Sealed Corn Being Checked and Inspected

Inspector Louis Luckhart, representing the Commodity Credit Corporation, has been in Champaign County engaged in the work of checking and inspecting corn sealed under the Federal Corn Loan Plan. He reports that he is pleased with the co-operation extended by the borrowers of Champaign County. The work of all local sealers will be checked and as many individual loans inspected as time permits. In cases where violation of the terms of the loan agreement are found, every opportunity will be given the borrower to make the necessary changes before further action is taken.

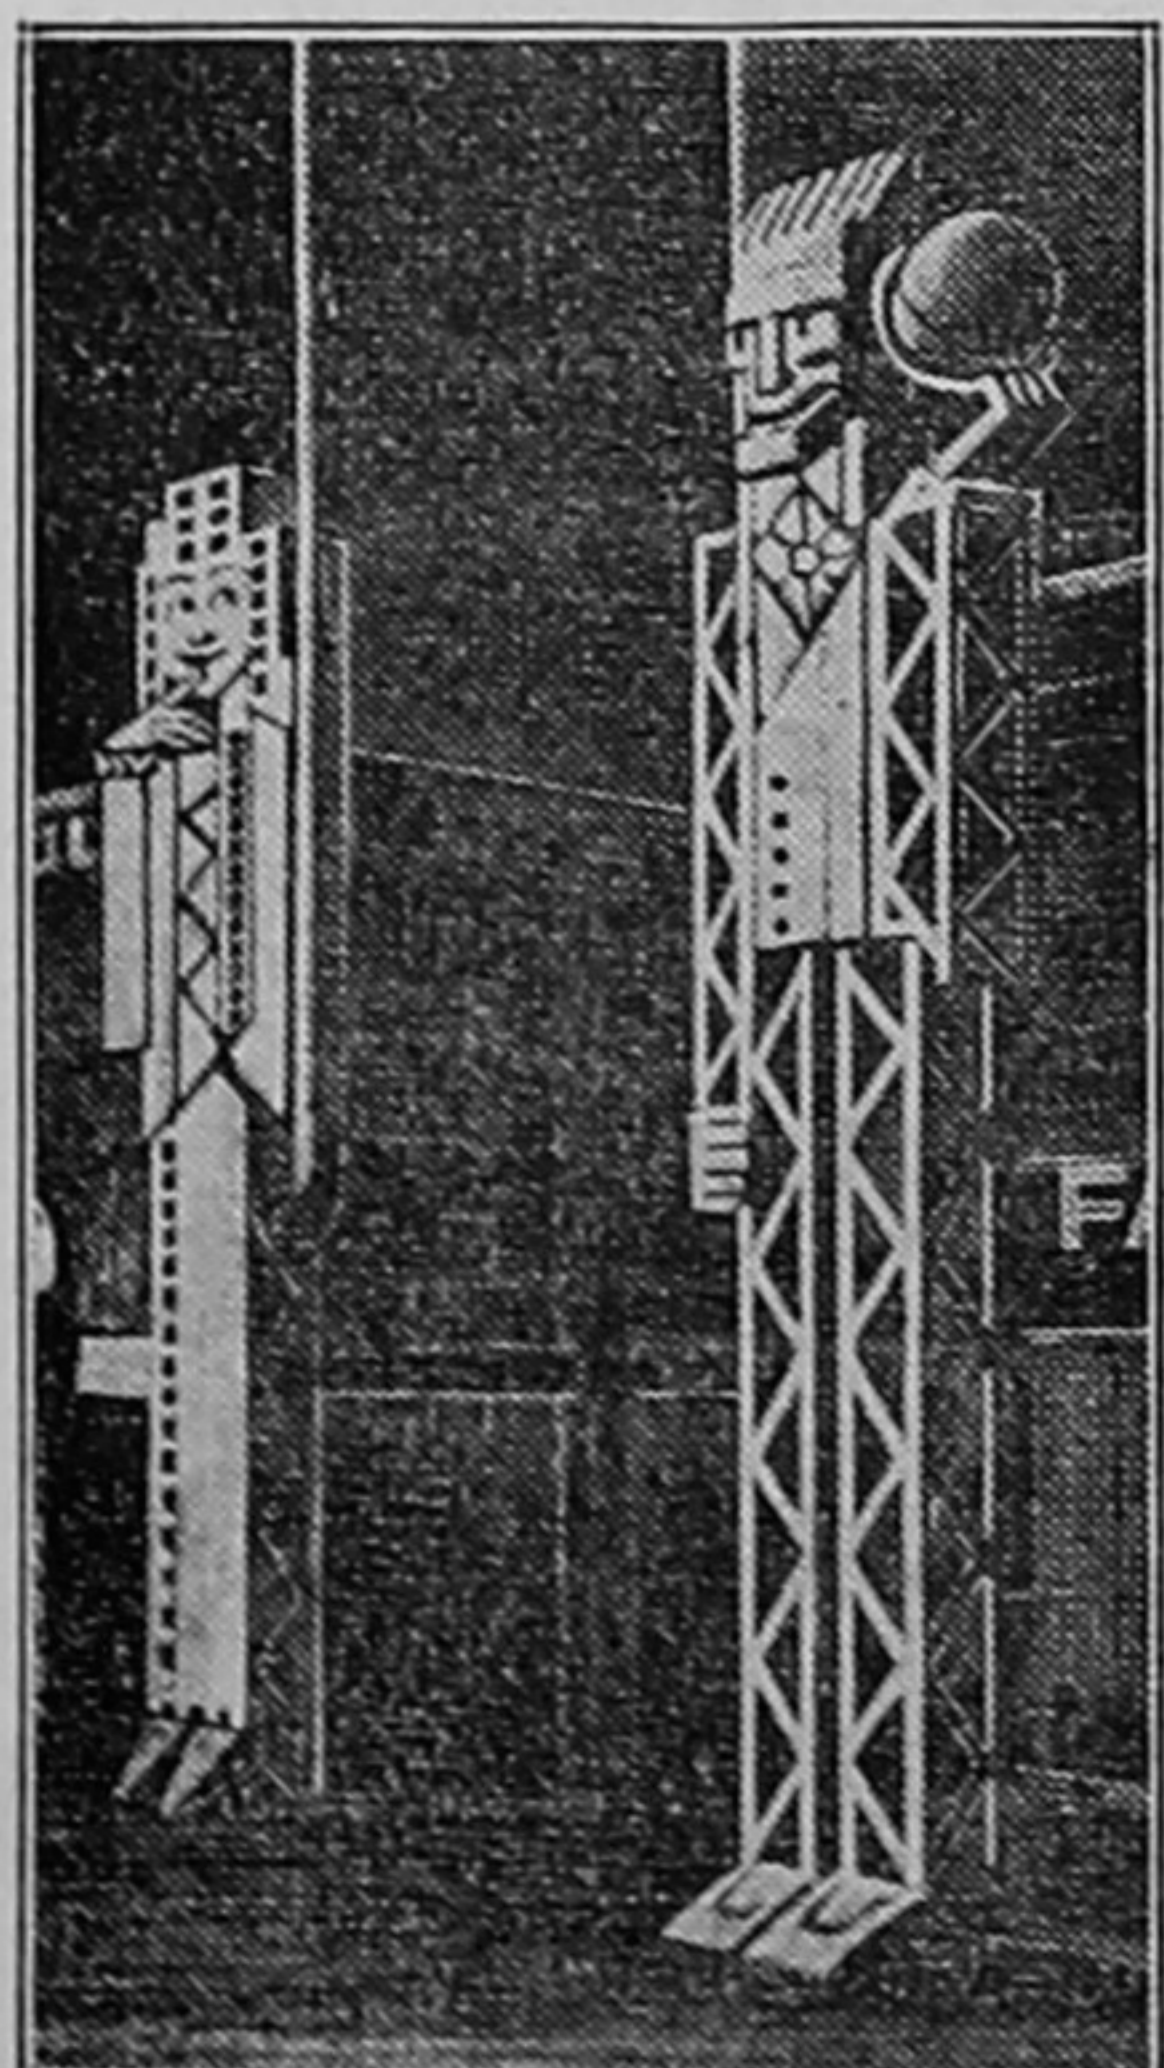

Tuberculosis Can Now be Successfully Treated Here

Tuberculosis patients need not journey to the mountains of the West nor to the deserts of the Southwest to cure the disease, as it can be successfully treated in Illinois, according to a statement issued by the Illinois Tuberculosis Association.

Many patients invest their last dollar in a pilgrimage to a new climate, believing that sunshine and air alone will provide some miraculous cure, the statement points out. Such patients would be better off in their home community where friends, relations, or the community itself could see to it that they obtain the essentials of the cure, which are rest, fresh air, good food and careful medical attention.

"Good climate is just good weather, and good weather alone is certainly not a cure for tuberculosis," the tuberculosis association says, "but when the factors which form the basis of the cure are available, the extra impetus from favorable climate is often enough to tip the scales in the right direction. This means that standstill cases are sometimes started toward recovery, that where improvement is under way it may be speeded up, and that perhaps unfavorable progress may be halted. However, climate alone will accomplish none of this, and no patient should leave home for another climate unless definitely sure he can provide himself with the essentials of the cure."

Two Women Honored

Highly pleasing is a bit of news from Florence, Italy, to the effect that gold medals have been awarded by that famous city to two American young women, Misses Mary and Janet Buttles of Washington. They also received official commendation from the Italian government.

These marks of recognition came after several years of unselfish service in behalf of the poor children of Florence, for whom the two sisters established a nursery and training school, where working mothers could place them during the day.

Many hundreds of children have received care and instruction since this work was begun in 1925, and the high value placed upon this enterprise by the Italian authorities is indicated by the bestowal of the honors mentioned.

War on Tuberculosis

Although many more battles remain to be fought, it is encouraging to note the remarkable progress which has been made in the war against tuberculosis during the last 30 years, in which the death rate has been cut in half.

In 1904 there were only 9,107 beds available for tuberculosis patients in hospitals and sanatoria in the United States, as compared with 73,695 beds at present.

Much of this advance is due to the work of the National Tuberculosis Association during more than a quarter century of its existence. By emphasizing the need for rest, fresh air, sanitary living and working conditions, as well as the need for suitable institutions for the treatment of cases in their various stages, this association has made a wonderful contribution to the public welfare.

But there are still 500,000 cases of tuberculosis in the United States. The work of the association, supported by the sale of the Christmas Health Seal must go on.

Many Fur Farms

It may be surprising to many to be told that there are now nearly 5,000 fur farms in the United States and Canada, most of which have been established during the last 15 years.

These farms represent an investment of around $25,000,000 and from them are now produced and marketed about 80,000 skins each year.

Thus it will be seen that a new and important industry is being developed, which embraces a practical conservation plan as well, just as the commercial raising of cattle and hogs has preserved these animals from extinction.

Another point in favor of fur farming is its humane aspect. Instead of being tortured for hours and even days in cruel traps, the fur farm animals may be instantaneously put to death when their pelts are needed for the market.

Women of the future may wear handsome furs without the feeling that they do so at the expense of frightful suffering on the part of the beautiful animals which contribute to their comfort and adornment.

Death's Busy Season

As the summer approaches, with its increased tourist and other automobile traffic, death prepares to reap its richest harvest. From the homes of the United States must come about 30,000 to die and a million others to be injured, some crippled for life, during the year, if former records are to be equaled.

This senseless slaughter goes on in spite of all the warnings given and in the face of the object lessons held daily before our eyes.

The pitiful part of this continuous tragedy is that most of these casualties are entirely unnecessary and might be prevented by the exercise of ordinary common sense. They are due either to an insane desire for speed or an utter disregard for the most elementary rules of safety.

Many of the victims are helpless passengers, whose lives are at the mercy of the criminally reckless or incompetent driver.

Some accidents are apparently unavoidable, but in the vast majority of cases they are the result of pure carelessness on the part of motorists or pedestrians.

And even the most careful driver is often helpless when he encounters a fool on street or highway.

About the only job some fellows appear to be able to hold is that of husband.

Willie—Daddy, I wish you would get me a drum.

Daddy—Oh, I'm afraid you'll disturb me very much with it.

Willie—Oh, no, Daddy; I'll only play it when you're asleep.

Nerves

Do they torture you by day?
Keep you awake at night?

What is it that keeps hospitals open and doctors busy? NERVES.
What is it that makes your face wrinkled and makes you feel old? NERVES.
Nine times out of ten it's NERVES that make you restless, worried, haggard.

Nerves

Do they make you Cranky,
Blue--give you Nervous Indigestion, Nervous Headache?

When nerves are over-taxed, you worry over trifles, find it hard to concentrate, can't sit still. Nerve Strain brings on Headache. Nervous people often suffer from Indigestion. There may be absolutely nothing wrong with the organs of digestion, but the Nerves are not on the job to make the organs do their work properly.

Nerves

Do they interfere with your work; ruin your pleasure; drive away your friends?

You're cheating yourself and the man who pays you if you work when your NERVES are not normal. You can't have a good time when you are nervous. You can't make or keep friends when you are keyed up and irritable. You may excuse yourself, but to others you are just a plain crank.

Uni. R. O. T. C.
Ranks High;
Trains 2,686

U. of I. Lives Up to Letter,
Spirit of Laws on Military Training.

Designated by General Pershing as the best of them all, the Reserve Officers' Training Corps of the University of Illinois this year numbers 2,686 men.

Being a "land grant" institution, the University is not only living up to the letter of the law that gave the University its original impetus, but to the spirit of the law as well.

In charge of this student brigade as instructors are twenty-one regular army officers and 39 enlisted men. The military equipment supplied by the government for the training of these men represents an outlay of about $2,000,000. This does not include the armory that was built and is owned by the University.

The grant to the State of Illinois was made in 1862 "for the endowment, support, and maintenance of at least one college whose leading object shall be, without excluding other scientific and classical studies and including military tactics, to teach such branches of learning as relate to agriculture and the mechanical arts . . . in order to promote the liberal and practical education of the industrial classes in the several pursuits and professions of life." (The Morrill Land Grant Act).

Later the state legislature, in its law which created the University of Illinois, made military training a required subject for male students.

University Kept Its Promise.

The language of the Morrill bill is explicit. The University of Illinois being founded five years after the grant was made to the state, started out with the intention of adhering to the letter of the law. As a result it is receiving from the state interest at the rate of 5 per cent per annum, payable semi-annually, on about $649,000.

In return for this sum of money, it is compulsory for every male student of the university under the age of twenty-two years to register in courses of military training and to pursue this prescribed work for two years. This training includes both drill and theory.

The purpose of the training is not to make soldiers, but to inculcate the ideas of discipline and team work into a mass of young men at the time of their lives when they are just starting to take their places among men of the world. The students who elect to continue the military training for the last two years of their University course, do become soldiers capable of commanding others in time of stress. The biggest gain, however, to these student officers is the ability gained by their university training to lead men in any walk of life.

This leadership, learned while in command of student companies and troops of the university, often gives these young men an advantage in their later commercial or professional life. While no definite figures are available, it is a known fact that more of the men who were cadet officers during their university careers are executives in business today than those who did not carry on this part of their university work.

So important does the government consider this type of training to the building of strong self disciplined young men, that a vast amount of government material has been concentrated at the university for the training of students. There are 146 horses, 12 French '75s and two 155 millimeter cannon, besides rifles, pistols, machine guns, one pounders and Stokes Mortars in sufficient quantity to give the students a thorough idea of their operation.

Advance Course Optional.

In the auxiliary branches such as Engineering, Signal, Medical and Quartermaster Corps, the equipment is just as complete so that the equipment assembled on the University of Illinois campus is practically sufficient to equip a peace time brigade. In addition to the officer personnel mentioned, there are 39 enlisted men of the army detailed for duty here. They assist in the instruction and care for the government property.

While the first two years of this military training is compulsory, the final two years training, during which time the students of the advanced courses receive their real training as soldiers, is strictly optional. In order to be able to continue the training these advanced students must be proficient in the rudiments of military science and tactics and show promise of being future officer material in the Officers Reserve Corps of the Army. Upon graduation from the University and upon satisfactorily qualifying themselves in military training they are commissioned Second Lieutenants in the Officers Reserve Corps of the branch of service in which they received their university military training, and also as brevet captains in the Illinois National Guard.

NEW WAYS FOR NEW DAYS

A New Day Spreader with New Day Improvements

New day farmers appreciate the value of new ways and improved machinery. You will be interested in the Oliver Superior Spreader which embodies every improvement the modern spreader should have.

It spreads from 4 to 28 loads per acre evenly, smoothly and finely pulverized. It handles easily in cramped places because it has short turning radius and the shortest wheel base (92 inches) of any spreader.

Spring suspension assures long life and great operating comfort. Hyatt roller bearings on top cylinder, main cylinder, and wide spread shafts where speed is high and duty heavy is another evidence of the value built into this machine. There are many other reasons why you should own an Oliver Superior Spreader.

Come in and let us tell you about them!
