"Aw, come now, Son. You promised to tell me the whole truth, and it don't hardly seem like you're doing it, You find the body of the man your sister is crazy about. He's been killed. On his finger is a diamond ring that can be traced back to your sister easy. It means mixing her up in a pretty nasty affair. So you take the ring off Thayer's finger and keep quiet about it. Ain't that the way it was?"

"No," said Larry firmly, "it wasn't. I never noticed Thayer's fingers at all. I can't say what I would have done If I'd seen the ring. But I didn't see It, and that's the truth."

"Well-" Hanvey heaved a vast "Somebody did-because it's

"I didn't touch it," repeated Larry. "I hope you believe me."

"I reckon I do. And I'm much obliged for coming here. Though I can't say it has cleared things up a whole lot."

They chatted for a few minutes longer and Larry and the girl left. Reagan closed the door behind them and faced his ponderous companion. "You believe Thayer was dead when

Welch got to the room, Hanvey?" "Looks pretty straight to me." "You don't think Miss Peyton killed him, do you?" "Gee! I'd sure hate to think anything like that about such a swell kid as her." "Did Welch take his sister's ring off Thayer's finger?" "Now you've got me stumped. I'm durned if I know." "What do you think?"

"My thinks ain't worth nothing, John. What do you think?"

"He did not. The man who copped that ring was Max Vernon. And why? Because he was crazy about Ivy Welch and knew her ring. Gosh! Jim-even a guy like you must be ready to admit now that Max Vernon killed Thayer." "Why should I admit that, John?"

asked Hanvey mildly. "Because he killed him, that's why.

There ain't any argument about it." "Why ain't there?"

"Oh, h-1! We've got Vernon a hundred different ways. It's as clear-" "-As mud."

"Well, suppose you tell me just one thing that ain't clear?" Reagan was quite positive in his manner. Hanvey smiled broadly through a cloud of rancid smoke.

"The first thing I can't straighten out in my mind, John, is the knife that we found in Vernon's room; the one that we're sure Thayer was stabbed with."

"What about it?" Reagan's cheeks were red. "I overlooked it on my first search, that's all." "Think so, John? You ain't such a bum searcher as all that, are you?" "Any man can miss something. overlooked that knife, that's all. And knowing it was his, and finding it in his closet, is enough to convict him."

"No," argued Hanvey gently. "It's enough to acquit him, John."

"What the-" "Now listen, Brother, and don't get all het up. According to your own pet theory, Max Vernon carried that knife into Thayer's room and stabbed him during a row. Then he carried it back to his room and had sense enough to polish the fingerprints off the handle-because, remember, there wasn't a print on it. He then changed his blood-stained clothes. And then, by golly, you ask me to believe that a bird who was careful as all that went out and forgot the knife! Holy suffering mackerel! John-that just ain't reasonable. It don't click. Yeh, it's the knife that worries me, and it would worry you, too, if you'd get off that one-track railroad you're riding. The knife is Max Vernon's only chance. If it wasn't for that I'd bet

Reagan was pop-eyed as the idea slowly percolated.

he killed Thayer."

"Then-then you think that knife was planted in Max Vernon's room?"

Jim regarded the end of his cigar speculatively. "I sort of have a hunch that way, John. Think it over." He hoisted himself from his chair and waddled to the door, "Let's ride over to the college, if you don't mind. want to see a lot of folks." "Who?"

"Well, I ain't talked with those two kids who saw everything from the porch-Farnum and Gleason, ain't they? And I'd like to talk with the dean again, and maybe the president of that fraternity. And most of all I'd like to have a few words with Ivy Welch."

case_" "No, John-not tonight. I don't like to talk about murder when I've just seen a beautiful picture like that one in yonder." He imprisoned Reagan's arm. "Let's go."

"Where?" "For a chocolate fce cream soda." "Good G-d!" exclaimed Reagan.

But he went. The following morning Hanvey was dressed when Reagan arrived, and at the suggestion they went to the jail and were admitted to Max Vernon's cell. Hanvey addressed him in a voice more stern than Reagan had yet

"I'm talking straight from the shoulder, Vernon," said Jim firmly, though not unkindly. "You're in the hottest kind of hot water. It'd be so easy to convict you of Pat Thayer's murder that a kid could do it. I'm going to get some definite action today. Heap ever thought of such a thing, Mr. quick, see? I'm giving you this last chance. Tell the whole truth from beginning to end-nothing held back. If you don't do that we'll put you over the jumps for the murder of Pat Thayer. Think it over, Kid, and tell me how it looks."

"I didn't kill Thayer." "No? Well, maybe not. But you were mixed up in the robbery of the Marland National bank!"

The boy's face blanched, and out of the silence came Jim's voice again -infinitely gentle.

"Robbery ain't half as rotton charge as murder, Max."

turned back to Hanvey. "You win," he said dully. "You'll tell the truth? All of it?

Vernon stopped his pacing and

Every bit?" "Yes."

"All right, Son. Shoot!"

"I-I'll try to make it brief, Mr. Hanvey. I've been a d-d fool-but not a murderer. "Pat Thayer and I have been friends since he first came to Marland as a junior last year. I didn't suspect that his interest was not in me, but in my money.

"Over a period of almost two scholastic years he has been trimming me. This year, it happened that went crazy about a girl. It doesn't matter what her name is-" "You mean Ivy Welch?"

"Yes, Ivy. I'm awful fond of her, And this spring Thayer took me for my last cent. I had lost about forty thousand dollars in two years to him. He had my note for five thousand dollars. I didn't have a dime to pay him, and I couldn't borrow. Then, when Thayer knew I was stripped, he did everything in the world to show that he had contempt for me.

We had a quarrel-Thayer and I. When I left him I was in a cold sweat. If you want to know just how I felt, I guess I was mad enough to kill him. Maybe I'd have done it if I'd thought about it-but I didn't. You see, I'm telling you all the truth. Every bit of it, Mr. Hanvey."

"I got to the fraternity house and went straight up to my room. I changed my clothes and I shaved. Then I decided to take a suit I had had on to the tailor. I didn't leave my room until I walked downstairs. I had the suit rolled up in a bundle and had it under my arm. Then I was going down Archer street to Oak, where the tailor is. I got to the corner about half-past two o'clock.

"There is a traffic light on the corner, Mr. Hanvey, and it flashed red just as I got there. I stopped for it, and it seemed almost as soon as I stopped that shooting started inside the bank. I was scared to death. Then all of a sudden the door opened and a little man ran out. He was carrying a satchel.

"This man—he was the robber jumped in the back of my car and flopped on the floor. I was pretty near paralyzed, I was so scared."

"Yes? What happened. Max?" "That feller in the back of my car stuck a revolver right against my neck. 'I've just robbed that bank,' he said, 'and I'm d-n desperate. Now drive-and drive fast.' And I drove

He stopped talking. "Hadn't you ever seen this man be-

"No. Not until he ran out of the bank and jumped into my car."

"And all you have told me is the strict truth?"

"Yes." The boy hesitated. "But it isn't all the truth, Mr. Hanvey. I'll go on with the story if you don't mind."

Vernon was talking swiftly and his face was twitching with excitement. "He was lying all huddled up in the bottom of the car and the first thing I saw was a lot of blood. I knew he was unconscious and that I was safe. I was so scared that I suppose I acted more bravely than I would have done otherwise. I went to the back of the car and took his gun, which was lying on the floor of the car, and I saw that he was dead."

The boy ceased speaking abruptly. His cheeks were white, and occasionally he closed his eyes as though to shut out the grisly picture.

"There wasn't any question that he was dead. I got more courage. I felt for his pulse and it had stopped. Then a new idea hit me all of a sudden. wondered what would happen if somebody found me parked in the woods with the dead body of a man.

I should have returned to the bank and told them . . . anyway, I'm telling the truth, and the truth is that I didn't." He paused, then went on bravely. "I kept the money. I intended to keep it always. The man in the back of the car was dead. He had been killed robbing a bank. I was afraid of being found with him, anyway. His voice trailed off. "That's the truth," he said with a note of desperate appeal in his voice. "I swear to God it is."

Jim's bulbous head inclined slowly. "You had a pretty tough time, didn't you, Son? How much did you take out of the stolen money?"

"About sixteen hundred dollars, including what I paid on the car." "And all the rest is in the Aragon

"Yes, sir. Every cent." "How much is it altogether?"

"I don't know, sir. I was scared to count it-even in the hotel. I thought somebody might be looking through a keyhole, or something like that." "Sure. . . ."

Jim detached his golden toothpick from the hawser which held it. He eyes it speculatively and seemed to speak to it rather than to Max Vernon.

"Son," he said, "I sort of think you've talked mighty straight with me. I'm not a regular dick, you know. Now I'll make a deal with you: Suppose we say that I'm to return to the Marland bank all the money that's left. In our country we have a much greater variety of desserts to which we give the pudding title. They are rice, tapioca, blanc manges and some of the gelatin mixtures. Perhaps our standard pudding, however, is that known, for some uncertain reason, as "cottage." I think that there is nothing better than a good cottage pudding, although, I am sure you have suffered as I have at various times and places in trying to eat a very plain poor cake covered with a lumpy sauce of neutral flavor which has been given this name. Cake for cottage pudding may be plain, that is to say, it may be made with a comparatively small amount of shortening and few eggs, because it is supposed to be served hot from the oven. The cake, however, should be made just as carefully, with the same regard for the proper amount of flour, as is the most delicate cake which is to be served cold. A quick method may be used if the recipe contains the proper amount of ingredients. Let me suggest that a varimade by baking the mixture in muffin tins. The public is fast returning to the use of liquid laxatives. People have learned that the properly prepared liquid laxative will bring a perfect movement without any discomfort at the time, or after.

The dose of a liquid laxative can be varied to suit the needs of the individual. The action can thus be regulated. A child is easily given the right dose. And mild liquid laxatives do not irritate the kidneys.

Doctors are generally agreed that senna is the best laxative for everybody. Senna is a natural laxative. It does not drain the system like the cathartics that leave you so thirsty. Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin is a liquid laxative which relies on senna for its laxative action. It has the average person's bowels as regular as clockwork in a few weeks' time.

You can always get Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin at any drugstore, ready for use. Member N. R. A.

SAUL IN TARSUS

LESSON TEXT-Acts 21:39; 22:3, 27, 28; 26:4-7; Phil. 3:3-6. GOLDEN TEXT-Study to show thyself approved unto God, a workman that needeth not to be ashamed, rightly dividing the word of truth. II Tim-

INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOP-IC-Preparation for Life Work. YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOP-IC-Training Christian Leaders.

I. Saul's Birth (Acts 21:39). He was born at Tarsus, the capital of Cilicia. Tarsus was a gateway between the east and west, therefore a great commercial center. It was a self-governing city, making citizenship therein honorable. It was also one of the great educational centers of the. Roman empire. In the providence of God the great apostle to the Gentiles was born in the city where he would encounter men of every class and na-

II. Saul's Education (Acts 22:3). 1. In the home (Phil. 3:5). His parents were pious people and doubtless carefully cultured him according to Jewish standards. He was brought up as a strict Pharisee,

2. In college at Jerusalem (Acts 22:3). About the age of thirteen, as was the custom, he became a child of the law. It was doubtless at this age that he went to Jerusalem and entered upon his course of study under Gamaliel, one of the most eminent teachers of Israel. His course of study here, doubtless, was largely restricted to the Holy Scriptures. In this school he was prepared for the great work of a Christian theologian. Included in his education was:

a. Patriotism. He proudly affirmed "I am a Jew." He was brought up to love his nation. He was a nationalist of the true type.

b. A love for the Bible. To him the Scriptures were the very Word of God, the final word of authority. c. Zeal for God. The word "zealous" literally means "to boil."

d. He was conscientious. His supreme aim was to have a conscience void of offense. Because of the blight of sin conscience needs to be disciplined by the Word of God.

3. A trade at Tarsus. Perhaps after his college course at Jerusalem he returned to Tarsus and learned tent making. Thus in later life he was able to support himself while preaching the gospel. One rabbi said "He that teacheth not his son a trade doeth the same as if he had taught him to

III. Saul's Citizenship (Acts 22:27,

In the providence of God, the apostle to the Gentiles was a free-born Roman citizen. He was loyal to his country, while at the same time strictly religious. Right relationship to God sanctifies loyalty to one's country.

IV. Saul's Defense Before Agrippa

(Acts 26:1-27). He expressed his delight that he now could speak and tell his case to one who could follow his line of argument, but doubtless, he was more delighted in that he could witness to him of the Saviour. 1. His manner of life (vv. 4-12). He had been in accord with the most rigid sect of the Jews. Therefore, he possessed the common Jewish hope of a coming Deliverer.

2. His supernatural conversion (vv. 13-15). It was through the personal appearance of Jesus Christ to him on the way to Damascus.

3. Commissioned by Jesus Christ and sent to the Gentiles (vv. 16-18).

4. His consecration (vv. 19-23). Upon receipt of his commission he instantly obeyed.

5. His appeal to Agrippa (vv. 25-27). He was anxious to have Agrippa act on the knowledge that he had:

1. Circumcised the eighth day (v. 5). 2. Of the stock of Israel (v. 5).

3. Of the tribe of Benjamin (v. 5). Benjamin had always remained loyal to the national customs.

4. A Hebrew of the Hebrews (v. 5). He was of Hebrew parentage, not a proselyte.

5. Touching the law, a Pharisee (v.5). The Pharisees were a sect among the lews most zealous for the rights and ceremonies of Judaism.

6. Concerning zeal, persecuting the church (v. 6). He proved his zeal by the positive effort to stamp out that which was threatening Judaism.

7. Touching the righteousness which is in the law, blameless (v. 6).

Pass Through Fire

Christians are like vases, they must pass through the fire ere they can shine. And often the very furnace and the flame, which they call destruction, are only burning in the graces which are to be their everlasting beauty and glory.

Joy Out of Sorrow

There are joys which can come to us only through sorrow. There are revealings of divine truth which we can get only when earth's lights have gone out.

TWO GOOD REASONS

"I didn't see you in church last night," said the parson who was noted for his very long sermons. "How's that?"

"Too wet," was the reply. "But it's always dry inside," protested the parson.

"That's another reason," was the unkind retort.—Stray Stories.
