Hope for Bald Heads?

What may be a faint gleam or hope for bald-headed persons is seen in recent experiments with the powerful new cathode ray, even though new hair grown for the present state of affairs, through its agency may prove to be white.

The application of the ray to a small spot on the ear of a rabbit caused the formation of a scab, which later sloughed off, leaving a bald spot. After a second application of the ray, white hair three times as thick grew where the original brown hair had fallen out.

So far no experiments have been tried on human flesh, as the action of the ray is as yet too little understood to warrant such a risk. But if the same effect can be produced harmlessly as was obtained in the case of the rabbit, it may be possible to exchange a thin growth of natural hair for a luxuriant white crop.

This, in turn, could be dyed to any desired shade—to match the clothing or the woodwork.

Assists in Carrying Out AAA Emergency Program.

Work which the extension service of the University of Illinois College of Agriculture has been doing for years in the interests of balanced, stabilized farming and a more satisfying farm home life has been broadened into new and more extensive fields in an effort to meet the recovery and adjustment needs of the one

During the past year, for instance, the extension service not only has new needs of farmers and homemakers, but also has assisted in carrying out the emergency programs of the Agricultural Adjustment Administra-

From the beginning, the goals of the extension service have included such fundamentals as the conservation of land resources of Illinois as a continuing source of wealth to the state, the reduction of production and marketing costs, improvement in the quality of products, adjusting production to effective demand, expanding the market outlet for farm products and advancing the welfare of the farm home and the rural commu-

Progress Accelerated.

Emergency agricultural measures made necessary by the economic crisis goals. They have only accelerated the rate of progress toward these objectives. Illinois farmers, for instance, have been adjusting their cropthe fact that the acreage of grains, such as corn and wheat, has been decreasing and the acreage of legumes

Many producers, however, have been money to adjust their acreages as extensively as they would have liked to. Now the AAA has come forward with an offer of substantial financial backing to Illinois farmers who will cut their wheat acreage 15 per cent and their corn acreage 20 per cent and reduce their production of hogs for market 25 per cent.

Between 1,860,000 and 2,715,000 acres of Illinois land will be released for legumes and other replacement crops if Illinois farmers co-operate to the limit in the wheat and the corn-hog programs of the Agricultural Adjustment Administration. If put in-By the passage of innumerable to legumes, this acreag would go far toward bringing to reality the extension service's long-continued teaching that one acre out of every four should be in legumes. This is but one examthe AAA are bringing closer the goals toward which the extension service has Worked Ahead of AAA.

Even before the Agricultural Adjustment Act became a factor in Illinois agriculture, however, the agricultural extension service of the University of Illinois was revising its program to put added emphasis upon adstarted as far back as 1928 when Dean Herbert W. Mumford and his co-workers held the first "Agricultural Adjustment Conferences" out over the state. This government was continued with the 1933 arrangement of the extension service program.

With farmers suffering from weak markets, with prices for farm products touching new low points and with the failure of farm costs to decline in proportion to farm prices, the extension service started the 1933 year with added responsibilities to farmers and homemakers. Not only was the welfare of the farm family at stake. but what was of immediate public concern was the fact that the national well-being was in jeopardy. There no longer was any widespread doubt that national economic welfare largely depends upon the buying power of the

With this as a background, the program as carried out during the past stressed: (1) markets and marketing; needs; (3) the farm home as a market for farm products, and (4) efficient low-cost administration of the farm and home and the development of community interest.

By means of definite projects carried out through county farm advisers, the extension service has offered regular and systematic help on these problems to the million farm people of the Early Work in Dairying.

Aided by the extension service, for instance, the most progressive dairymen of the state have not waited for an emergency relief project to help them bolster their incomes. These dairymen, who are members of dairy herd improvement associations organized by the extension service, have proceeded with a cow culling plan at a rate which if followed by all dairymen would mean the disposal of 222,within a year.

This not only would be a long step toward reducing costs and increasing net returns in dairying, but also would wipe out part of the present troublesome surpluses. In this respect the cow culling plan which Illinois dairymen have practiced during the year is similar to recent proposals to the in the dairy industry. In addition to carrying on its regular program, the extension service has assisted with the preliminary educational and organization work in the wheat adjustment campaign and in the cornhog adjustment program, as well as in other emergency projects.

Research Accomplishments

If the University of Illinois did no teaching at all, it would justify its existence by the results of its research. A dependable estimate during the winter was to the effect that the value of the returns to the State and Nation from results of research that have come from University of Illinois laboratories exceeds $127,000,-000 per year.

47,203 In the State Institutions

Illinois' twenty-seven penal and eleemosynary institutions have a present population of 47,-203, according to a report made to Gov. Henry Horner by A. L. Bowen, director of the state department of public welfare. This figure, compared with last year's 46,151, shows a net increase of

The fact that almost ninety per cent of the annual increase represents mental and nervous cases, Director Bowen said, emphasizes the importance of Gov. Horner's recent action in appointing a state pspchiatric council, composed of representatives from each of the four medical colleges of Illinois, to cooperate with the welfare department in the study and prevention of mental and nervous disorders.

The administration's objectives in this movement, include the stressing of student instruction, improvement of the quality of medical men, and popular education. The annual increase in cases of this type received into state institutions, devoted to that phase of public welfare, has been constant for a number of years, and forcefully points to the necessity for a comprehensive program, such as Governor Horner has inaugurated, to cope more effectively with this prob-

The total enrollment at the state institutions on February 1, reached 60,168, the director's report revealed. The difference between enrollment and resident population is accounted for by prisoners on parole and absences on furlough from Old Soldiers' homes.

American Tourists to Spend 4 Billion

American car owners are expected to spend approximately three and one-half billion dollars while touring in this country this year, and an additional halfbillion while driving in Canada, Mexico and Europe, thus bringing the total national bill for vacationing via motor to four bil-

This is the estimate of the touring bureau of the Chicago Motor Club. It is based on records and statistics of expenditures by American motorists in the various countries during past

There is some difference of opinion as to whether touring decreased or not last year, the club declared in a statement. Some sources of information reveal a slight slump; our own records show a decided increase. Following are the sums which American motorists may be expected to spend this year: United States, $3,500,000,000; Canada, $350,000,000; Mexico, $50,-000,000; Europe, $100,000,000.

DEFINES BANKERS'

Head of American Bankers Association Assures the President of Confidence and Desire to Cooperate Among Bankers

WMYASHINGTON, D. C. - President Roosevelt in his address before the NRA conference here on March 5 announced that he had received the following telegram from Francis M. Law, President of the American Bankers Association:

"On this your first anniversary please allow me in behalf of the country's banks to express our full confidence and our sincere desire to cooperate in recovery. The banking structure of the country is sound and liquid and banks have never been in stronger position to function effectively. Conditions have improved to the point where it is no longer necessary for banks to be super-liquid. There is a definite call now for banks, not to extend loose credits or to make improper loans, but for a most sympathetic attitude toward legitimate credit needs and for a recognition of responsibility for their proper and vital part in the program of re-

The Soundness of Banking In an address before a recent trust conference of the association's Trust Division in New York, Mr. Law said: "A depression cannot long survive a sound banking structure if the banking structure is responsive to legitimate needs and functions in a way that is virile and alive. The most cheering fact of the present situation is the knowledge that banks are in strong position. "Recovery, even to the most pessimistic, is no longer a myth or a rumor, nor is it merely psychological. Abundant evidence and proof lie on every hand-tangible proof. With a return of confidence the wheels have begun to go round and a great many well managed businesses may look for a profit during this calendar year with fair assurance at least. For what has been achieved let us thank the President, who has labored with courage and patience and vision. Let us thank the Congress, whose members during the emergency have put the public welfare above partisanship. Let us thank one hundred twenty-five million of our own citizens who have refused to be stampeded, but rather who have kept alive the divine spark of faith and hope.

Cause for Confidence

"We may reasonably expect that the recent action of the government in stabilizing the dollar will have a marked tendency to encourage industrial and other business commitments. Business men need not be so exclusively engaged in taking counsel of their fears now that uncertainty does not haunt them.

"Much has been said about the loosing of credit by banks. During the acute period of the depression banks for the most part have not been lending normally, nor should they be blamed. With public confidence shattered the banker was properly concerned in liquidity, having in mind his primary obligation to pay off deposits. The situation has improved to the point where superliquidity no longer seems necessary. Conditions have materially changed. Banks will desire, for every reason, to return to a more normal lending policy. This means a sympathetic attitude and a recognition of responsibility for his proper part in the program of recovery by the banker as he passes upon and meets sound credit requirements of business as it swings into and continues on the upward turn."

Public Confidence Returns

Direct information indicates conclusively that the banking situation is showing definite and steady improvement, J. F. T. O'Connor, Comptroller of the Currency of the United States, said in a recent address. He pointed out that the decided drop which has occurred in money in circulation shows the public has largely ceased hoarding.

On March 1, 1934, the Federal Reserve Board reported that the volume of money in circulation amounted to $5,355,000,000, which was a decline of $1,077,000,000 since March 1, 1933. It was a drop of $2,226,000,000, or over 29 per cent from the all-time peak of $7,581,000,000 reached on March 13, 1933. About one-half the decrease, it was pointed out, reflected the return of currency from the public. Money in circulation declined rapidly after the reopening of the banks in March, 1933, and has continued since to decline from week to week, "notwithstanding the increase in the demand for currency arising from enlargement of pay rolls and increase in the volume of retail trade," the Comptroller said, which, he added, "indicates a continued return of money from hoards as banking facilities were reestablished."

About Bank Loans

"As for the charge that the banks will not extend credit, the first and obvious reply is that the banks themselves are made up of the very bone and sinew of the industrial, commercial and agricultural interests of the country. Bank directors, and, to a large extent, bank officers, are drawn from the business and farming population. If they do not feel at any given moment that it is wise to make a particular loan, it is more than probable that there are sound reasons for not making it, says an editorial in the Saturday Eve-
