Second Southern Illinois Man To Run

If Louis L. Emmerson is elected governor of Illinois in November, and no doubt he will be by an overwhelming majority, he will be the second native son of Southern Illinois to sit in the executive chair, and the fourth governor born in the State. Although the first five governors of the State were elected from southern Illinois counties, all of them were born in other states. Mr. Emmerson not only was born in Illinois himself but his forbears have been native to the the state for several generations. The Emmersons came to Illinois in 1817 and were neighbors of the colony of hardy Englishmen led by Morris Birkbeck and Geo. and Richard Flower, who settled in Edwards County shortly after the Revolutionary war. They helped to convert the wild prairies around Albion into fertile farms and blooming orchards. A grandfather of Mr. Emmerson was county judge of Edwards County and his father was a sheriff.

Mr. Emmerson, however, began his career by going to Mt. Vernon when 21 years of age and entering the mercantile business. He has made Mt. Vernon his home ever since. He is president of the Third National Bank of that city, which he founded more than a quarter of a century ago, and is interested in a number of other Jefferson County enterprises.

Ask Your Banker

If you believe that you could have been one of the 300 millionaires made by the frenzied stock market in the last few weeks just forget it. One of the regretable results of the stock market jumping off the market page to the front page of every newspaper in the country will be the pouring of life savings into a chance to get rich quick.

Stories of fabulous gains made by fortunate speculators, will lead thousands who ordinarily leave the market alone, who know nothing of its machinery or its iron jaws, to take a plunge and never come to the surface again.

The stock market is a business of its own and is no place for the man of small means who knows nothing about that business. Experts in the stock exchange find the market a tricky affair. It is risky for the man with money, who knows something of its grief, it is the greatest gamble for the uninitiated little fellow. There is one chance in thousands that you may double your money.

If you do not have money to speculate and lose, leave speculative stocks to the speculator. If you have some savings to invest, talk to your banker.

Spring Suits at Sensational Savings

2000 Suits at 35% to 50% Reductions

Beginning Thursday, May 3, the greatest value in fine, men's suits ever presented in Champaign at a price will be offered to the public.

Details and explanations of this fortunate occurrence may be found at the bottom of this page.

This opportune offering will save you 35% to 50%. Jos. Kuhn & Company's reputation makes good this, as well as any other promise.

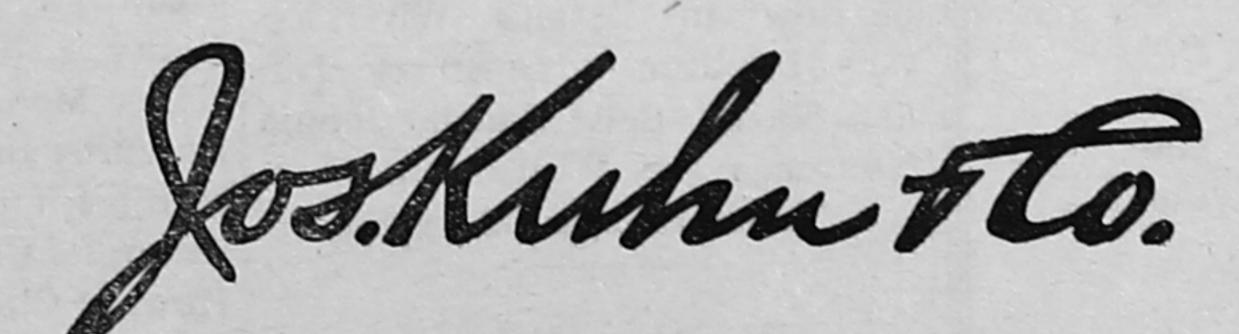

Over two thousand brand new spring suits of the latest materials will be placed in six price divisions---

We don't like to make this sensational, but anyone who appreciates values will realize that it is hard to put in print such an unusual value-giving as we promise you in this range of different groups.

These suits are all of high class tailoring, made up in both young men's and semi-staple styles. The patterns and woolens run from the very newest shades to the more subdued and plain designs. In other words, no more remarkable selection of just the wantable in all that is new could be gathered together than this choice exhibition of all the latest and best in men's suits. We believe many people will be glad for this opportunity to buy more than one suit. We know the saving is worth your while.

Suspenders and belts will not be given gratis with these suits, but will be sold at half price to those wishing them. In other words, a $1.00 belt or pair of suspenders may be had for 50c; a regular 50c belt or pair of suspenders may be bought for 25c. These suits are going to be sold at such a close margin that we cannot afford to give anything free except the alterations.

33-35-37 Main Street, Champaign

The Occurrence

A strong, appealing message from a high class Eastern manufacturer, urging us to come East, caused us to send our buyer. This particular manufacturer was overloaded with woolens and had heavy payments to make to his bank where he had about all the credit he could comfortably get. Rather than be under further obligations, or worry to unload this burden, he looked to us. He wanted to turn this merchandise at the cost of production. He eliminated all such expenses as overhead, advertising, selling, and commission when he accepted our cash offer.

With this great saving, we are going to do our part to cut our profits to the very bottom notch.

All the above goods are guaranteed by us in every way. During the closing of this stock for the next few days, none of these goods will be charged—they will be sold strictly for cash. Ordinary alterations will not be charged for. The cash will cheerfully be returned for any purchase made if you are not entirely satisfied.

Sizes 34 to 46 in regulars, longs, stouts, and shorts.

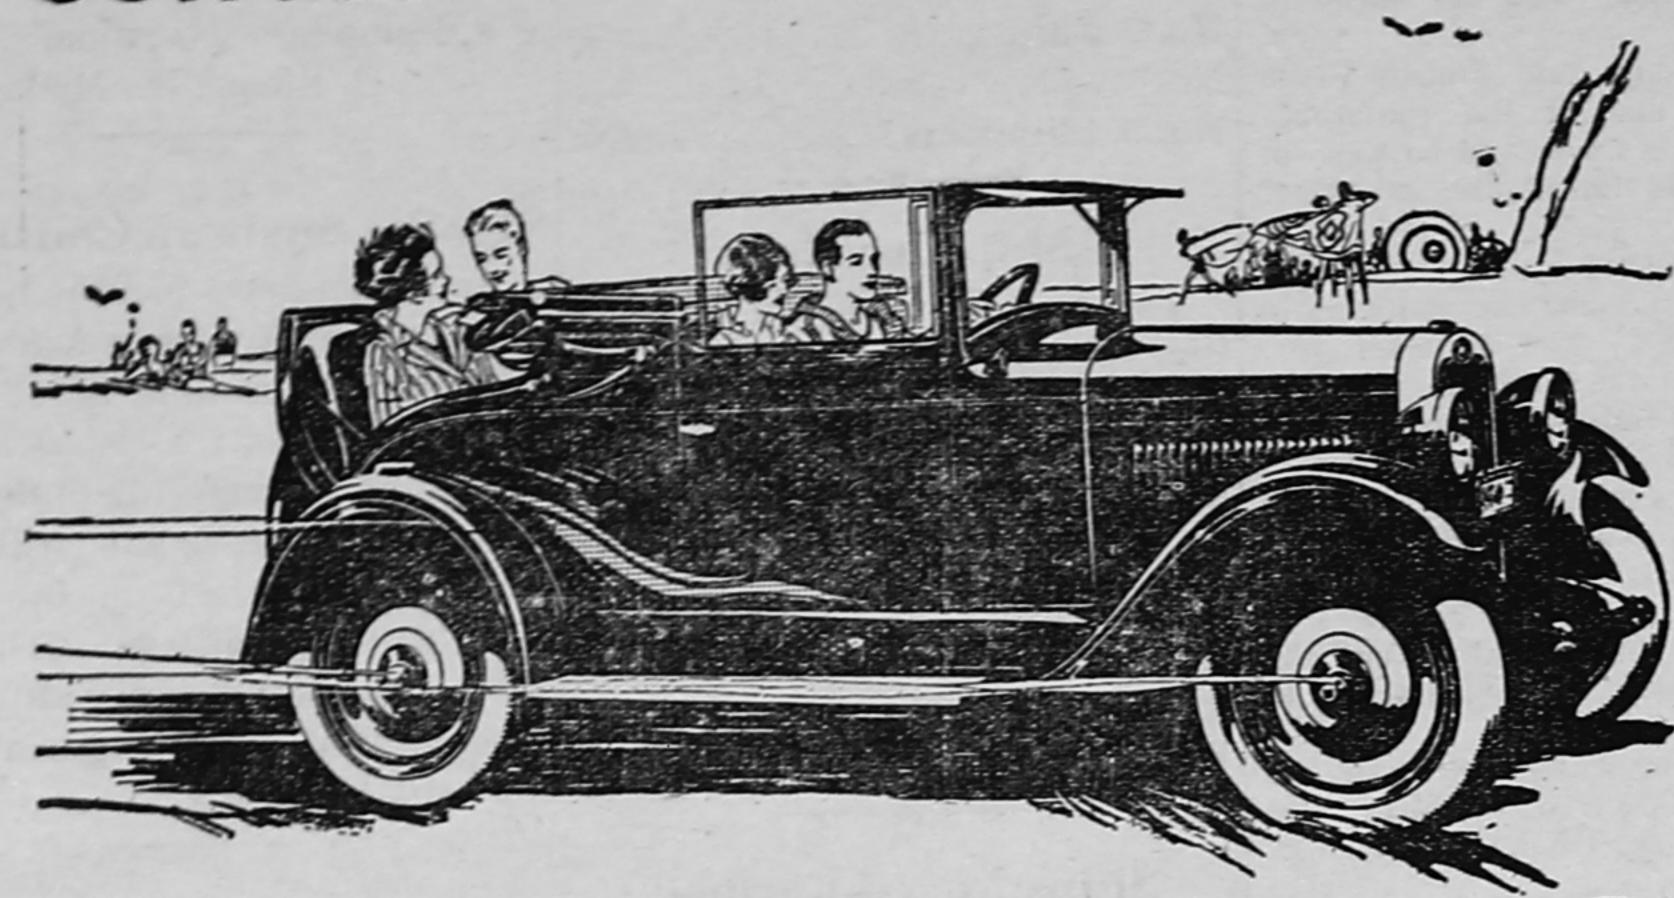

In the disposal of these two thousand or more suits, none will be charged --- every sale must be cash. onable alterations will be made free.

MEDICAL GROUP OF U. OF I. NEEDS BUILDINGS

Professional Departments at Chicago Need More Space for Instruction.

Relief from handicaps for the Chicago Departments of the University of Illinois-Medicine, Dentistry and Pharmacy-caused by inadequate buildings and facilities is hoped for by the members of the medical profes-Mr. and Mrs. Byron Warnes sion and citizens of the state in gen-

Adequate facilities for the clinical teaching of medicine are greatly curtailed by the lack of sufficient number Mr. and Mrs. Roy Davis and of beds in the Research hospital.

The instructional work in the first two years in the College of Medicine and in all of Dentistry is conducted in two old buildings situated in the block directly north of Cook County

These buildings are antiquated in not at all adapted to the methods of modern laboratory instruction. Aside from these facts the old buildings are two blocks away from the rest of the plant, which causes the loss of a certain degree of efficiency in the conduct of the work.

It is hoped that the state will soom provide laboratories sufficient in size to handle incoming classes of at least 200 students in the College of Medicine and 100 students per class in the College of Dentistry. Entrance in medicine has been limited for a number of years and thus many of the young men and women of the state of Illinois desiring medical education either had to wait twelve months in order to be admitted to the University of Illinois College of Medicine or

U. OF I. MILITARY TRAINING EFFICIENT

3,280 U.S. Officers in World War Were State University Men.

Two major generals, four brigadier generals, eleven colonels, twenty-nine lieutenant colonels, one hundred and thirty-two majors, six hundred and twenty-four captains and two thousand one hundred and ninety first and second lieutenants in the World War were former University of Illinois students, a check of figures has revealed.

A total of 3,280 trained officers for the Army, Navy and Marine Corps was the grand total, for in addition to the 2,992 officers supplied the army, 25 officers were supplied the Marine Corps and 263 to the Navy.

"This is certainly a great record," President David Kinley said in comment. "It is a record of which the nation, state and university should be proud.

"No less important is the fact that the university furnished the armed forces of our nation with 3,070 men in other capacities than that of officers: Their work was no less meritorious than that of the officers and they deserve much credit. This figure does not include 3,137 other men enlisted in the Student

Army and Navy Training Corps. "To my mind, this record of our university stands as a justification of the position we have taken in regard to compulsory military training in the state university. The federal government in 1862 took steps to prevent a recurrence in part at least of the mistakes and disastrous events that occurred in the early part of the Civil War because of the scarcity of trained officers. The Morrill Land Grant Act, which gave our great institution of learning its initial impetus. was a far-seeing instrument and I think that the record of the university justifies the idea that underlies that provision of the Land Grant Act which provides for military training.

"Without the training that the University of Illinois gave the 3,280 officers in the three branches of the national armed forces, this number at least would never have been able to serve their country as they did."

The Shattered Vase

******** By WALLACE JOHNS

(Copyright.) MR. MORTON FENWICK was a very pompous man. He was not wealthy, but he had enough to live on, and he devoted himself to the collection of old china. Besides, Morton Fenwick had a wife, Jane, and a daughter, Bertha. Mr. Fenwick's word with regard to old china was final and Mrs. Fenwick's dictum with regard to "old families" was decisive.

Mr. James Floyd was nearly as pompous as Mr. Morton Fenwick; and he, too, was a collector in the old china field. Floyd had barrels and barrels of money to back up his cellecting fad, but Fenwick had the technical knowledge.

Now Floyd had a son, a bright young fellow named John, who was in love with Bertha.

The two collectors were so engrossed in their collecting that they scarcely realized that their children had grown up-still less that they were in love with each other. It was Mrs. Fenwick who discovered it first.

"Morton," said she, "that John Floyd is in love with Bertha and I really believe that Bertha is in love with him."

"Nonsense," said Fenwick, "they are mere children."

"Perhaps," returned Mrs. Fenwick, "but Bertha is twenty-five and John is a couple of years older. Of course, the Floyds have no family; but they have money; we must consider Bertha's future."

"Oh, I don't care so much about Floyd's lack of family, Jane," replied Fenwick, "but I should hate to have my daughter marry the son of a man who makes himself a laughing stock by pretending to know something about old china."

"Father," said John Floyd one evening, "I want to marry Bertha Fen-

"What!" cried Floyd starting as if a bomb had been dropped beside his chair. "Marry the daughter of that pempous old ass who pretends to be such an authority on old china? Why, the man is impossible. Besides that wife of his is always talking family. No, no, I could not endure to be linked up with those people. Try some other girl. Besides, Fenwick cheated me out of that Satsuma vase."

"Why, father," said John, "you know very well you had a chance to buy that vase and did not do it. You only recognized its value as an artistic treasure after Mr. Fenwick had procured it."

"My agents deceived me-or were too ignorant to know what they were talking about," cried Fleyd. "They said it was no good, and after Fenwick procured it the whole town went wild about it. I wish I could get possession of that vase. No, sir, as long as Fenwick keeps that vase he cheated me out of you shall not marry his daughter."

That night John and Bertha held deep conference over the state of affairs. Of course, they were both over age and could have married without parental consent, had they been so disposed.

Bertha took her mother into her confidence and Mrs. Fenwick said: "Leave it to me. I am sorry you are going to marry outside of your rank -family rank, I mean-but the Fleyds have money and your father won't leave you any; and John is a good boy who, thank heaven, doesn't collect old china. That old vase has been nothing but a source of worry ever since your father bought it."

John Floyd was surprised a day or two afterward to get a note from Mrs. Fenwick asking him to call upon her at a certain hour when Bertha would be out-she wanted to see him alone on most important business. When John came in response to the note he and Mrs. Fenwick held a long and very serious conference. As he was leaving she said: "Now you land. I will arrange things as I have his son, "so Fenwick has lost his vase, has he? Serves him right. Suppose he feels mighty bad about it?" "Frightful," replied John, "He is so cut up that he has renounced china collecting forever." "Has he?" cried Floyd. "Well, that was a tough blow for the old fellow. You can marry his daughter if you want to. The Fenwicks are a very eld family-and we are not." "When shall I give you back your watch?" asked John of Mrs. Fenwick next day.

"Oh, wait a little while, then return it to me through the mail. We must preserve artistic verisimilitude," said she.

When Congdon bade her good night, she was a little fearful of what demand he might make upon her, but his brief good-night was courteous.

Another phase of the unusual experience came shortly. She was sent on an emergency call to one of the worst holes of the section, but she had no trouble; and, now and then. similar errands were given her-and the reason. Jostled roughly in a hall by a man of a group, a voice said: "Leave her alone! She's 'Mac'

Congdon's girl!" So that was the reason she could go and come, and her superior in the House realized it evidently. The thought gave her a quick sense of pride and of safety.
