"One Is Guilty" at Local Theater Friday, Saturday

How the modern scientific detective unravels tangled clues, clearing the innocent of suspicion and pinning the crime on the guilty is one of the features of the new Columbia police detective drama, "One Is Guilty," which comes to the Broadlands Theater this Friday and Saturday nights.

Ralph Bellamy is seen as Inspector Trent. He is called on a homicide case and finds a man dead in one of the vacant suites of a big apartment building. A girl falls into his net. In her possession is a pistol containing one discharged shell; near the body is a lip-stick stained cigarette stub. The bullet from the pistol is of the same calibre as that which killed the man. The girl can offer no convincing reason why she is in the building.

Though the chain of evidence seems strong enough to convict the girl of the crime, Inspector Trent's deductions through the employment of the latest scientific aids clear the girl and fasten the guilt upon the proper party.

The cast in addition to Bellamy includes Shirley Grey, Rita La Roy, Vincent Sherman and Willard Robertson.

When Baths Were Few

If certain data we have run across lately are authentic, the joke about the Saturday night bath is not so old as we had imagined. It is recorded that the first bath tub put in commission in the United States was christened on Christmas Day, 1842.

Looking up the day of the week in a perpetual calendar, we find that this was Sunday, but it is possible that the first bath was really taken on Christmas eve, thus establishing the Saturday night tradition.

Upon its introduction the bath tub was looked upon with much suspicion, as it is by small boys until this day. In Boston an ordinance was passed prohibiting baths except upon the advice of a physician. About 1844 the Philadelphia city council came within two votes of passing an ordinance prohibiting baths between November 1 and March 15.

Bath tubs were heavily taxed in those early days, even as the modern automobile. Shortly after they were introduced into Virginia a state tax of $36 was imposed on each tub installed.

Still Americans of those times were more given to bathing than the old Russians. We have read somewhere that Peter the Great bathed only once a year. But there are extenuating circumstances. Russia is a very cold country.

The Paths of Glory

Some two centuries ago Thomas Gray, in his immortal poem, "Elegy in a Country Churchyard," wrote: "The paths of glory lead but to the grave." Sometimes the paths of glory lead to welcome obscurity even before the grave claims those who have been glorified.

A case in point is that of Maxine Elliott, now 61, who for 30 years was one of the world's most admired actresses, acclaimed by many as the most beautiful and accomplished woman on the stage. She abruptly quit her artistic career in 1920, and has since lived mostly in Europe, having acquired an adequate fortune through her stage appearance and subsequent shrewd investments.

Recently visiting her native land for the first time in nine years—she was born in Rockland, Maine,—newspapermen sought interviews. She refused to reminisce about her career, but said:

"I never liked the theater. I just happened to be in it. Night after night I played in successes. They became drearier and drearier. My idea of happiness is to find some small corner of the world, crawl into it, and never see my name in the papers until I die."

To the average mortal, who continually strives for reputation and public approval to the bitter end, Maxine Elliot's attitude will appear peculiarly strange.

Installment Plan O. K.

Installment buying weathered the storm of the recent depression period in much better manner than many persons may imagine. In bountiful years payments on articles purchased on the time basis were made with great regularity so that until the lean years came the time payment plan never had been subjected to a real test. Authorities have been checking up to see how the deferred payment plan fared through the depression. It was discovered that about 50 per cent of all the household washing machines sold were purchased on the installment plan. Of these, no more washers were taken back than in normal times, which is regarded as conclusive evidence that women, having learned the advantages of such a labor-saver will make many sacrifices, if need be, to continue enjoying its aid. It was found also that the relation of time basis sales to total sales remained about the same in poor days as in good ones.

Installment buying thus evidently is firmly established as an important part of the commercial system. Evidently also a customer's desire for such home helps as washing machines remains strong, regardless of financial conditions. The system and the product obviously are satisfactory, or the use of both would not continue.

RESEARCH AIDS IN SOLUTION OF MINING PROBLEM

University Mining Engineers Make Important Contributions to Coal Industry.

The importance of research in the field of mining engineering, especially as it relates to coal mines in Illinois, is explained by Prof. A. C. Callen, head of the University of Illinois department of mining.

Research in mining has been carried on at the University since the establishment of the Engineering Experiment Station in 1903. This is the oldest engineering experiment station in the United States. The dean of the College of Engineering is director of the station.

Even farther back than 1903 the University had recognized the importance of coal mining within the State. Although Illinois was producing only one or two million tons of coal per year in 1867, the first Board of Trustees provided for a curriculum in mining and metallurgy. The curriculum was abandoned in 1894 but was re-established in 1909.

Prof. Callen pointed out that the Engineering Experiment Station does not engage in the business of commercial testing. Only in cases where proper facilities are not available at some commercial laboratory or through some consulting engineer does the University permit any tests of a commercial nature.

"Research is becoming more and more important," he said. "By its large industrial concerns have saved their very lives. But research is not an antidote to save life in an emergency. It takes time and patience. It is an investment for the long pull."

Possible Saving Outlined. He mentioned one project that an expenditure of $3,700 resulted in a power saving at the rate of $5,500 per year, in one mine alone. What was done in that mine could be done at many mines in the state and nation—the extent of the savings depending upon the conditions in the particular mine. The research problem was a study of mine ventilation. Cleaning and straightening the aircourses resulted in the savings.

Research in the friability of Illinois coals resulted in the finding some coals as nearly as friable as Pocahontas up to some as high as anthracite or Jellico, he said.

The experiment station has determined with a great degree of accuracy the approximate limits of purity of coals that may be obtained with present cleaning methods.

Recently Prof. D. R. Mitchell has completed an X-ray study of coals that convinces him that "if Illinois coal mine operators want to compete successfully within the industry they will have to set up cleaning plants for their mined product."

There is more interest in Illinois today in the subject of coal cleaning than at any time within the last 20 years," Professor Callen told the visitors.

He mentioned other work done by the department of mining engineering: Bulletins on the behavior of overlying strata after the removal of coal. Systems of mining coal with special reference to the percentage of extraction.

A study on the storage of coal by Prof. H. H. Stoeck, first head of the department, and Prof. S. W. Parr, internationally known chemist.

Careful studies of haulage, skip hoisting, and power distribution have been made.

Five bulletins on mine ventilation have been published.

Prof. Callen also pointed out that these investigations result in the training and development of skilled research workers.
