Record Breaking Crowd Sees "Little Women"

L. J. Fransfelder, proprietor of the Star theater, Villa Grove, paid The News office a pleasant call, Wednesday morning. He ran the picture, "Little Women" three days and states that he had a record-breaking crowd, the attendance being the largest he has enjoyed in the past four years. Quite a number of local people were in attendance.

Being fully convinced that it pays him to advertise in The News, he has contracted to run an ad regularly in this paper.

Read his ad in this paper each week if you are interested in the latest and best pictures of the year.

Longview High School News

DECEMMA MARTINIE, REPORTER.

The "Peppy Pirate" club has started selling chile here during the noon hour on Monday and Wednesday.

The Sophomore class will entertain the student body and faculty at a St. Valentine's party on Monday night, Feb. 15.

Our next basketball game will be here Friday night, February 9. The visiting team is Homer. Candy and pop-corn will be sold by the "Peppy Pirates."

It is believed that the 1934 Champaign County tournament at Fisher broke all existing attendance records. Nearly 1600 people were present Saturday night to see Long View, in its second straight championship win over Mahomet.

The games played by Long View during the tournament and the scores are as follows: Long View and Sadorus, 44-26. Long View and Fisher, 28-19. Long View and Rantoul, 28-21. Long View and Mahomet, 42-41.

Colclasure Must Serve Prison Term

Dios Colclasure who formerly resided near Sidney, pleaded guilty in Vermilion County Circuit Court, Friday afternoon and was sentenced to the state penitentiary for one to 10 years. He had been indicted on charges of operating a confidence game.

Colclasure was alleged to have secured two checks from a Danville packing company, after having presented two forged weight checks.

After his arrest, Colclasure was taken to the packing company office and, while there, made an attempt to escape. He was captured by Sheriff F. W. Ward after a short chase.

Will Resume Street Work Here Friday

The work of rocking the balance of the streets of the village will be resumed on Friday of this week, states C. T. Henson, superintendent of the project. Four blocks were rocked in the first project. The second project which received final approval last Monday, calls for rocking of the balance of the streets. When this job is completed the village will have about 20 blocks of rocked streets.

Chevrolet Operating Near Capacity

Detroit, Mich.—With a payroll almost equal to its all-time high, Chevrolet entered February well on the way toward capacity operation, M. E. Coyle, general manager, announced today. Production increased more than 50 per cent during the last week of January—from 2,141 cars Jan. 24 to 3,304 on Jan. 31—and coordination of activities in the 21 domestic plants was proceeding at a rate which indicated steady progress from this time on.

Dealers throughout the country, Mr. Coyle said, will soon be making immediate delivery of any model desired.

Payrolls on Jan. 31 totalled 53,203 persons, as compared with 33,727 at the corresponding period last year. The payroll increase for the week was nearly 2,400 persons. These figures include only the workers on Chevrolet's own payroll. Inclusion of Fisher Body workers producing bodies for the new Chevrolet would practically double that total.

"Our own direct payroll," said Mr. Coyle, breaks all Chevrolet records since the spring of 1929, and is the largest we have ever had at this time of year. As a matter of fact, it is within 3,000 of our greatest payroll of all time.

Mr. Coyle also emphasized the fact that the company is taking back its old employees, and will have no need for new personnel at any of its plants.

Bill Prepared To Set Up Job Insurance in States

Bearing what appeared to be an administration label, a bill looking toward establishment of a job insurance plan in every state today was ready for introduction in Congress.

Drawn by Senator Wagner, Democrat, New York, in co-operation with Secretary Perkins, the measure would set up a Federal tax on all employers. Each, however, would be given exemptions for contributions to approved state unemployment insurance systems.

The Labor Secretary, after a call with Wagner at the White House, said she was not authorized to announce that Mr. Roosevelt would place the Administration behind the bill to push it through Congress, but added that he was "profoundly interested."

Four-Act Comedy Here Saturday Night

The Junior Class of the Allerton Community High School will present "Oh Susan," a comedy in four acts, at the Broadlands Theater, Saturday night, Feb. 10, beginning at 8 o'clock. Admission 10c and 15c.

The following Broadlands students attending Allerton High School are included in the cast: Misses Gayle Potter, Alyce Maxwell, Phyllis Bergfield; and Dayle Potter.

Allerton High School News

JESSIE R. WITT, REPORTER.

Bruce David has been absent for several days on account of illness.

Bernice McDaniels was a visitor at the high school on Friday morning.

The Homer five will play here Tuesday, Feb. 6. Homer having lost one player will be out for victory even with this loss.

The members of the Biology class are stuffing a hawk which was presented to the class. The boys seem to be enjoying this work a great deal.

John Howard, an impersonator of Seth Parker, was a speaker in the assembly Monday afternoon, preceding an entertainment given in the high school gym on Monday night.

The Junior play which was given in the high school gym on Tuesday night of last week was very well attended. The play will be presented in the Broadlands Opera House on Saturday night, Feb. 10.

The Allerton basketball team won over the Indianola quintet last Friday evening 40-27. Coach Wade's remodeled team worked effectively and the new men will deserve credit for playing such an exceptionally good game.

A Fair Question

Stirred by growing tendency of his fellow townsmen to use the newspaper for everything but advertising, a South Dakota editor recently asked them pertinently, in a page one box:

"If a member of your family died would you send out the obituary in a circular letter? If you were to enlarge your store would you tell folks in a hotel register? If you were to have a wedding at your house would you tack the news on a telephone post?"

"Then why in heck don't you put your advertising in the newspaper, too?"

A Letter From Charles Swick

V-1674th Company, C. C. C. S. P., Camp Black Hawk, Rock Island, Ill.

Dear Joe: In Roosevelt's great army consisting of the C. C. C. Boy we have 3 beans and a mess-kit, but no kidding we really do have plenty of chuck.

How is everyone in the little village of Broadlands? I hope everyone is well. This finds me fairly well at the present.

We are located four miles from Rock Island, four and one-half from Davenport, Iowa across the Mississippi River and five miles from Moline, Ill., and about two mile from Milan. So you see, if I had the do-ra-me, could step lively. But at that it don't pay to step too fast around here for they put them out on their keyster for being intoxicated on the works. We had four put out here pay day from the Windy City of Chicago.

We have 200 men in this Camp and most of them are swell fellows—of course a few swell heads, when they get three stripes or more—but it sure is a job to conduct ex-service men of this age.

Well Joe, you can tell the citizens of the U. S. that we really earn that old slick dollar-a-day. Of course we have a few gold brickers in the Camp.

I am on the truck, hauling rocks from the stone quarry in Enclave, Iowa. Some of them weigh five hundred pounds or more—"Oh that old back of mine." I suppose that old age is creeping up on me.

We had it real cold for a while here, but at the present time is normal clear weather and that sure is something. I suppose that you have about the same weather there.

Well Joe it is the old army game, especially when it comes to rumors. The latest is the C. C. C. will extend to April 1936. Altho of course it may be a rumor.

Well Joe today is Sunday so I believe I will look over the scenery, so regards to all.

Yours Truly,
Chas. Swick.

Over 300 Are Busy on Two CWA Survey Jobs

One hundred men continue to work on the geological resources of Illinois project of CWA, as being directed by the Illinois State Geological Survey. All men for whom work requisitions have been made are now at work those in charge reported Saturday.

W. D. Gerber, engineer, State Water Survey, in charge of the project devoted to a study of Illinois water resources, reports 210 men on the job. At least two men are working in each county, he explained. They are gathering information on the water supply, and the amount of water obtainable for wells.

They likewise are getting material on the size of public and private reservoirs, and data for use by the new state planning board, as regards the water supply.

Speed Limits

It has been rather well established that laws which arbitrarily fix speed limits for automobiles are little protection against accidents. The speed at which one may safely drive depends upon the road and traffic conditions involved.

A high executive of one of the leading automobile manufacturing companies, who has made a close study of speed in its relation to accidents, declares that 50 or even 60 miles an hour over good open roads in the country may be safer than 15 miles an hour in cutting corners in town.

The safe driver is not necessarily the slow driver, but one who uses common sense whether driving fast or slow. Careless driving while turning corners, passing pedestrians or other cars, crossing railroad tracks and maneuvering in congested traffic is the greatest menace to life and limb.

Sense, not speed, is the important factor in determining whether a driver is safe or unsafe.

Fishy Church Folks

Down in Butler county, Alabama, according to the Greenville Advocate, is a colored preacher who has a keen insight into human nature, particularly as applied to sizing up the members of his flock. In a recent sermon he likened various types of church members to certain species of fish, somewhat as follows:

Some, he said, are like a trout, always jumping—from one church to another. Others were likened to the sucker—easy to catch, but quick to spoil. Then he mentioned the flounder, which can only see one way—he sees the faults of the preacher, but never sees his own. Another type was compared with the catfish, which hides on the bottom of the creek until a fresher arouses him—the church member who warms up when a revival is going on, but lies dormant at other times. Another type was likened to the eel—a slippery, slick fellow, hard to handle. And so on.

While the good colored brother's sermon was a bit droll, it included observations which might appropriately be applied, not only to the peculiarities of church members, but to those of humanity as a whole. Most of us are rather fishy in some respects.

Save The Children

Any accident involving loss of life or limb is deplorable enough, but none is more deplorable than one in which bright, happy and ambitious school children are killed or maimed through carelessness on the part of those whose duty it is to provide for their protection.

Two unusual accidents were reported recently, both being caused by the collapse of portions of school buildings under the weight of the young victims. That no immediate loss of life occurred was almost miraculous, although several were very badly hurt.

If any building in the world should be so constructed as to make its collapse impossible it is a school building. Every school structure should be rigidly inspected from time to time to insure its safety in this respect.

Ample exits for use in case of fire should be invariably provided, and fire drills should be held at regular and frequent intervals.

Another danger that cannot be too carefully guarded against is that due to the widespread and growing operation of school buses. Only the most capable and careful drivers should be employed, and they should be required to see that brakes and other equipment are in good condition at all times.

School boards have a grave responsibility in all these matters, and they should insist upon the fullest cooperation on the part of principals and teachers. "Save the children" should be their motto and slogan.

Sidelights

Warned by his physicians that he had only a few weeks to live, W. A. Grant, 82, of Exeter, England, pulled a big farewell party for about 400 guests, who made whoopee until nearly daylight. Then Grant took a nap and was up and eating breakfast at 7:45, when he said: "Not dead yet; feeling fine."

Hollywood recently had a joke on Will Rogers, who in his time has joked about nearly everybody. The genial Will is not a smoker, but in a new film he was required to puff vigorously on a pipe, which performance made him deathly sick. The production was stopped until he recovered and a substitute for tobacco could be obtained for his stunt.

The first important aircraft accomplishment of 1934 was the recent flight of six Navy planes from San Francisco to Honolulu, a distance of 2,400 land miles, the longest successful mass flight on record. While the speed made by these planes was not extraordinary, the performance was on the whole most creditable.

Guests who attended a party given by Mr. and Mrs. Julius Hackman of Detroit a few nights ago were received by a most affable door man, who smilingly led them into a cloak room, where they were relieved of their valuables by another attendant at the point of a pistol. In the confusion which ensued the two crooks escaped with their loot.

Speed idiots should, but probably will not, take warning from what happened to one of their number, a taxi driver at Miami, a few days ago. He told his five passengers he would take them from Miami to Miami Beach in record time. Driving wildly, he crashed through the viaduct railing and plunged his car into the bay, drowning all five passengers and being critically injured himself.

Ed Howe has announced his retirement from publishing his famed Monthly "devoted to indignation and information," at the age of 80. This will cause regret to those who have enjoyed and profited by his pungent sayings and homely philosophy. Although he left school to become a printing office "devil" at the age of 12, Ed Howe became internationally famous as editor and author.

Credits NRA For Curb On Ruinous Oil Waste

Cleveland.—"There is no question but that the petroleum code, backed by the authority of the NRA, has greatly improved the outlook for the oil industry," said W. T. Holliday, president of the Standard Oil Company of Ohio to the Cleveland Plain Dealer. A year ago, continued Holliday, the industry faced a situation which seemed wellnigh hopeless. In addition to drastic effects of depression, we faced basic difficulties caused by chronic overproduction. The contrast between January 1933 and now is startling. Crude is under control and no longer ruinously wasted. Prices are at levels which permit companies to operate efficiently and break even. Demoralization gave way to orderly cooperation and employment has been greatly increased.

What's New

Submerged rice crops may be harvested by means of a two-ton machine developed and tested in California.

By means of a simple device called the vocalphone, a singer may hear his or her voice exactly as it sounds to the audience.

Wood screws which have been chemically treated to make them easy to drive are being offered as a time and labor saver for the woodworker.

A patent has been issued for a new device to prevent ice forming on windshields. Warm air from the motor is collected and carried to the glass.

A loudspeaker weighing nearly a ton was tested out at the Anacostia Naval Air Station recently. It is said to have a voice range of about 30 miles.

Two men in Chicago who were apparently dead from carbon monoxide poisoning, were revived after two hours work of physicians and firemen by the use of "methylene blue" solution.

Dog Gone!
By GENEVRA COOK
©. by McClure Newspaper Syndicate. WNU Service

MR. MOONEY of Mooseville stood in the door of his cabin in the woods which covered the side of Mooseville mountain, peering near-sightedly at a folded copy of a newspaper which he held in a leathery-brown hand.
LOST: Big tan dog resembling hound. Name: Floppy-ear. Reward: $10.00. P. O. Box 121, Mooseville.
His steps made slightly uncertain by years and rheumatism, Mr. Mooney limped across the cabin, and opened the door into the woodshed.
"Come 'ere, Floppy-ear!"
The big tan dog ambled toward him. Mr. Mooney regarded her speculatively. "Now if those people list put that air notice in the paper sees my sign I stuck up in the post office, I guess likely your folks'll be right along, ma'am. Some o' those summer folks up to the lake, most likely. Don't know no better'n to go wanderin' all over the maountin'."
At the sound of a car laboring noisily up the steep hill, he closed the woodshed door upon the dog, and hobbled outside. The car was an old one painted blue and gold, and the driver was a fair-haired slim girl, with blue eyes to match her sweater and beret. She left the car at the end of the road out past the thick trees clustered around the edge of the clearing, and came running across the stony field to the cabin.
"Hello!" she called. "Have you got Floppy-ear?" She came up to him, breathless. "Oh, please, is she here? I've looked everywhere!"
There was the sound of barking from behind the wood shed door. "Oh, she is here! Here's the reward." She thrust into the tough wrinkled right hand of Mr. Mooney a crisp, new ten dollar bill.
Suddenly there was a honk! honk! from the direction of the car. "Oh, whoever is blowing the horn of my car? I came up alone! Wait!" And she was gone, leaving Mr. Mooney looking after her, his mouth still opened to speak.
"I beg your pardon, sir!" Mr. Mooney gave a violent start. There at his side was a tall, good-looking youth with dark hair.
"I came to claim my dog, sir. You have her here, I think—in the shed, perhaps?" With three long strides, he was past the astonished Mr. Mooney and had opened the door of the shed. The dog came bounding out to him, jumping at his legs, exhibiting every sign of joy and recognition.
"Here," smiled the young man. "Here is the reward! Thank you, sir!" He thrust into the left hand of Mr. Mooney a neatly folded ten dollar bill. "Come, Floppy-ear!" he called, and started across the field.
Before he had gone two steps the girl was facing him, her eyes flashing. Without speaking to him, she turned scornfully away. "Come, Floppy-ear!" she called. And the dog came running to her, jumping, barking, with joy.
Mr. Mooney, because he was near-sighted, had to move nearer to them in order to puzzle it out. He had to move nearer still, because he was a little hard of hearing. But neither of them noticed him at all.
"You don't want that dog," the man was saying in an even, firm voice, that somehow held a note of bitterness. "Come here, Floppy-ear." The dog came.
"You don't value a gift when you don't care anything for the giver."
"I do care for the giver—I—I—mean, I—I—did—I mean—"
The young man's voice became softer, and Mr. Mooney moved a little nearer. "Just what do you mean, Jocelyn?"
"I—I mean what I said—Gerald."
Mr. Mooney was getting nervous. He didn't like to have folks kissing right in front of his cabin. It wasn't respectable. He cleared his throat as loud as he could, but no one paid any attention. Then he tried something else.
"Come here, Floppy-ear," he called. The dog came.
The man was taking something out of his pocket. "And you'll wear my ring again, Jocelyn?" he was saying, and slipping it sparkling in the sunlight, on her slim white finger.
Together they turned and smiled for a moment at the leathery-brown old man who was staring at them from the yard. Together they called "Come here, Floppy-ear!" The dog went.
Mr. Mooney stood in the door of his cabin and watched them walk, close, down across the stony field, the dog running joyfully at their heels. He looked down at the two ten dollar bills, one in each hand.
"Doggone!" said Mr. Mooney.

Smelly Skunk American Animal That Has No Fear
What is the most fearless American animal . . . mountain lion, grizzly bear?
Whether it is fearlessness or just unmitigated gall, many farmers and woodsmen concede the skunk a "strong" reason for being accorded that distinction. The odor of burnt coffee which the animal has the knack of disseminating is declared to inspire the animal with a degree of self-confidence which would not deter it from facing much larger—but perhaps not so fearsome—carnivorous animals.
It is this inherent fearlessness of the skunk which, authorities claim, render the wood pussy so indifferent to human habitations when it is hungry for poultry and eggs. The skunk makes no bones about establishing its den under a dwelling house or barn if food in the wild is less plentiful than around the barnyard.
As to the skunk's activities in game covers, the More Game Birds foundation in its recent booklet, "More Game Birds by Controlling Their Natural Enemies," declares it is particularly destructive to the eggs of ground nesting birds. For the farmer or sportsman who would reduce the number of skunks by trapping, a significant bait, rotten eggs, is recommended.
The vile fluid, which is the skunk's unenvied means of defense, will cause severe inflammation of the eyes, and cases are cited of Indians who have lost their sight from this cause.

Dolls Once Figured as Objects of Fear, Hate
Dolls, which are today the best-loved toys of little girls, were once objects of fear or hate. They figured in strange rites of black magic and were specially cherished by women. They were used to terrify and cast spells upon rivals, enemies or unfortunate husbands. After certain "magical" ceremonies, it was thought that whatever was then done to the dolls would be felt by the man or woman it resembled. Sometimes the doll was placed before a fire and allowed slowly to melt. As it melted the bewitched person was supposed to die of fear.
According to a distinguished German scholar, during the late Stone age every family needed these dolls to keep off evils, and manufacturing them became an industry. During excavation work archeologists have found doll-sized idols made from all sorts of materials, from stone to terra-cotta, tin and bronze. Some were cut out of sheet-tin and look much like modern tin soldiers. In early Asia and Egypt the tombs of important people were filled with quite a population of doll figures. These acted as substitutes for the usual wholesale human sacrifices. In other places it was the custom for a bride to sacrifice her dolls to the goddess Diana just before the wedding.

Norse Women Wore Bob
In recent years many people have claimed to be the inventor of the shingle, but no one has been able to establish an indisputable title, and it is possible that no one ever will. The Welsh women bobbed their hair 700 years ago, and there are older records even than that of close-cropped feminine fashions. A few years ago archeological excavations near Tilsit, in East Prussia, brought to light remains of the Viking civilization which revealed that many a Norse maiden wore her luxurious golden hair clipped short. Thus more than 1,000 years ago shingling was a fashion among women, while the mode for men was flowing locks.

Would Save Waterloo Site
Champions of things historical are fighting a proposal to remove the legal restrictions which have prevented building on the site of Waterloo, scene of the great battle and one of the world's greatest battlefields. Its nearness to Brussels has made Waterloo a place of pilgrims to many visitors to Belgium. Many people make the trip because they remember Byron's famous lines on the subject in "Childe Harold." Other and more recent battlefields draw larger numbers of tourists, but Waterloo remains the scene of one of the decisive engagements in world history.

Nothing Can Fall to Mine Floor
Due to the earth's motion, nothing can fall to the bottom of the deepest mine shaft. A wrench dropped from the mouth of the shaft was found lodged against the side of the shaft several hundred feet down. Later, the Michigan College of Mines conducted tests along this line, using a marble suspended by a thread about twelve feet below the mouth. When the marble was motionless, the thread was burned by the flame of a candle. The marble fell, but only to a point 500 feet down, where it stopped on the east wall.—Popular Mechanics Magazine.

Bread Tree Has Many Uses
The breadfruit tree of the tropical islands in the Pacific ocean is a tree of many uses. Its fruit, which is globular and about the size of a melon, is used as a vegetable and also, with different seasonings, as a dessert. Flour made from dried slices of this fruit is sometimes made into bread. The fibrous inner bark of the breadfruit tree is used in the manufacture of cloth. The wood is used for canoes and furniture, and the milky juice which exudes from the stem is the basis of a glue and a caulking material.

Boarder—It tastes to me as if it was the chicken she didn't catch.

Customer—I'd like to buy a muzzler.
Dealer—How's this one?
Customer—Oh, that wouldn't do.
Dealer—But I just sold one of this pattern to a woman.
Customer—Well, it might do for a woman but I want this for a dog.

Yes, answered the barber. I keep that way in order to prove to my customers what will happen if they don't use it.

The patient teacher was trying her best to show the small boy how to read with some expression. Johnny read the sentence, "Where-are-you-going?" in the same even voice, without any accent.
Try that again, said the teacher. Read just as if you were talking. Notice that mark at the end.
Johnny studied the question mark a while and an idea seemed to dawn on him. Then he read out, triumphantly: "Where are you going, little buttonhook?"

Good Results With Sow
And Litter Project

One of the best vocational agriculture projects of the past year was that of Clarence Phelps.

The litter consisted of ten pigs which were farrowed March 1, 1933. They were raised according to the McClean County System of Swine Sanitation and were fed a ration consisting of corn, bluegrass pasture, tankage, and mineral mixture. The mineral mixture consisted of bone-meal, limestone and salt.

The four best pigs of the litter were exhibited at the St. Joseph Community and Vocational Fair last September and won premiums totalling $10.50.

Clarence kept an accurate record of all labor, expenses and returns. The following statement can be made from these records:

Value of Production	$100.50
Cost of Production	$69.45
Total Profit	$31.05
Allowed for his Labor	$7.40
Total Income	$38.45

A $1.50 Dinner for 6

THE interest of the following dinner lies in the fact that it serves six people for $1.50 and tastes mighty good to half a dozen of them. Here's the menu:

- Broiled Pork Chops with Fried Apples 50¢
- Radishes 8¢
- Baked Stuffed Peppers 25¢
- Buttered Cauliflower 30¢
- Raisin Bread and Butter 13¢
- Fluffy Rice Pudding 14¢
- Coffee with Cream 10¢

Baked Stuffed Peppers: Cut three large green peppers in halves lengthwise, and remove seeds and white membrane. Par-boil one minute, drain and lay in a flat, shallow, slightly greased baking pan (or pie plate). Break one-fourth of a package of macaroni in small pieces, boil until tender, and drain. Simmer for 5 few minutes one-half the contents of a No. 2 can of tomatoes, one-half teaspoon grated onion, salt and pepper, and add the macaroni and fill the pepper cases. Cover with one-third cup grated cheese. Bake in a moderate oven until the cheese is brown.

Fluffy Rice Pudding: Parboil three tablespoons rice in salted boiling water for ten minutes, then drain. Scald the contents of a 6-ounce can of evaporated milk with three-fourths cup water, add the rice and cook in a double boiler until very soft. Mix one-third cup sugar with one beaten egg yolk, add to the rice and cook one minute longer. Cool. Beat the egg white and fold in with one-fourth cup beaten cream. Chill. Serve in glasses with a sprinkling of nutmeg on top.*

Nuts of Pinyon Found on Western Pine Trees

Pinyon nuts, the product of several varieties of low-growing western pine trees, constituted a substantial source of the food of Indians of the Southwest before the white man invaded that territory. These nuts have continued to find favor in Mexico and southwestern United States in recent years, according to a ranger naturalist of the office of national parks, who states that at one time they brought as much as 40 cents a pound and represented a total annual market value of $1,000,000.

These highly prized nuts are found in two small cavities at the bases of the pine cones. Nuts are not produced every year, but when they are a single cone averages about 15 nuts though some contain as many as 34.

Pinyon nuts have soft shells which are easily crushed and contain solid kernels of sweet white meat. Among the Haasupais, Hopis, Navajos and other Indian tribes the nuts are used chiefly in the form of a meal into which they are ground. The Navajos also make the nuts into a paste which they use much as we use butter.

Arctic Patrol

There is no more romantic force in the world than the Canadian Mounted police, at one time known as the North-West Mounted police. From outposts in the Arctic islands "The Mounties" patrol the "roof of the North American continent" and carry the king's law to within ten degrees of the pole. In 1874, the force, then composed of 300 men of all ranks, made a demonstration from Red River, Manitoba, 2,000 miles across prairies to the foot of the Rockies. Ever since, the Indians have regarded the red coats as their friends. When a treaty between the Blackfoot Indians and the government was under negotiation, their chief said: "They have guarded us as the feathers guard the birds from the snows of winter. I will sign." The force numbers 2,500 officers and men. They watch the international boundaries to protect revenue and prevent the entrance into Canada of undesirables, and they also do excellent service in keeping a watchful eye on drug smugglers.

Woodpecker Easy to Recognize

The woodpecker is the easiest of all birds to recognize. His habits are peculiar and distinctive. He clings to the side of a tree or pole as if thrown there and stuck. True, other birds—chickadees, crested titmice, nuthatches, and brown creepers, to name a few—climb up and down tree-trunks, but these do it with a pleasing grace wholly unlike the woodpecker's clumsy and awkward movements. And, as most of them are much smaller than the woodpecker, there is little danger of making mistakes in recognition. The nuthatches are possibly the only birds likely to be confused with him; but their peculiar habit of traveling down a tree-trunk head foremost distinguishes them from the woodpecker, who always backs up when moving downward.—Our Dumb Animals.

Pea Roast and Cutlets

SOUNDS peculiar, doesn't it, to write about a pea roast and pea cutlets, just as if peas could be cut up like a meat animal. You'll find that the recipes we mean are not peculiar, but peculiarly good, though we'll have to admit that the first one is just a trifle nutty. It is

Pea and Walnut Roast: Mix lightly together one and one-half cups pea pulp, one cup soft bread crumbs, one-half cup chopped walnuts, one-fourth cup butter, two-thirds cup canned tomato soup, one beaten egg, salt, pepper and onion juice. Put into a buttered baking dish or loaf pan, and bake in a moderate oven, 350 degrees, for from thirty to forty-five minutes, or until set and brown. Serve with hot canned tomato soup, undiluted. This serves eight.

These Cutlets Are Cute

Tomato and Pea Cutlets: Combine one cup drained canned peas, one-half cup very thick white sauce and two slightly-beaten egg yolks. Drop by spoonfuls into hot, buttered skillet and fry brown, turning over once. Dip eight slices ripe tomato in flour, and sprinkle with salt and pepper. Sauté in the fat in which the cutlets cooked. Serve a cutlet on each slice of tomato. This recipe serves eight.*
