING

Methods Overtaken in Past Decade—Future Doctors Are Better Equipped.

Perhaps in no university groups have the changes of the recent decades been more sweeping than in the medical colleges of the country, of which the University of Illinois College of Medicine is a brilliant example.

Twenty years ago they represented little more than halls where immense groups of poorly prepared students sat through hours of weary lectures—where actual demonstrations were scanty and laboratories nonexistent—where quizzes prepared the student to answer stereotyped questions in a parrotlike fashion. Today groups of industrious clinicians and investigators demonstrate patients with the common diseases, carefully studying patients with more rare conditions, instructing students at the bedside, taking them into the laboratories, working with them in the out-patient department. Twenty years ago, the medical student prided himself on his rowdiness. Today he is a hard-working well-prepared young man with high ideals, eager to advance his profession.

Of course, the professional work is harder. There is more work for the instructor, and much more is demanded of the student. Only the best equipped mentally should today seek a medical career. The state has no money to waste on dullards, the teachers no time to waste on slackers.

State Bodies Join to Combat Disease

Taxpayers' Safety Assured by Co-operation; Sick Poor Benefited.

In Illinois there are several organizations, supported by public funds, which are working for the sanitary safety of the state. The more important ones are the Department of Public Health, the Department of Public Welfare, and the University of Illinois College of Medicine. No one who has given consideration to the problem of housing and caring for the sick poor of the state can escape the conclusion that by uniting the state medical agencies in a greater organization the study of the sources of these streams of human wreckage which threaten to submerge the commonwealth will be better and more efficiently done.

These two great state medical agencies, the Department of Public Welfare and the University of Illinois College of Medicine, which had hitherto worked independently, and in many respects duplicated each other's work, realized several years ago that it would be highly advantageous for them to consolidate and differentiate. This consolidation not only would effect a great saving for the taxpayers of the state, but also would assure the public that the best medical and surgical skill would be available for the care of the sick poor of the state. The work of this group will not interfere in any way with that of the practicing physician.

On the fifth day of July, 1919, the State Department of Public Welfare and the State University agreed to a plan of co-operation and differentiation, with the following objects in view: To construct and maintain a great group of hospitals and institutes in the medical center of Chicago, where laboratories, libraries and medical skill can be readily obtained; to provide medical treatment for the indigent sick of the state; to give young men and women medical education and training, such that they will become active soldiers in the warfare for the prevention as well as the cure of disease; to help practicing physicians of the state to keep in touch with the latest and best methods of preventing and curing human ailments; to tell the people of the state how to keep themselves physically efficient. The greatest object is to find and check at their sources the streams of human wreckage which are overflowing the hospitals, asylums, and prisons of the state.

As a result of this agreement, a co-operative project—one of the greatest of its kind in the world—was launched and a portion of the buildings are already in use just south of Cook County hospital in Chicago. While this group is far from completed, it is already doing great work in three different lines of endeavor:

1. The cure of patients.
2. Instruction of students.
3. Scientific investigations into the cause and cure of disease with a view to its prevention and more effective remedy.

In these hospitals patients receive the best care the medical staff can give. In order to cure them promptly, and their symptoms are being studied with a view to accumulating knowledge which will prevent the recurrence of the disease, and also enlarge the knowledge of possible cures of particular ailments.

The facilities at the disposal of the University for the treatment of patients and the instruction of students have been considerably increased by the facilities offered in these hospitals. The field of study in preventive medicine includes surgery, general medicine, obstetrics and gynecology. The directors of research in co-operation with the heads of the present clinical departments are in charge of the hospital work.

Some of the heads of the investigational divisions or directors of research are appointed on part-time. This was thought necessary partly because of the difficulty of getting men, on full-time at salaries which would be justified in a state university, partly because, in the opinion of some good judges, the experiment of full-time clinical men has not been altogether successful elsewhere; and partly because that is one of the conditions that had to be met to get the men wanted.

LENGTHEN PHARMACY COURSE

Three Years Required Under New Rule to Graduate; Makes Better School.

Three years, instead of two as formerly required, will have been spent in obtaining degrees by those who in June will graduate from the University of Illinois School of Pharmacy, located in Chicago. When the first class under this new ruling is graduated in June it will mark the crest of the efforts of the officials of the school to place it in a position where it cannot be surpassed by any school of similar type in the country, according to its dean, William B. Day.

A yearning for a more concise knowledge of their profession and the need of training their clerks to take some of the work of filling prescriptions off their shoulders, led a number of Chicago druggists to found the Chicago College of Pharmacy, the first west of the Allegheny mountains, which later became the University of Illinois School of Pharmacy. The school was incorporated September 5, 1859, making the fourth school of pharmacy in the United States, the other three being in the East. The first class, consisting of two students, was graduated in 1861. At the present, the school is the only one of its type in the state of Illinois. In June, 1927, 621 students were graduated and the present enrollment is approximately 25 per cent higher than last year.

WILLIAM Z. BLACK

Primary Tuesday, April 10, 1928

To The Voters of Champaign County:

The principal reason advanced by my opponent in his campaign is that I have held this office two terms and that "It should be passed around." I believe in meeting issues frankly and squarely. Is this a logical reason as applied to an office such as that of State's Attorney where a man only becomes proficient by years of actual experience and training in the criminal law? While I was elected as a Republican and am a firm believer in the principles of that party, yet I have never looked upon that office as merely a 'political job' to be passed around. What incentive is there for a man in a public office that demands a high degree of skill to expend his effort and energy in becoming skillful in his work if he is to be discharged when he reaches that point?

If this same reasoning is followed to its logical conclusion, then the instructors and professors in the University of Illinois would be discharged when they became proficient in their particular lines of work and of value to that institution. Would the public schools long remain a force for good in a community if it were the practice to discharge the teachers simply because some one believes their positions should be passed around?

In submitting my candidacy to the people at this time I simply ask the voters, if they are not already familiar with my work, to inquire of any man or woman, either Republican or Democrat, who has observed my work, whether he or she believes I have honestly, fairly and efficiently handled that office. I have endeavored to conduct prosecutions fairly yet vigorously. The record of convictions, I believe, will show that I have succeeded. Many cases of the utmost importance to this community have been successfully prosecuted in our courts in the last eight years.

WOULD PREVENT DISEASE

Keep People Well Rather Than Cure Them After They Become Ill.

The prevention of disease is now receiving greater emphasis than ever before. It would be impossible to enumerate the many factors which have brought this about, but there are some which stand in the foreground.

Our minds are filled with terror as we recall the fearful plague which swept over the world in the form of influenza and its companion, pneumonia. A writer in the London Times states that in less than four months the total number of deaths reached about 6,000,000; in India alone 3,000,000 deaths occurred. It is estimated that the World War in four and one-half years was responsible for 20,000,000 deaths. The same writer estimates that this plague would have taken upward of 80,000,000 lives in the same length of time.

Just as medical science worked away on diphtheria, malaria, typhoid fever, typhus fever, smallpox, yellow fever and bubonic plague until these diseases were controlled or eliminated, so it now realizes that it must do everything within the range of human power to intercept the recurrence of this tidal wave of death.

There is a growing recognition by people generally that efficiency is largely a question of health, and that health conservation, therefore, becomes a matter of public concern. Our greatest statesmen, sociologists, physicians and others have repeatedly voiced this sentiment.

Irving Fisher, one of our greatest living authorities on infant mortality, says that out of 300,000 deaths of infants, 47 per cent, nearly one-half, might have been prevented if the laws of hygiene, as known today, had been observed. He adds that the science of disease prevention, if properly applied, will add 15 years to the average human life. Scientists have not widely erred in assuming that the normal life cycle of man should be not less than 90 to 100 years.

It costs no more to raise a man capable of reaching this age, than it does to grow one who has not the capacity of living to be forty years old. The medical profession has reached a point where it realizes that its work has scarcely begun.

Sanitation and care of the sick and infirm were duties which the practicing physician assumed in the earlier days; but the burden of caring for the sick poor, the insane and the criminal, gradually became so great that community sanatoriums, hospitals, asylums and prisons were established. From these beginnings, there has developed a large number of state and municipal institutions for the care of the poor who are physically or mentally ill.

Farm Researches Pay Big Returns

Wealth Which State Nets From Tests Exceeds U. of I. Costs.

More wealth has accrued to Illinois through the teachings and investigations of the agricultural experiment station of the University of Illinois College of Agriculture than the whole university has cost the state, it is estimated by H. W. Mumford, director of the station and dean of the agricultural college. More than 200 separate investigations of a wide variety of farm problems are in progress at the present time and hundreds have been completed during the 42 years of the station's history, each investigation yielding its share of useful and valuable new truths.

Wheat, one of the state's principal crops, furnishes one of the many pieces of concrete evidence which could be cited to show the value of the station's findings and teachings. Money paid to Illinois farmers for this grain is short by about $144,000 annually because one-fifth of the crop, or about 7,200,000 bushels, is a mixture of both hard red winter and soft red winter wheat and consequently brings an average of two cents a bushel less than pure hard or pure soft wheat.

Obviously, this additional $144,000 annually would go into the pockets of the state's farmers if only those varieties of wheat were grown which have proved the best yielding and milling kinds in extensive variety comparisons made by the experiment station. Using the results of these comparisons as a basis, farmers in a community or in an area tributary to the same local marketing point could agree upon one type of wheat and then all grow that kind.

It is unfair, however, even to attempt an estimate of the financial value of such scientific discoveries in the light of what is revealed in the history of research. Director Mumford points out. Even the most significant experiment sometimes yields returns running into the hundreds of millions of dollars. A case in point is found in the work of the French botanist, Millardet.

In 1883, he was studying a fungous disease of the grape, or the "vine," as they call it in France. He had some trouble keeping the boys from stealing the grapes. To scare them away he sprinkled on the vines a mixture of copper and lime. This made a bluish coating on the leaves and fruit which the boys thought was poison. Naturally, they let the grapes alone.

What was even more surprising to Millardet, however, was the fact that the leaves and the fruit on which he had sprinkled the copper and lime mixture were free from the disease which he was studying, while the parts not treated were destroyed. This led to the discovery that a dilute solution of the copper destroyed the fungus causing the disease without in any way injuring the fruit or the vine.

From this discovery of Millardet has been developed the modern knowledge of Bordeaux mixture and its uses in controlling fungous diseases of fruits, vegetables and plants in general, saving hundreds of millions of dollars annually.

The University of Illinois agricultural experiment station has its modern experiments with grapes. It has in addition hundreds of other studies dealing with the maintenance or improvement of soil fertility, the best combinations of feeds to produce maximum profits, effective prevention of the many plant and animal diseases, the best combinations of farm enterprises to bring the most profitable returns, the marketing of farm products, and the grades and grading of farm products.

What the ultimate financial value of these will be to the state of Illinois or what the results of these studies will mean to farmers of the state can no more be foretold than Millardet could have predicted back in 1883 that the sham poison which he put on his grapes to keep away the boys would lead to the discovery and development of a spray which has meant millions of dollars in the control of plant diseases.

Early Engineering Research

Credit for conceiving the idea that resulted in the first Engineering Experiment station, not only at the University of Illinois, but the entire United States as well, is due Prof. L. P. Breckenridge, at the time head of the Mechanical Engineering department of that institution, who, through his individual efforts, backed up by the support of President Draper, induced the legislature to appropriate $150,000 for that purpose. On December 8, 1903, the University of Illinois Engineering Experiment station became a reality with Professor Breckenridge at its head.

The Three C's of Credit

Here are the three qualities that determine a man's credit at this bank:

CHARACTER—That's another way of saying honor, and honor is the foundation of banking. We like to do business with men who can be trusted and in whom folks have confidence.

CAPACITY—Can the borrower manage his affairs so as to pay the note when it comes due? Has he the capacity to make the loan profitable?

CAPITAL—The man who has been successful in saving his money and putting it to profitable use has demonstrated that he has something to back up a request for a loan.

Lesson for April 8

THE RESURRECTION OF JESUS CHRIST (EASTER LESSON)

LESSON TEXT—Mark 16:1-20.

GOLDEN TEXT—Because I live ye shall live also.

PRIMARY TOPIC—Jesus Comes to Life Again.

JUNIOR TOPIC—Christ Rises from the Grave.

INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—Jesus, Our Living Leader.

YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—The Power of the Resurrection.

I. The Ministry of Love (vv. 1-4).

1. By whom (v. 1). Mary Magdalene, the mother of James and Salome. They brought sweet spices with which to anoint Him.

2. When? (v. 2). Early in the morning of the first day of the week.

3. Their perplexity (vv. 3, 4). They questioned as to who should roll away the large stone from the mouth of the tomb. To their surprise they found the stone removed.

II. The Angel in the Tomb (vv. 5-8).

Jesus knew that these women would come to the sepulcher with perplexed and unbelieving hearts so He had an angel waiting there to announce to them the fact of His resurrection. Note the angel's message:

1. "Be not afraid" (v. 6).

2. "Ye seek Jesus of Nazareth who was crucified" (v. 6). This threefold designation with marvelous clearness shows (1) His humanity—Jesus. (2) Lowly residence—Nazareth. (3) Ignominious death—crucified.

3. "He is risen; He is not here. Behold the place where they laid Him" (v. 6). These words throw light upon His birth, humility and shameful death. He who was born in lowly circumstances and suffered the shameful death on the cross, is now the conqueror of death. His resurrection gives meaning to His death.

"If Christ be not risen your faith is vain, ye are yet in your sins" (1 Cor. 15:17).

4. "Go your way, tell His disciples and Peter" (v. 7). As soon as it was known that Christ was risen from the dead they were to tell it to the disciples. The disciples all needed this blessed news, but Peter especially, since He had utterly denied Him.

5. "He goeth before you into Galilee, there shall ye see Him" (v. 7). Christ had told the disciples that He would rise from the dead and meet them in Galilee, but their unbelief kept them from this blessed truth.

III. The Appearances of the Risen Christ (vv. 9-14).

These appearances had as their object the restoration of the disciples from their awful failure and discouragement and convincing them without a peradventure of a doubt of Christ's resurrection. Since His resurrection was to be the central theme of apostolic preaching, it was necessary that they have a certainty of knowledge as to this matter (Acts 1:3). Without the resurrection of Christ His death would be meaningless. Out of the ten or more appearances, Mark selects three.

1. To Mary Magdalene (vv. 9-11). Mary's heart responded to the Savior who had graciously delivered her from demons. Her sufferings were no doubt terrible. She was first at the tomb; her devotion was amply rewarded by being first to meet the risen Lord. Though her faith was weak she went at once and told the story to the disciples.

2. To two disciples on the way to Emmaus (vv. 12, 13). Luke gives full particulars concerning this appearance (Luke 24:13-25). Jesus had walked, talked and eaten with them.

3. The eleven disciples (v. 14). Christ appeared to them while sitting at meat and reproved them for their unbelief. The fact that they steadfastly resisted the testimony that Christ had risen, and yet afterward were willing to risk their lives in the proclamation of this truth proves the genuineness of their faith.

IV. The Commission of the Risen Lord (vv. 15-18).

After the disciples were convinced of the truth of His resurrection, Christ sent them forth to "preach the gospel to every creature." What a glorious and supreme task is this. What a blessed issue to those who believe and how awful to them that believe not. "He that believeth and is baptized shall be saved, but he that believeth not shall be damned" (v. 16).

V. The Activity of the Enthroned Christ (vv. 19, 20).

After giving the disciples their commission He ascended on high and from the unseen sphere directed their activities. Wherever they went He confirmed their word. He does the same for His disciples today.

Our Thoughts

We should manage our thoughts as shepherds do their flowers in making a garland; first, select the choicest, and then dispose them in the most proper places, that every one may reflect a part of its color and brightness on the next.—Samuel Taylor Coleridge.

The Presence of God

L. G. Coonrod, Democratic Candidate For Legislature

Mr. Coonrod is a native of Champaign County, his parents being early settlers. He was born in 1884 and graduated from the Philo High School 1901. He went to Chicago where he was employed as bank clerk for four years, then to Danville where he was employed in similar work for six years. He then went to Savoy, where he was married and where he now resides. He has four children.

He is now and has for the past eight years been advertising and employment manager of the F. K. Robeson Store of Champaign.

He has been one of the most active Democrats of Champaign County for many years, being a member of the Democratic County Committee for the past 14 years and is now Chairman of that body. His party activities have extended all over the 19th Congressional district and he is well and favorably known among Democratic State and district leaders.

Mr. Coonrod has three opponents and he has the highest personal regard for every one of them as they are all his friends.

Mr. Coonrod seeks one of the two Democratic nominations for Representative on the basis of service to the party and his ability to hold the job. He has no time to make a personal canvass, but asks serious consideration of his candidacy on the part of the Democratic voters.

To the Voters of the Twenty-fourth Senatorial District

I am a candidate for representative in the Legislature. I respectfully submit my candidacy upon the basis of my record in the past. I have tried to be independent, honest and conscientious; I have not been partisan or factional, or governed by personal prejudices or animosities.

I trust I merit in some degree the comment of the Legislative Voters League in which the league says of me: "Is ending his fourth term during which he showed that same ability and fidelity that have characterized him throughout his legislative career; a level headed and highly courageous man who has given the public exceptionally fine services."

My only pledge for the future is that I shall try my best to so represent this district as to be worthy of the confidence of the voters.

Respectfully,
Roger F. Little.

Longview High School News

Dr. Rowen Gives Talk And Demonstration

On Thursday morning of last week Dr. O. T. Rowen, local veterinarian was kind enough to come to the high school and demonstrate the methods of performing post-mortem examination and the cauponizing of males before the Animal Husbandry class.

Two affected birds were "post-ed" or examined and the results were very interesting as well as instructive for the 12 boys who were present. An infestation of tape worms was found in one and the other bird was suffering from fowl cholera.

After this a cauponizing demonstration was made and all questions answered which the boys raised. Instruction of this type is far more valuable than that in which text books are used entirely and it is the kind which the Agriculture Department of this school is attempting to promote.

Longview High School Students Entertained

On Friday morning of last week four persons, two men and two women, representing the Kingham Temple of Music in Danville came to Longview Twp. H. S. and presented the following musical program:

Piano solo—Mrs. Blanche England.

Contralto solos—Mrs. Kingham, "A Bowl of Roses," and "His Buttons Are Marked U. S."

Baritone solos—Mr. Mayer, "A Desert Song," and "Duna."

Piano solo—Mrs. England, "Echoes of Spring."

Duet, contralto and tenor—Mrs. Kingham and Mr. Mayer, "The Rosary."

The object of the visit was of course to advertise the music store in Danville, but the students enjoyed the program and it helped to increase their ability to appreciate good music.

Agriculture Club Father-Son Banquet

Friday evening at 7:30 last week there was assembled an aggregation of 50 fathers and sons in the Longview H. S. gymnasium for the purpose of holding a father-son banquet. The senior girls in cooking prepared the meal which was served by the girls in the 4-H club. The high school orchestra and the Ag. Club quartet furnished music.
