Cultivation

"Aye the corn, the royal corn, within whose yellow heart is of health and strength for all the nations." —Gov. Oglesby.

CORN planted in the ground and properly cultivated yields a good return.

It is just the same with your money.

When you plant it in the bank and cultivate it by regularly adding to it, your balance will grow and grow, and yield that which will protect you and yours and bring happiness and comforts to you.

Sport News

Last Monday evening Max Seeds went to the home of his buddy, Dale Snow, to spend the night, and they went fishing. The next morning they got up at 4 o'clock and started to Allerton to visit the Clester boys, Dale riding a tricycle and Max a scooter, arriving at Allerton at 6:25. Then they called Dale's mother on the telephone, who told them to return on the bus; but the boys hiked back, arriving home at 7 o'clock. They were put to work for the rest of the day to pay for their fun. In the meanwhile, Mrs. Eva. Seeds, not knowing the circumstances, drove along for Max to go to Longview with her, so Max left Dale on the job.

Work is progressing nicely on Uncle Charley Dohme's new house.

The bass season opens (today) Friday. And several local nimmers are hoping to land some big ones.

Miss Frances Knight Of Allerton Weds

The marriage of Miss Frances Knight of Allerton to Rolla K. Dawson of Hettick, took place at 3 o'clock Sunday afternoon at the home of the bride's mother, Mrs. Sarah Knight near Allerton.

The couple was attended by Miss Alma Holz of St. Cloud, Minn., and the brother of the bride, Eugene Knight. Rev. G. W. Huff played the wedding march and Julia Umbenhower sang "At Dawning" and "I love You Truly."

The bride wore a pale blue flowered chiffon dress and carried a shower bouquet of orange blossoms and tea roses. Miss Holz wore a dainty flowered chiffon dress and carried a bouquet of roses and stock.

The house was decorated with the color scheme of pink and white. After the ceremony a bridal tea was served to forty relatives and closest friends.

Mrs. Dawson is a graduate of the Oakwood township high school and for the past few years has taught school in this vicinity. The past two years she has taught in the Sidell grade school. The groom is a graduate of the Hettick high school and later attended Illinois Wesleyan university at Bloomington. For the past few years he has taught in the Virden school.

The couple will be at home at once on a farm near Virden owned by the groom's father.

Mrs. Geo. Walker Entertains Her Sunday School Class

Mrs. George Walker entertained the members of her Sunday School class at her home last Friday night. Games and music furnished entertainment for the evening. Refreshments of ice cream and cake were served.

Those present were Lucille Harvey, Onida Phipps, Vera and Mabel Ballow, Gladys Neal, Helen McCormick, Vivie Burton, Nellie Harvey, Mildred Freeman, Martha Jones. Guests of the class were Harold Thomas, Walter Neal, George Harden, August Gerike.

Horse Shoe Is The Game

The game of roque has been all the rage with the local business men for the past few years. But, horse shoe pitching is the game now, a ground having been laid out just north of the meat market the first of the week.

Kenneth Dicks, Walter Witt and Billy Block built the boxes and drove the stakes. It may not be generally known that these gentlemen are good carpenters, but the fact was proven when they went to set the boxes, the side of one box being about a foot longer than it should be.

Weather Report

A nice rain, altho not needed, visited this section last Tuesday night. The weather is ideal and the farmers are busily engaged in cultivating their corn crops. Owing to the recent rains some of the cornfields are very weedy.

Hume Lad Drowned While In Wading

Hume, Ill., June 11.—Kenneth Clark, 16, a sophomore in the local high school, was today the first drowning victim of the summer through Eastern Central Illinois.

Clark went under a third time in a hole along Embarass creek near Newman while wading with several of his companions. None of them could swim. They threw in boards for him to catch to. As he came up the first time, he grabbed at one of them. The second time he also missed. By the third time, he managed to catch at a big board or log, to which the playmates were holding the other end—but he was too weak.

His body was recovered sometime later, after three men and a woman dived for more than an hour.

The hole was nine feet deep, about 12 feet across and several feet long. Gravel had been dredged from the ordinary shallow creek by workers who had been building State Route 49. It had been their purpose to dredge a basin in order to hold enough water to facilitate the mixing of concrete for the bridge built nearby.

Fifteen Scouts enjoyed a hike last Saturday to Biddle's Grove. Attention is now being centered on an all-night hike to be held early in July.

The next meeting will be held Friday night.

The third division of the Scout Law is often called the Civil Law and includes No. 7, 8, and 9, as follows:

7. A Scout is obedient. He obeys his parents, Scout Master, Patrol Leader and all other duly constituted authorities.

8. A Scout is cheerful. He smiles whenever he can. His obedience to orders is prompt and cheery. He never shirks or grumbles at hardships.

9. A Scout is thrifty. He does not wantonly destroy property. He works faithfully, wastes nothing and makes the best use of his opportunities. He saves his money that he may pay his own way, be generous to those in need and helpful to worthy objects. He may work for pay, but must not receive tips for courtesies or "good turns."

Mule Loses Foot In Peculiar Way

Jim Hudson lost a valuable mule in a peculiar manner last Saturday at his farm southwest of Arcola. The tenant was driving two horses and two mules to a large corrugated roller. He was driving them across a small ditch and the mule pulled back slightly. The roller ran up onto it and the mule's foot got caught between the roller and the frame. The joint was severed and the muscles and skin cut so completely that the foot dropped off.

It was necessary to kill the animal which was valued at $150 by Mr. Hudson. It was unusually gentle and a fine worker.

Champaign County Was Surveyed In 1821, Was Settled Later

Champaign County, an oblong square containing 645,120 acres, being thirty-six miles long and twenty-eight miles wide, was laid out and divided into townships in 1821 by United States surveyors, even before a single settler had moved within the territory. Prior to the surveying, it was supposed there were hunters and trappers here, but they left no name or sign behind them of their coming or going.

The first settler was Runnel Fielder who came to the county in 1822 and located in Urbana Township. Fielder, however, made no entry of land until 1828. This pioneer also has the credit of planting the first orchard in the county, although not a trace of it remains, and permanent settlement was not begun until 1828. The first school-house in the county was built near Urbana in 1832.

Champaign County was organized by an act of the Legislature approved Feb. 28, 1833. The first meeting of the county commissioners was held in May, 1833 when commissioners from Clark, Coles and Edgar counties were appointed to locate the county seat. "Urbana received this honor, though there were other places contesting," says a Biographical Album of the county, published in 1887 in Chicago.

The only postoffice in the county at that time was on the farm of Mathias Rhinehart, and was named Van Buren, after Martin VanBuren, who was then Vice-President of the United States. As soon as the county seat was determined upon, settlers began to gather in. They located at first on the south side of the grove. Stores and shops were soon started, and roads opened to the different parts of the county. The Van Buren postoffice was moved to Urbana and its name perished. The population of the county at that time was about 800.

"Though settlers came into the county at a very early date, the commencement of its rapid growth may be dated from the construction of the Illinois Central Railroad in 1854-55. This was the turning point in the history of the county. The settlements at first were confined to groves and timber belts, and the cabins were built of logs."

"Champaign, like all new counties in this state, until brought under cultivation, was the home and nursery of malarial diseases. They were a great hindrance to the settlement of the county. Sometimes there were not well persons enough in a neighborhood to take care of the sick. Physicians were few, or entirely wanting."

"From the advent of the railroads, Champaign County has had a steady and healthy growth until now (1887) she is one of the foremost counties in the State. The principal city is Champaign, which is a very active business place, and an attractive place of residence. Urbana is the county seat and the next in population."

In speaking of the physical assets of Champaign County, the old volume says: While there is no county in the state that possesses all the advantages of an Acadia, yet Champaign County may be credited with coming as near to this as any of them. The county is traversed by four different railroads, giving it ample transportation facilities. The drainage is good, and there are few sloughs now in the county. The soil is a rich black vegetable loam, varying from one to two feet in depth, and very productive. The county is covered mostly with undulating prairies, with occasional groves and some slightly broken lands. It is well watered by numerous streams. The climate is of the medium temperature, which makes it very desirable as a place of residence, and very favorable to agricultural interests as well as stock raising."

Greatest Corn Experiment In History Begins

Experiments in breeding 77 different types of corn which are being made by Harvey Sconce, prominent Sidell farm operator and manager of the raw production department of the Cornstalk Products Company, have attracted the attention of the United States Department of Agriculture.

Dr. George Rommell, agricultural technician of the department, visited Danville the past few days especially to see Mr. Sconce and go over his work in planting the greatest corn experiment ever attempted by any individual or any experiment station.

Dr. Rommell is including data on these experiments in a new book he will publish soon. He also visited the Agricultural college of the University of Illinois, at Urbana to check up on some material he is incorporating in this book.

Dr. Rommell, who was in Vermilion county last fall inspecting the methods of harvesting cornstalks originated by Mr. Sconce in connection with his work with the Cornstalk Products Company, made this statement before leaving Danville at this time:

"When Harvey Sconce completes the corn harvesting on the experimental fields of the Cornstalk Products Company this fall in Vermilion county, he will know more about growing corn than any other man living."

Carelessness Causes Most Accidents

Ninety per cent of all industrial, home, street and highway accidents are from trivial causes.

"Major violations of the law and spectacular acts of criminal negligence produce but a small fraction of the total number of deaths and injuries that occur annually," declared Marcus A. Dow, eminent safety engineer.

"Boards left lying on factory floors with nails sticking up in them cause more serious injuries than boiler explosions. In private homes, more people are killed and hurt by falling down stairs than are killed and injured in fires."

"The majority of street accidents are caused by little acts of thoughtlessness rather than by drunkenness or other violations of the law in driving automobiles."

A careful analysis of street and highway accidents show that about 15 per cent are caused by backing up carelessly to get out of parking spaces. Failure to get under proper control when approaching street intersections causes another 15 per cent. Following too closely behind a vehicle to allow proper braking distance accounts for 12 per cent of accidents. Improper signaling causes 10 per cent and skidding eight per cent. Miscellaneous small acts of neglect cause 30 per cent, while drunkenness and other violations of the law cause only 10 per cent of accidents.

A real estate salesman of Arizona had just finished describing the glorious opportunities of that part of the country. All Arizona needs to become the garden spot of the world, he said, is good people and water.

Didn't Penetrate

The commercial traveler was explaining why he insisted on smoking a certain brand of cheap cigarette.

You see, when I collect 5,000 of these coupons I get a grand piano.

One of the company promptly replied, My dear chap, if you smoke 5,000 packages of those things you'll want a harp.

Everyone laughed except a Scotchman, and about ten minutes afterwards he remarked:

Aye, it was awkward travelin' wi' a grand piano.

Try the Drug Store first.

Good Riddance

Two women in a railway compartment were quarreling about the window and insisted on calling the conductor.

If it's opened I shall catch cold and die, said one.

If it's closed I shall suffocate, retorted the other.

A long-suffering man here intervened: First open the window, he told the conductor, that will kill one. Then shut it. That will get rid of the other. Then the rest of us can all go to sleep.

John Burns Given Life Sentence

Lafayette, Ind., June 9.—Formal sentence of life imprisonment was pronounced by Judge Homer Hennegar at 11:30 o'clock Saturday morning on John Burns 21, former Danville youth, who was found guilty by a jury last night, of first degree murder in the death of Wallace McClure, deputy sheriff, who, with John P. Grove, another deputy, were killed on February 7, while taking Burns and Samuel Baxter to prison.

Burns appeared somewhat relieved as he heard the verdict read. Apparently he was prepared for the worst—the death penalty.

The murder is alleged to have been committed near Maple Point southeast of Lafayette, on Feb. 7, while the two deputies were taking Burns and Samuel Baxter to the state reformatory at Pendleton. Baxter has never been caught. The bodies of the two slain deputies were found several days later in a lonely woods south of Foster, and east of Danville, Ill.

Elsie Was "Doing Her Bit"

By DOROTHY DOUGLAS

THERE were not many of Elsie's friends who had seen her when she was consumed by a mood of depression, but she certainly was in the midst of one of the darkest this bleak afternoon.

Crowning her mood was the fact that she had been unable to obtain a seat for the concert of Greatheart, the master violinist, at whose feet the entire universe threw its admiring tribute.

In the eyes of her friends Elsie was one of the most helpful, adorable and entirely to be relied upon girls whom it was their joy to know. But in her own estimation she was a mere slug—a weed growing by the wayside and posterity, nor the present generation would be ever the better for her existence.

It was drawing near the time when the great master would be smiling his quaint smile upon an adoring audience and Elsie was bumped out of her mood by the telephone ringing.

"Get on your bonnet!" ordered a masculine voice at the other end of the wire. "I've wangled a seat for you after all. No, don't tell me you're sorry I can't accompany you. You'd rather sit and listen in silence to Greatheart than have a bundle of rubies tossed in your lap, much less having me sitting beside you chattering. Hustle as you haven't much time."

Elsie was aglow from head to foot as she entered the packed concert hall and was shown to a tiny seat squeezed into the stage box on the very fringe of the stage itself. It was so great and unexpected a treat that Elsie almost felt as if she should reward the giver of the seat with the hand he had so persistently sought.

In the hush that marked the drawing aside of the curtains before Greatheart stood before them hugging his violin to his breast Elsie fancied he would hear the thumping of her heart so close she was to him as he stood bowing.

Elsie suddenly felt a consuming power sweep over her. It seemed for a moment as if the universe spun in circles of light and great strength about her and then left her serenely calm.

That strength, sent her from another world, remained with her.

Greatheart smiled and his audience burst into wild applause. His was a personality to claim the best of even the hardest of his critics. Quaintly adorable, gently lovable was this great master. He gave the world freely of his wonderful gift and charmed with but the passing of his bow across the strings of his loved violin.

Elsie found that to look at him and listen at the same time was too great a joy so she fixed her eyes somewhat unseeing upon a small mirror that hung half-way up the proscenium arch and reflected the central entrance to the hall.

There wasn't a sound in the packed house during the moments when music, such as the world seldom heard, was drawn forth by Greatheart, and Elsie, along with the thousands of others listening, was carried to realms that must assuredly be a fringe of heaven.

Then, without a moment's warning Elsie sprang onto the stage, flung her body straight in front of the master—even as a loud report rang out from the back of the house.

Then she fell in a faint at Greatheart's feet and a thin stream of red filtered from somewhere in her body.

There was a shout at the back of the house and the man who had fired the shot was captured and held with his smoking revolver still in his grasp.

Behind the swiftly drawn curtains Elsie opened her eyes to look into those of the master. He held her gently in his arms and gazed down at her with a look of such intense wonderment that Elsie foolishly found a tear in her own eyes.

"My child, my child," cried Greatheart brokenly, "why did you do it? You might have lost your life—for me." And still he held her gently in his arms while a quickly summoned surgeon attended the wound that the bullet had made in Elsie's side.

"I would gladly do so," said Elsie softly. "Gladly save you for the world. I am just a cabbage—a weed—while you—you—"

But Elsie had lost consciousness again and when she woke up a second time she was in her own room on the sunny couch by the window and Greatheart was sitting beside her. There was a huge bowl of roses and the wonderful fingers that gave such glorious music to the world were stroking the hair back from Elsie's forehead.

That look of intense wonder was still in the eyes of Greatheart as if he were trying to fathom a stupendous truth. He did not as yet know that the great truth was love—love in a form that few mortals could realize, so big and compelling and altogether beautiful it was.

"He was a madman," he told her softly. "You brave—"

"Please don't," said Elsie softly. "I only happened to see him in time—in that tiny mirror—I am glad—I am glad—so glad—to have done one little thing worth while."

And the great master of music drew Elsie's hand up to his lips and held it there. And in that moment Elsie knew why she had been given strength for it was to protect the loved one—her loved one.

Homer People Tire of Party and Have Pair Arrested

Sam Lacey and Harold Downs of Homer put on a little party in their home town last Friday evening and residents of the village became tired of their imitations of the wild Indian and called the sheriff. He decided they were drunk and they neither denied nor affirmed and spent the night in the county jail.

Saturday morning Lacey pleaded guilty to a charge of drunkenness and disorderly conduct which separated him from $32.50.

In the county court Downs pleaded guilty to a charge of illegal possession of liquor and drew a fine of $200 and costs. If he is unable to pay the amount he is to work it out in the workhouse at the rate of $1.50 per day. He went to jail.

Paul Kuhn's Life Insurance $630,000

The late Paul Kuhn, Terre Haute string elevator owner, left life insurance amounting to $630,000 to his widow. He was the owner of more than fifty race horses, which were sold at Indianapolis last Friday and Saturday to satisfy his creditors.

The executors of the estate, Paul Begart and R. N. Filbeck, both Terre Haute bank presidents, have announced that the twenty elevators owned by Mr. Kuhn in Eastern Illinois and Western Indiana, will be sold during the summer and the proceeds used to liquidate the estate. It was also stated that Mr. Kuhn's creditors will be paid in full.

Little Black Boy Is Happiest of Prisoners

Henry Williams, 11 year old Champaign colored boy who runs away from every place but the county jail, is the happiest of the 48 prisoners confined there.

Henry is known at the jail as the boy with the man's voice and he knows how to use it when it comes to singing.

How Henry's little head can hold so many songs is a mystery that cannot be solved by anyone at the jail. He awakens each morning singing and goes to sleep singing and Jailer McKinney states his voice seems as strong one time as another.

The jailer believes Henry has a fortune in his voice if he could just stay "put" in one place long enough to have it developed.—News-Gazette.
