His Search

After the wind storm last night said Gap Johnson of Rumpus Ridge, I was out scouting around when I seed an old feller with a lighted lantern in one hand and a door knob in the other, sneaking along on the edge of the bluff.

What in tunkett was he up to? asked an acquaintance.

I asked him that, and as nigh as I could make out he said he was hunting for a house that would fit his door knob.

H. W. Johnson and family of Danville, visited relatives here over the week end.

A Pint In His Favor

The soused party staggered to the hydrant and holding on to keep his balance, again stared intently at the cab horse across the street.

Well, he muttered, if that's a merry-go-round, I'm still sober.

"Hero For A Night" Is Speedy And Funny

"A Hero for a Night," the attraction at Broadlands Opera House next Wednesday night is without doubt one of the fastest moving and laughable farces of the current season.

The picture is a Universal and stars Glenn Tryon and Patsy Ruth Miller, under the direction of William James Craft.

Tryon portrays the role of a wise-cracking young taxicab driver in a summer resort, who suddenly decides to enter an airplane race across the Atlantic Ocean. He takes flying lessons by mail and builds his own plane. Things reach a thrilling as well as extremely amusing climax when he starts on his first trip with two passengers and is unable to land until the gasoline runs out.

Miss Miller appears more charming than ever and her performance leaves nothing to be desired.

Lightning Hits Air Mail Plane Over Missouri

St. Louis, July 2.—Leslie H. Smith, crack air mail pilot, was killed by a bolt of lightning before his plane crashed at a terrific speed on a wooded hillside nine miles north of Elsinore, Mo. Thursday night, in the opinion of his employer, Frank H. Robertson, general manager of the Robertson Aircraft company.

Robertson, who rushed to the scene of the crash after the pilot and his wrecked plane were found, gave no credence to the theory that Smith had been forced down by a heavy downdraft caused by the storm.

"Smith was an experienced bad weather pilot," said Robertson. "If he had been attempting a landing he would have released his parachute flares. We found both of them in their tubes. Furthermore he would have closed his throttle for landing. We found, however, that the plane had struck the trees at a terrific speed, apparently with the throttle wide open."

The theory that the plane was struck by lightning is borne out by reports that several persons had seen lightning strike an object in the air in the vicinity where the plane was found yesterday, on the night of the storm.

Police Dog Kills Foxes Near Arcola

Arcola, July 3.—Bert Finn, who farms northeast of Arcola, has a den of foxes on his land. They live in a large drain tile and have been seen about the place all spring. At one time there were a pair of old ones, a bunch more than half grown and a litter of young ones and all could be seen almost every day.

Mr. Finn says the foxes never molest poultry or any live stock close to their den. The principal diet of the foxes is rabbit, judging from the fur and bones found. But he owns a German police dog which didn't take kindly to the foxes and the dog recently killed two of the half grown animals. They attempted to put up a fight when caught but the fight was unequal and the foxes lasted only a few seconds.

"Bluebeard" Of France Accused of Killing Three Fianceses

Marseilles, France, June 30.—A trail of drinks from Marseilles to Africa led to the arrest in Algiers yesterday of the alleged Bluebeard of southern France. He was identified today as Pierre Rey, alias Jerome Prat. He was accused of the murder of three fiancées.

For four days, Rey fled with the police looking for him thru-out France. He bought drinks for everyone he met. He treated chauffeurs and porters and even invited a passing policeman to drink with him when he must have known that the whole force was tracking him.

Some of the fifteen women at first thought to be missing have turned up. Police feared that other victims would be found, however, when they had investigated the correspondence of "the strangler" as they term him because that was his method of killing his fiancées.

Shell Camerer Killed By Lightning Tuesday

Mrs. Lottie Astell and Mrs. Will Smith received the sad news of the death of their brother, Shell Camerer, of Danville, early last Wednesday morning. Mr. Camerer works at the power house at Fithian and was killed by lightning while at work during an electrical storm last Tuesday night.

Mr. Camerer was talking over the telephone, and as he quit talking before finishing the conversation, the person at the other end of the line became suspicious that something had gone wrong, and a messenger sent to investigate found Mr. Camerer lying on the floor dead.

The deceased was formerly a resident of Broadlands.

Funeral rites will be held at Danville, today (Friday) at 4 o'clock.

Motorcycle Rider Killed When He Hits Cow

A frightened cow caused the death of Winford Newell, 20, who lived north of Cayuga, Ind., Monday night. The accident occurred shortly before 9 o'clock Monday night on the Dixie B. road.

Newell and a friend, Everett Lawrence, were returning home after a motorcycle ride with Newell driving. As they approached a man driving a cow along the road, the animal stepped in front of the cycle.

Young Newell was catapulted to the right, landing on his head in a ditch. Lawrence was thrown a short distance to the right.

Lawrence got up after the collision and ran to Newell. Newell was unconscious and died fifteen minutes after the accident.

Georgetown Girl Drowns While Swimming River

Miss Emma Henchen, 28, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George Henchen of Georgetown, was drowned at 3 o'clock Tuesday afternoon while swimming with the four children of Mr. and Mrs. Paul Clipson, residing one-half mile from the Salt Fork, near Catlin.

Miss Henchen, accompanied by the Clipson girls, in seeking relief from the heat Tuesday afternoon, had gone to a small branch of the Salt Fork, near the Clipson home to wade. After wading a short while they decided to follow the creek down to the river and take a swim. Miss Henchen was regarded as a good swimmer while the two oldest Clipson girls also swam.

Despite the swift current, according to the Clipson children, the Henchen girl swam across the river and back twice and was attempting it the third time when she suddenly shouted to her companions that she had become very sick, at the same time throwing her hands into the air. The Clipson girls went to her assistance but were unable to bring her out of the water.

Two Kaufman Stores Merge

Formal announcement of the consolidation of the two Kaufman stores of Champaign with the Kaufman store of Decatur was made by Aaron Kaufman, head of the Decatur store recently. Stanley L. Kaufman, head of the Champaign stores, is president of the consolidated stores under the name of Kaufman's, Inc. Aaron Kaufman is chairman of the board and continues actively associated with the Decatur store.

The first Kaufman store was founded at Champaign, in 1879 by Aaron Kaufman. He was joined in 1881 by his younger brother, the late J. M. Kaufman, father of Stanley Kaufman, president of Kaufman's, Inc. In 1887 Aaron Kaufman moved to Decatur and opened the Decatur store. J. M. Kaufman remained in charge of the Champaign store until his death in 1921, when the active management was taken over by his son. In 1925 the second Kaufman store was opened in Champaign in the university business district at 607 East Green street and is known as Kaufman on the Campus.

Last September, Aaron Kaufman celebrated forty years of clothing business in Decatur. At that time the Decatur store had been known as Kaufman's for twenty-five years and it was also the formal opening of the completely remodeled store.

When Mr. Kaufman first went to Decatur he was located at 135 East Main street. Two years later the store went to the southeast corner of Water and William streets, where it remained for thirteen years. In January 1902, Mr. Kaufman moved to his present location. There the store continued to grow, forcing the building of an addition to the rear and a second floor was added to provide space for a stock room and a tailor shop.

The consolidation of the three stores was effective May 1, 1928. Stanley L. Kaufman took over the active management of the three stores, while Aaron Kaufman continued actively with the Decatur store. Present plans call for the addition of new departments and their development as well as the larger development of the present departments.

The corporation expects to derive great benefits from the consolidation and in preparation for this the stores are conducting a consolidation sale, which purpose is to clear the stock of the three stores to make way for the new stocks.

DEATH FROM DROWNING AVERTED BY PRONE PRESSURE RESUSCITATION

Many lives lost by drowning during the swimming season could be saved if some one present at the time of the tragedy had a knowledge of the prone pressure method of artificial respiration, or resuscitation.

This method of life saving is effective in cases of asphyxiation and electric shock, as well as drowning.

It is approved by the American Red Cross, American Gas Association, American Telephone and Telegraph Company, Bethlehem Steel Corporation, National Electric Light Association, National Safety Council, United States Army, United States Bureau of Mines, United States Bureau of Standards, United States Navy, United States Public Health Service, and by practically all public utility companies, which insist that their employees be familiar with this simple and effective method of saving lives.—Supplied by Illinois Committee on Public Utility Information.

Follow These Instructions Even If the Patient Appears Dead.

As soon as possible feel with your fingers in the patient's mouth and throat and remove any foreign body (tobacco, false teeth, etc.). If the mouth is tight shut, pay no more attention to it until later. Do not stop to loosen the patient's clothing, but immediately begin actual resuscitation. Every moment of delay is serious. Proceed as follows:

(1) Lay the patient on his belly, one arm extended directly overhead, the other arm bent at elbow and with the face turned outward and resting on hand or forearm, so that the nose and mouth are free for breathing. (See Figure 1.)

(2) Kneel, straddling the patient's thighs, with your knees placed at such a distance from the hip bones as will allow you to assume the position shown in Figure 1.

Place the palms of the hands on the small of the back with fingers resting on the ribs, the little finger just touching the lowest rib, with the thumb and fingers in a natural position, and the tips of the fingers just out of sight. (See Figure 1.)

(3) With arms held straight, swing forward slowly so that the weight of your body is gradually brought to bear upon the patient. The shoulder should be directly over the heel of the hand at the end of the forward swing. (See Figure 2.) Do not bend your elbows. This operation should take about two seconds.

(4) Now immediately swing backward so as to completely remove the pressure. (See Figure 3.)

(5) After two seconds, swing forward again. Thus repeat deliberately twelve to fifteen times a minute the double movement of compression and release, a complete respiration in four or five seconds.

(6) Continue artificial respiration without interruption until natural breathing is restored, if necessary, four hours or longer, or until a physician declares the patient is dead.

(7) As soon as this artificial respiration has been started and while it is being continued, an assistant should loosen any tight clothing about the patient's neck, chest or waist. Keep the patient warm. Do not give any liquids whatever by mouth until the patient is fully conscious.

(8) To avoid strain on the heart when the patient revives, he should be kept lying down and not allowed to stand or sit up. If the doctor has not arrived by the time the patient has revived, he should be given some stimulant, such as one teaspoonful of aromatic spirits of ammonia in a small glass of water, or a hot drink of coffee or tea, etc. The patient should be kept warm.

(9) Resuscitation should be carried on at the nearest possible point to where the patient received his injuries. He should not be moved from this point until he is breathing normally of his own volition and then moved only in a lying position. Should it be necessary, due to extreme weather conditions, etc., to move the patient before he is breathing normally, resuscitation should be carried on during the time that he is being moved.

(10) A brief return of natural respiration is not a certain indication for stopping the resuscitation. Not infrequently the patient, after a temporary recovery of respiration, stops breathing again. The patient must be watched, and if natural breathing stops, artificial respiration should be resumed at once.

(11) In carrying out resuscitation it may be necessary to change the operator. This change must be made without losing the rhythm of respiration. By this procedure no confusion results at the time of change of operator and a regular rhythm is kept up.

Learn every word of the foregoing, and learn it now! Don't wait for an accident. It is too late then.

Five-Year-Old Girl Strangles After Eating Peanuts

Watseka, Ill., July 2.—Suffering from strangling spells which started after she had choked on peanuts eaten at her birthday party, Saturday afternoon, little Vivian Janet Porter, 5, daughter of Edward Porter, Chebanse merchant, died at 7 o'clock Saturday night in a convulsion.

The girl suffered strangling spells on the way to the Kankakee hospital, where the X-ray failed to show any impediment in her throat. Seemingly, she improved and was removed to her home about 6 o'clock. Shortly after that she asked her mother if she might take a piece of her birthday cake to a neighbor across the street.

According to the neighbor, who was watching the child cross the street, she was attacked by a strangling spell and dropped in the middle of the street. The woman rushed to the child, picked her up and was carrying her to the Porter home when she died. The physician who attended her was present at the inquest and expressed an opinion that death was due to heart disease. Parents of the little girl said she had always been in good health.

Mrs. Loucinda Clem, Howard and Miss Anna Clem visited Albert Clem and family at Decatur, over the week end.

Wren Farmer's Friend For its size, the house wren is one of the most effective bird enemies of the insects. Wrens usually rear two broods of young each year, and the parents keep busy from morning to night bringing food for the hungry young. The wren's diet is almost exclusively animal, and a pair of wrens will account for an enormous number of insects in a season.

Ideal to Be Sought We have committed the Golden Rule to memory; let us now commit it to life. . . . We have preached brotherhood for centuries; we now need to find a material basis for brotherhood. Government must be made the organ of fraternity—a working-form for comrade-love. Think on this—work for this.—Edwin Markham.

Time Is Relative Einstein was right. Time is relative. If you like your relative, his visit is short. If you don't like him, his visit is long. Another illustration: If you are the tenant, rent day comes around swiftly; if you are the landlord, rent day is slow about coming around.—Atchison Globe.

Blessing in Disguise "Most wives have a daily rush of getting the husband off to work," says the Woman's Home Companion. "They shouldn't complain," says the caustic commentator. "They ought to be thankful they have husbands who will go off to work."

Vapor Not Steam Steam is invisible. The white cloud of vapor commonly called steam is vapor composed of minute particles of water suspended in the air and formed by the condensation of the true steam gas coming in contact with the cool air.

Don't Scold at Meals It is wrong to scold children or to discuss matters relating to discipline at the table. Any unpleasant emotions, such as crying or pouting, interfere so seriously with the digestion that it is harmful to the children.

It's Not Where, but Whom?

By CORONA REMINGTON

(Copyright.)

ANN opened her silver vanity, scrutinized her pretty face in the little concentrating mirror, put a pat of powder here and there on an already faultless make-up and closed the tiny case with a snap.

Jim, seated nearby, made no attempt to break the peaceful silence. Instead, he crossed his legs, lit a cigarette and leaned back against the divan with the manner of one who welcomes a moment's rest.

"Well, I'll not ask you again," said Ann coldly, after a long pause.

"Thank goodness, that's settled," he exclaimed with relief.

He flicked the ashes off the tip of his cigarette and replaced it in his mouth.

"For pity's sake don't throw hot ashes on the rug. You're the most inconsiderate person. Oh, oh, you'd aggravate a saint."

Ann dabbed a filmy handkerchief to her streaming eyes, then suddenly stopped weeping and came a little nearer. Putting a beseeching hand on his coat sleeve she looked at him in her most melting way.

"Listen, Jimsey dear, be nice. You make Ann so miserable."

Jim laughed shortly. "Here, don't try that pitiful flirting dodge on me."

She drew her hand away, a quick flush of anger rushed into her face.

"I can't imagine anyone wanting to flirt with you," she said at last.

"Oh, I don't know," he answered airily. "I have known them to do it before now."

Ann ignored his remark and continued with her own thoughts.

"I'm sick of the whole thing. Now I'll tell you once and for all I'm not going to ask you again, but if you don't do it I'll . . . I'll run away with Basil Porter. It isn't too late yet and he's got loads of money and I'll give me anything on earth I want."

"Say, you are pretty mad, aren't you?"

"I'm not mad—not a bit. I'm hurt! That you would treat me this way—you of all people. Oh, the world is too unkind!" Ann buried her face in a lavender taffeta cushion and burst into tears.

"Oh, if I could only get away—away from everything and everybody. Men are such b-rutes!"

"That reminds me. I wouldn't mind getting away for a while myself." Jim rose and walked across the room, and turned back and approached the divan again.

"Tell you what, Ann, I'd quit this if I were you. Bet your face looks as swollen as if you'd been in a yellow jacket's nest."

But Ann only kicked viciously at him with a disengaged foot and buried her head a little deeper in the cushion.

"I'd call this 'exhibit A' when it comes to genuine unadulterated tantrums and I'm sure you'd get the prize in any baby show. Now, quit that crying and get up from there. What you ask is unreasonable and I've no idea of humoring you. Get up!"

"If father were living he'd let me do it," she mumbled.

"Not much he wouldn't! No sree! That won't work either. Get up now and behave yourself."

Suddenly the door opened and a servant ushered in Capt. William Forsythe.

"Thank the Lord, you're here," exclaimed Jim with feeling. "Ann's on the warpath."

In a panic Ann looked up, but there was no escape.

"Why, dear, what's the matter?" asked Forsythe in alarm as he took her in his arms. "What's happened? Jim, what's the matter with your sister?"

"Oh, Bill; oh, Bill," was all that Ann could say as she snuggled a little closer.

"Come on, Ann." A slight tone of authority crept into his voice. "Tell me what's the matter."

"Nothing, only my brother's such a—a, so cruel. I wanted us to be married in England at the little church where mamma and daddy were married and he's been raising the roof off the house."

"It's neither fitting nor proper," put in Jim testily. "Besides, it would be as expensive as the devil."

"Not much," said Forsythe decidedly. "As captain in the American army I believe it would look better if I were married here. Besides, I don't know when I could get a furlough of that length. Can't do it, Ann. Come on now, like a good sport and stop crying. It doesn't matter where you marry, it's whom. You're too full of romantic notions, dear."

He spoke to her as he would to one of his lieutenants, and she immediately acquiesced. Jim stared in amazement and an hour later when they were having a smoke on the lawn together he asked Forsythe in astonishment:

"How'd you ever fix it, Bill? I thought we were in for an English wedding in spite of fate, dragging the whole family across and everything."

"That was the trouble, Jim. I knew darn well we wouldn't have an English wedding and she knew I meant it. That's the whole secret of managing people. Mean a thing when you say it and stick to it."

"Anyhow," said Jim, "you seem to be the very man for Ann and I'm glad you've got the job of managing her instead of me."

"So am I," said Forsythe with a happy laugh.

Husband's Title

The wife of a man whose title is "Dr." may refer to him as such, or, if she prefers, she may speak of him as "Mr." when it is necessary to give her husband a title. Many people regard the latter as being in better taste. Of course, when a woman is speaking to her social equal she uses neither the phrase, "Mr." nor "Dr." She speaks of him as her husband, or by his given name.

Olive Oil in Commerce

The extraction of oil from olives probably was discovered by man at about the same time he found how to make wine—far in the dim past when he was taking his first agricultural steps. This is today far the most important aspect of the olive industry as it affects commerce. More than 95 per cent of the Spanish crop goes into oil manufacture.—National Geographic Society Bulletin.

Stone Roads in Italy

Practically all highway in Italy are built of stone that is crushed by hand. All day long the peasant laborers sit in the shelter of their sun shades and make "little ones out of big ones." Although the method of road building is very primitive, the highways are excellent when completed.

Obedying Golden Rule

The man who refuses to "do unto others as he would they should do unto him" harms himself more than anyone else. Violation of the Golden Rule usually causes but little annoyance to the other fellow, but irreparable injury to yourself.—Grit.

Cover on the Roots

Keep this covering around the roots until immediately before planting. The roots of the trees dug from the woodland should be similarly covered and protected.

Christmas Cards

The earliest example of the art of making Christmas cards is attributed to J. C. Horsley, R. A., who in 1843 made designs of this character. Subsequently the demand for these tokens became enormous, and at present Christmas cards are often of much artistic merit in both design and coloring.

Perfection in Practice

Practice thyself even in the things which thou despaisest of accomplishing. For even the left hand, which is ineffectual for all other things for want of practice, holds the bridle more vigorously than the right hand; for it has been practiced in this.—Marcus Aurelius.

We casually inquired of our ten-year-old today how he was getting along at school, and he replied: "Just fine. We pulled a fake pass and went through 'em for a touchdown, and they didn't even know who had the ball."—Smith County (Kan.) Pioneer.

Mudhole Saves Life of Girl As Dress Burns

Hillsboro, Ill., July 3.—A mudhole yesterday probably saved the life of Elizabeth Gibbs, seven-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Gibbs. Her dress in flames as a result of playing with matches, the little girl ran toward the house, but stumbled and fell into a small wallow, extinguishing the flames in her scramble to get out.
