Groundhog Day

Of all the weather superstitions, perhaps none has been more widespread than that associated with Groundhog Day, Feb. 2. According to a belief held by many, the groundhog emerges from his winter hibernation on that day, and if he sees his shadow he goes back into his hole for another six weeks, during which a continuance of winter weather may be expected.

If, on the other hand, February 2 is cloudy, the animal will remain outside, which is a sign of an early spring.

Just how the groundhog keeps track of the date, including the extra day in leap year, is not explained, but many actually believe he does it.

Other animals than the groundhog are supposed to behave similarly. In Germany it is the badger; in England the hedgehog; in France the marmot, and among the Scandinavians the bear.

February 2 is also known as Candlemas Day in the church calendar commemorating the presentation of Christ in the temple and among its observances is the blessing of candles for sacred use.

The First Phonograph

In a letter written a few years before his death, Thomas A. Edison said: "I conceived the idea of recording and reproducing human speech and other sounds on July 18, 1877."

Mr. Edison went on to say that he worked on his first model of the first phonograph during the following two months and that this first model was entirely successful. He also declared that this model comprised all the basic principles of modern phonographs and talking machines.

Many will remember the early phonograph records made on wax cylinders. These were greatly inferior to the later disc records, besides they were very fragile and short-lived. Still the principles used in recording and reproducing the sounds were the same as those employed up to the present.

The world owes much of its enjoyment and instruction to the idea born in Edison's fertile brain more than 56 years ago. It is gratifying that he was permitted to enjoy a long life in which to develop and witness the universal employment of this and other epoch-making inventions which he gave to mankind.

Widespread Benefits

When one purchases an item of household equipment it is seldom realized how far-reaching are the effects upon employment, owing to the many sources from which its various raw materials are frequently drawn.

This fact was strikingly illustrated in a recent article on the washing machine industry which incidentally showed an increase in employment and production over the previous year for eight consecutive months during 1933, the increase in November being 44 per cent.

Raw materials for these machines, with their accompanying motors, wringers and other parts have come from no less than 26 states and several foreign countries. Among the 100 or more materials involved in their manufacture are steel, hardwood, rubber, sulphur, zinc oxide, clay, limestone, pigskin, flaxseed, and so on. The same principle holds good, of course, in the manufacture of many other articles of household equipment.

Thus the American housewife, through the purchase of washers and other labor-saving devices, not only relieves herself of much of the drudgery of the past, but contributes greatly to the relief of unemployment in many lines.

How Many Are A Few

In a somewhat light vein the Christian Science Monitor once asked and discussed the question, "How Many Are a Few?" No conclusion was reached, as there appeared to be no definite authority which might be cited to establish the answer.

Later a correspondent in Newark called attention to the fact that a small Scotch boy had found the answer long ago, according to a story which may be briefly related thus:

The boy was entitled to a "few apples" as a prize for memorizing more verses of scripture than any other member of his Sunday school class, where upon the teacher gave him three apples. The boy demurred, asserting that he should have eight apples. Pressed for his authority, the lad triumphantly produced it from no less a source than Holy Writ, quoting I Peter, third chapter, 20th verse, which says: "Few, that is, eight souls were saved by water."

His contention being incontrovertible, the boy got his eight apples. And, therefore, if anyone should ask, "a few" means eight.

New York's Skyscrapers

Higher and higher go the great skyscrapers of New York City, the Empire building reaching a height exceeding the Eiffel tower's 1,000 feet.

Observing the piling up of these massive buildings, some have wondered whether eventually Manhattan Island might not give way under the strain and collapse into the surrounding waters.

No such thing is likely, engineers point out, for two reasons. First, the city is built on solid rock which would bear any weight man could ever put upon it. Second, the great amount of stone removed in excavations for these great buildings is heavier than the completed skyscrapers, although of apparently much less bulk.

Citing a recent example, the stone excavated for the Chrysler building weighed twice as much as the building itself, which when built was the highest in the world. So, the weight supported by the island is becoming less instead of greater.

Train Vs. Airplane

Train travel between New York and Chicago in 14 hours, on a schedule requiring speeds as high as 90 miles an hour, is predicted within five or six years by a Pennsylvania railroad official. This unprecedented speed will be made possible by electrification of the line for the entire distance, it is said, and will cut about six hours from the fastest present schedules.

Already some eastern divisions of the road are being prepared for the use of electric locomotives, and this form of motive power is being actually adopted or seriously considered by a number of lines.

One reason for seeking increased speed is seen in the competition of air transport lines, which are taking from the railroads an increasing volume of passenger traffic.

For a good while it has been known that train speeds could be materially increased by electrification, but heretofore the cost of equipment necessary to make the change has been a deterring factor.

A Man Named Branigan
 By HORACE THATCHER

©, by McClure Newspaper Syndicate WNU Service

ON HER twenty-sixth birthday Sally Talbot decided that so far as present plans indicated she was destined to be an old maid. "But," she concluded, "it isn't as though I'd never been asked. Tom did and he would suit almost any girl who wanted to get married, but for me he was too dull."

Through her six years working in an insurance office Sally had managed to save five hundred dollars in a secret bank account. Now that she was twenty-six she had decided to take a vacation and see California as well as the Grand Canyon and the Rocky mountains. She had approached her friend, Dorothy Evans, about the trip suggesting that they take the trip together. After deep discussion the two young women decided that they could accomplish a good deal of sight-seeing in the West during their three weeks' vacation. So Sally paid a visit to the central ticket agency to get some learned advice on the proposed vacation.

She came back and was most enthusiastic. "Dot, there's the nicest man up there. He certainly took good care of me. He said his name was 'Branigan.' Well," she ended with a laugh, "you know I always did enjoy the Irish."

Dorothy and Sally joined forces and went to see Mr. Branigan to ask for further information about their proposed trip. As Dorothy was just as favorably impressed with the gentleman as Sally, whenever they were together on an evening they thought up more questions to confront Mr. Branigan with.

These get-togethers were by appointment as Sally lived in Stonewall, a little suburb town, and she commuted to work in the city. One day as she was at the station waiting to catch a train to convey her to work, she was exceedingly surprised to see a familiar face behind a newspaper. There was Mr. Branigan reading.

As he didn't apparently notice her, Sally was curious to know all about Mr. Branigan and whether or not he was a married man.

At lunch that day she told Dorothy all about the incident as they ate their toast sandwiches and drank their malted milks through straws. "And, Dorothy," said Sally, "I've virtually told that man my entire family history and how much money I have in the bank. Before I know it, it may be the talk of the town."

After confessing her story to Dorothy, Sally decided to risk taking an extra hour for lunch and she set off to see Mr. Branigan at his office. She concluded that she would not mention Stonewall until he did.

But after Mr. Branigan smiled so graciously at her, Sally let her tongue slip. "Mr. Branigan," she said, "do you live in Stonewall?"

The young man said that he did and returned to the discussion of her proposed trip with Dorothy.

But somehow Sally was more interested in Mr. Branigan than in her trip at that particular moment. "I had no idea that you lived in Stonewall but a friend of mine said she knew a man of that name there and our descriptions coincided."

"Oh, yes," said Mr. Branigan, "I'm an old citizen of Stonewall. In fact, I was born there and have lived there ever since."

"And you've never seen me about the town, have you?"

"I've known you by sight for many years," Mr. Branigan answered quietly. "Oh," and Sally couldn't hide a blush.

Presently Branigan offered her a slip of paper to sign and as she scrawled her name on it, the ticket agent said, "I had an idea the S stood for Sylvia. So it's Sally. You see, I stood behind you one day as you were buying your commutation ticket. Let's see—you were wearing a blue hat and a blue coat with gray fur on the collar. Am I right?"

Sally was forced to smile. "You have a remarkable memory, Mr. Branigan." Then she looked at her watch and decided that it was past time she had started back to the office. With a hasty good-by she dashed out of the office.

A week before she and Dorothy were to start on their vacation, Mr. Branigan dropped in one evening at her home. They were looking over pictures of Yellowstone park when the telephone rang. It was Dorothy and she said her mother had been taken ill and would have to go to the mountains. There was nothing for Dorothy to do but to cancel her western trip and spend her vacation with her mother.

"Well, there go all my plans for a grand time in the wild and woolly West," said Sally as she joined Mr. Branigan on the lounge. "And after I've bothered you so much getting the entire trip planned to perfection."

Mr. Branigan closed the book of pictures. He asked her when she first had come to him for information.

"It was three weeks ago," said Sally.

"Well, I've known you intimately for three weeks and I've wanted to know you intimately for the past couple of years. What say we get married and then we can take the trip for a honeymoon?"

Somehow Sally wasn't as shocked at Mr. Branigan's statement as most people might have been. Instead she laughed. "It's sort of sudden," she said, "but I must say your invitation sounds most attractive."

Says Code Best, Perhaps Only Remedy, For Coal

Chicago.—“The code is the best, if not the only remedy, for the bituminous coal industry's years of misery. It has everything in its favor and nothing to condemn it,” says George Brolin, coal editor of the Chicago Journal of Commerce in a resume of the tribulations of the trade. “A great future is in store for the coal industry under the code.

This year will probably see development of the code to a point where its fullest advantages can be realized.”

“Every year since coal mining has been the principal source of power for the country it has been safe to say that turbulency has predominated in the industry. Last year witnessed viciousness in competition such as never known before. Price reductions forced wages down and sheriffs stood in the front yards of many companies held back only by bankers and others who did not want the burden of the properties. Staggering under its own burden, the industry protested against governmental intervention. Like many other industries, it gave little heed to the significance of the National Industrial Recovery Act until it became a law.

The National Coal Association, the nation-wide organization of bituminous coal operators, early in December came out openly for the code and NRA. Illinois and Indiana have benefited in a return of lost markets. What they gained, the eastern mines lost, but that loss is made up in the fact that such coal as is sold is at a fair margin of profit, which was not the case before the code.

PROLIFIC PEACHES

HAVE you ever considered as a housewife how prolific are peaches of dainty dishes? You can make pies with them, puddings, fruit combinations, ice cream, pickles, candy, cakes and cake fillings, salads and even soup. The more you think of it, the more prolific peaches become of a variety of delicious recipes with which to regale your family and friends.

But that's merely an assertion. Here's something to back it up—tested recipes for many of the uses mentioned above.

A Pie and a Pudding

Peach Pie with Whole Wheat Crust: Drain the sliced peaches from a No. 2½ can, and lay them evenly in a pie tin lined with whole wheat pastry. Mix one-half cup sugar with four tablespoons white flour, and sprinkle over. Dot with two tablespoons butter, and pour over two-thirds of a cup of the peach syrup. Cover with upper crust, and bake in a hot oven—425 to 450 degrees—for thirty minutes. This cuts into six or eight pieces.

Peach Oatmeal Pudding: Drain the peach halves from a No. 2 can and arrange them in the bottom of a buttered round or square cake tin. Sprinkle over four tablespoons brown sugar and some cinnamon. Cream four tablespoons butter, add one-half cup brown sugar, cream again, and add one well-beaten egg. Add one-half cup milk alternately with one-half cup flour, two teaspoons baking powder, and one-fourth teaspoon salt, sifted together and added to one-half cup quick-cooking oatmeal. Add one-fourth teaspoon vanilla. Pour this batter over the peaches and bake in a moderate oven, 375 degrees, for about thirty minutes. Serve hot or cold with thin cream. Delicious! Serves eight.

A Fruit Dish and Ice Cream

Peach Celestial: Scald four cups milk, reserving one-half cup to mix with eight tablespoons cornstarch, one-half cup sugar and one-fourth teaspoon salt. Add and stir until thick and creamy. Cover and cook twenty minutes. Add one teaspoon lemon flavoring and one teaspoon orange flavoring, and pour out onto a flat serving dish, cover top with canned peach halves, and chill. Sprinkle with moist canned coconut over entire top. In serving take up a peach with each serving. Serves eight.

Peach and Macaroon Ice Cream: Press peaches from a No. 1 can through a sieve, add two-thirds cup sugar and three cups thin cream, and freeze to a mush. Add two-thirds cup macaroon crumbs and continue freezing. Serve flanked by two small meringue glacés. Serves eight to ten.

Pickles and Candy

Peach and Pineapple Conserve: Mix together the contents of a No. 2 can of peaches, a No. 2 can of crushed pineapple, one cup seedless raisins, one and one-half cups brown sugar, and the juice and grated rind of four lemons. The peaches should be finely cut.

Cook gently until thick, adding one cup chopped walnuts ten minutes before done. Pour into jelly glasses or jars. Makes about three pints.

Peach Jelly Cakes: Press the contents of an 8-ounce can of peaches through a sieve, making a puree. Add one-half cup pectin syrup, one-half cup sugar, and one tablespoon corn syrup and one tablespoon lemon juice, and boil till thermometer registers 222 degrees. Pour into greased pans so that mixture is about one-half inch thick, and let cool. Let stand overnight in a cold place. Cut in cubes and roll in powdered sugar. You may also dip this in chocolate or in melted fondant if you prefer.

A Salad and a Soup

Peach and Cottage Cheese Salad: On a large chop plate or salad plate arrange the required number of individual lettuce nests. In each one place a well-chilled canned peach half, cut side up. Pile cottage cheese lightly in the center of each peach half, and garnish with preserved grapes or maraschino cherries and mayonnaise.

Sparkling Ginger Bouillon: Smooth together one teaspoon cornstarch and one tablespoon cold water, and add to the syrup from a quart can of peaches, the juice of half a lemon and one teaspoon sugar. Cook until slightly thickened. Chill. Just before serving, combine with one pint iced ginger ale, and serve at once. Serves eight.*

Three Buildings Razed by Fire in Georgetown

Georgetown, Jan. 29.—Three buildings, one of them a two story structure with the second floor being used as a hotel, were destroyed by fire of undetermined origin here today. Danville firemen aided in putting out the flames.

The blaze destroyed the Henry Clark Grocery Store, above which was located a small hotel; the Bennett Barber Shop, and the Crawford Meat Market. Damage was estimated at $50,000.
