

"Lady For a Day" Here Saturday and Monday

Headed by Warren William, a splendid cast was assembled for "Lady for a Day," the Columbia picture adapted from the Damon Runyon story, "Madame La Gimp," showing at the Broadlands Opera House this Saturday and Monday nights. May Robson, "Grand Old Lady of the American Stage," plays the role of "Apple Annie."

The story deals with an old apple woman who peddles her wares in the metropolitan theatrical district, and, unknown to her associates, is supporting a daughter in school in Spain. She is giving her child the impression that she is wealthy and socially prominent and has a splendid husband.

Suddenly she learns that the daughter is on her way to America, with a young Count who wants to marry her, and the Count's father, of the Spanish nobility. "Apple Annie" appeals for aid from her friends, the most conspicuous figures of the White Light district. They rally to her rescue.

"The Dude," a gambler, borrows a rich man's apartment and installs Annie in it. "Missouri," a night-club hostess has the apple-woman beautified. It is necessary for her to have a temporary husband, so "Judge Blake," a pool-shark, is pressed into service.

After a series of hilarious happenings, the masquerade works out perfectly. The Spanish nobles accept all of Annie's pretensions, and take the daughter back with them for a magnificent wedding in their ancestral home.

Warren William, fresh from triumphs in half a dozen Warner successes, plays "The Dude." Glenda Farrell, brilliant young comedienne, plays "Missouri," a night club hostess. Bald, round Guy Kibbee is cast as "Judge Blake," the husband for a day, and Ned Sparks is "Happy," a dumb stooge for the Dude.

A Useful Invention

From Paris comes news of an invention which should be hailed with enthusiasm by the motoring public. It is an automatic jack to be operated from the instrument board of the automobile.

In case of a flat tire the driver may raise the wheel by simply pressing a button. Each wheel is supplied with a jack in the form of a steel cylinder fitted with a double telescopic piston. When not in use the lower end of the jack is drawn up level with the axle, so as not to reduce the road clearance.

The advantage of having a car equipped with such a device would be greater than its mere convenience of operation. The jack would be there when it was needed. Thieves could not steal it, and neighbors could not borrow it.

Old Age Poverty

While not a pleasant subject to dwell upon, an occasional look ahead to the conditions which may surround old age would be advisable, even for those whose circumstances in early life are satisfactory and whose future seems secure.

We may well be reminded that nearly 80 percent of all old people are wholly or partially dependent upon others for support. Yet many of these in early and middle life were prosperous; some even wealthy.

Who can not look about him and see acquaintances who were once the envy of their neighbors, but who through business reverses, accidents, illness or extravagance are now brought to feel the sting of poverty?

Usually such disasters might have been averted by a reasonable exercise of prudence and thrift. Keeping up with one's neighbors in a false display of prosperity is one fruitful source of old age poverty, and there are many others. Much of the misery which usually accompanies old age might be avoided by looking ahead before it is too late.

Plans For Long Trip

Numerous ideas hitherto considered utterly fantastic have been advanced concerning the possibility of a trip to the moon or to Mars, but it has remained for a society of French astronomers to take the idea seriously from a scientific standpoint.

Not that these scientists expect to see an actual venture of this kind undertaken in the near future, but for the purpose of studying its possibilities, the new "astronautic commission" has been formed, composed of the most distinguished members of the Astronomical Society of France.

As a beginning a prize of 5,000 francs will be awarded annually for the best original work on any phase of the problem which may contribute to its final solution, on the principle that any progress whatever which may be made will be of scientific value.

While the idea of traveling to Mars or the moon, and the possibility of ever getting back, appears ridiculous at present, future generations may find a way to do it. Forty years ago most people thought anyone who predicted that man would ever fly at all was a little off in the head.

Food Fallacies

Popular ideas about food are a strange admixture of truth and fiction according to Dr. Lieb, an authority on diet. Particularly is this the case with respect to notions of what is good for people, or not good for them, under varying circumstances.

For example, bananas and nuts were long thought to be hard to digest, but if the bananas are ripe and the nuts chewed sufficiently they are among the most easily digestible of foods.

The prejudice against raw food is also unwarranted it is said. Raw corn, wheat and other starches in moderate amounts are completely digested, while raw potatoes are 78 per cent digestible. The craving of some children for raw potatoes may be indulged to a reasonable extent without harm, and the same is true of raw cabbage and lettuce.

Drinking water during meals was long thought to be harmful to the digestion, but for normal persons it is now declared to be beneficial if sipped in between swallows of solid food.

Forcing children to eat spinach or other foods which they do not like is not good for them, as the feeling of repulsion which they experience hinders digestion.

While the doctor does not say it in as many words, it appears that a rather safe rule of diet is to eat what one likes, provided it does not produce any disagreeable after effects. And regardless of advice, that is what most of us insist on doing anyway.

Airplane Accidents

In the early days of flying, if our memory serves us correctly, most persons involved in airplane accidents were killed outright. At least, a very large percentage were. It was a little surprising, therefore, to read a recent government report which states that during the last three years only one out of seven persons involved in airplane crashes was fatally hurt.

More surprising still is the statement that of all those involved in air accidents 60 percent received no injuries at all. About 15 per cent were killed, 10 per cent were seriously injured and 15 percent were only slightly hurt.

Causes of accidents have been studied, resulting in the conclusion that about 57 per cent were due to errors by pilots, structural failures in planes caused a little more than 9 per cent, motor failures 17 per cent, while miscellaneous and doubtful causes account for the remainder.

During the three year period covered by the report there was a total of 2,994 accidents recorded, involving 9,558 persons, of whom 1,413 were killed, 947 were severely injured, 1,366 received minor injuries and 5,805 were un hurt.

Americanism Defined

The word "Americanism" is used very frequently, but the average person would doubtless find some difficulty in defining it satisfactorily.

Broadly speaking, it is understood to mean an appreciation of and loyalty to America and its institutions. But it means more than a mere passive acceptance of the benefits which are derived from citizenship.

Probably no class of citizens is better qualified to define Americanism than the veterans of the wars which have been waged to defend it. Such a definition was adopted some time ago by the commanders-in-chief of five leading veterans' organizations, as follows:

"Americanism is an unflinching love of country; loyalty to its institutions and ideals; eagerness to defend it against all enemies; undivided allegiance to the flag, and a desire to secure the blessing of liberty to ourselves and posterity."

Persons who can qualify under that definition are truly Americans, whether native-born or naturalized.

Sidelights

Only moderate toll was taken by the law when Mrs. Margaret Johnson, 17, of Richmond, Ind., was fined $15 for crap shooting. She had won $235, so had a net profit of $220 as a result of her investment in the galloping dominoes.

An odd case of versatility is that of Robert Cloud, a New York negro, who is a lyric composer of talent, with more than a score of songs to his credit, for which he has written both words and music. His regular job, however, is that of "red cap" at the Grand Central Station.

It is unfortunate to lose a limb but fortunate that it can not be amputated but once, as James Bath of Bangor, Me., can testify. In crossing a railroad track he misjudged the speed of a passenger train, which threw him for no gain and neatly clipped off the end of his wooden leg.

Dorothy Dell of New York is a little show girl who is closely chaperoned by her mother, in order that she may not fall under the demoralizing influences which sometimes beset young women of the stage. Incidentally, Miss Dell's most striking song hit contained the line: "Was I drunk; was he handsome; did my mother give me hell?"

Statistics are often valuable, but sometimes come high. When a senator asked the Tariff Commission how many tons of fish were brought into the United States by aliens, inquiry had to be made to some 56,000 owners of fishing vessels before the weighty question could be answered. The answer cost the country's taxpayers about $19,000.

The practical joker who periodically sells the Statue of Liberty, the Empire building and other objects of art to unsophisticated customers recently sold the historic Plymouth Rock to a New York dealer in antiques. The buyer sent a truckman to obtain his latest treasure, but when a derrick was being rigged for its removal a limb of the law intervened and stopped the proceedings.

White Collar Jobs

Boys should be taught to think less of fitting themselves for "white collar" jobs, says Prof. F. G. Nichols of Harvard, who points out the greater opportunities for promotion in industry than in clerical pursuits.

The young man who starts at the bottom in a factory often outdistances one who begins as a bookkeeper. The idea is that while the clerk or bookkeeper may have a white collar job from the very first, the ambitious and intelligent industrial worker has a better chance to rise to an executive position, so that when he does reach the white collar job it means something worth while.

Advice along a similar line is given by President Thatcher of the Massachusetts Agricultural College, who defends vocational schools against the reproach sometimes leveled against them by the classical student. He says "the idea is erroneous that vocational schools are undignified because they work with materials at hand and not with a knowledge of things that are ancient and far off."

Literally, however, the proportion of white collar jobs is constantly increasing. With the continual advent of new machines for doing the dirty work of the world, the time may come when nearly everyone may have a "white collar" job.

You must tell 'em to sell 'em.

Low University Tuition Provides Chance for All

Costs Are Only $70 Per Year and "Whatever Else You Spend."

Seventy dollars tuition and "whatever else you want to spend" is what it costs a student to attend the University of Illinois for one year.

Compared with many other leading universities and colleges the costs on the Urbana-Champaign campus are extremely low. Fees at many institutions range as high as $300 and $400 a year.

Living costs and other expenses have dropped enormously during recent years. A non-working student can attend Illinois for a full year and yet spend only $460, it has been found. Some spend even less. A more liberal budget for both men and women shows that $642 will provide a year's education at the University, and even allow one to belong to a fraternity or sorority. It all depends on the boy or girl.

"After all, the real cost of a higher education depends a great deal on the individual," says Dean of Men Fred Turner. "A few students may attend the University for two semesters on less than the minimum budget, but I'd say they are the exceptions rather than the rule."

"The more liberal budget will meet the needs of the majority of Illinois students. This amount, in many cases, will cover all costs including fraternity or sorority dues, while for other individuals it may not."

"One item that helps to keep costs down is the low tuition fee charged at the University of Illinois," Dean Turner pointed out. "Seventy dollars a year is the tuition."

The University of Illinois has many advantages. Members of the faculty rank highly in the educational world. Located in the very progressive but quiet communities of Urbana-Champaign, the University offers a scholastic environment for students not always found in other localities. The general moral tone about the campus is high.

Having the advantages of the great metropolitan area, where essential clinical material is plentiful, three of the professional departments of the University are located in Chicago. The Colleges of Medicine, Dentistry, and Pharmacy are all situated there.

University officials believe that there are available more facilities for skilled advice and direction for students at Illinois than at most small colleges. The offices of the Deans of Men and Women find student thronging to them daily for suggestions and advice on problems of the most intimate personal nature. Other faculty members also give daily advice to their students.

New admission requirements adopted recently by the Board of Trustees give special consideration to students who have shown superior scholarship in high school and provide for the admission of superior graduates of unaccredited four year secondary schools.

Location and History of the University of Illinois

The main campus of the University of Illinois is situated in Urbana-Champaign, in Champaign County, about fifty miles northeast of the geographical center of the State and 128 miles south of Chicago. The campus lies partly in the city of Urbana and partly in the city of Champaign. The two municipalities form one community of about thirty-five thousand inhabitants. State highway routes, 10, 25, and 39 all enter the twin cities. It is also served by four railroad systems.

The College of Medicine, the College of Dentistry, and the College of Pharmacy, are all located in Chicago, near the Cook County Hospital.

James O'Donnell Bennett, writing in the Chicago Tribune, said: "The University of Illinois is a vast laboratory of science and citizenship built by and for the people of Illinois. . . . It is known throughout the world for discoveries that have made buildings safer to live in, trains safer to ride in and tracks safer to ride on. . . . Its discoveries are always at the world's service and the whole world seeks its service."

The University of Illinois, established February 28, 1867, was one of the original land grant colleges made possible by the Federal Government in 1862. It opened on March 3, 1865, with the registration of 50 students and three faculty members.

Cinching A Job

A few years ago, at the age of 79, Thomas F. Ryan died, worth many millions of dollars. In the meantime he had given away a lot of money also. But, so far as the main facts of his life are concerned, they do not differ greatly from those of other poor boys who have risen to wealth and power.

A little story is told, however, which may give some insight into the manner in which young Ryan got his start toward great riches. His first job was with a Baltimore dry goods store, where he was hired for $3 a week and told to report for work the next morning. Now, he was in earnest about that job and didn't want to take any chances on letting it get away from him, so he said to the boss: "If you don't mind, I'll start right now without any pay for today."

Needless to say he made good on that job, and two years later, at the age of 19, he obtained employment in Wall Street. At the age of 23 he became a member of the New York Stock Exchange, from which time his rise in the financial world was rapid and he became one of America's richest men.

Doubtless his remarkable success was due to the spirit which he displayed in cinching his first job—his willingness to "start right now." A good many boys of today might emulate that spirit with profit to themselves.
