Motor Vehicle Accidents Increase

With an average of 6 deaths daily, a total of 568 fatalities during the first quarter, motor vehicle accidents in Illinois have increased at an alarming rate since last November, giving the State its worst recorded experience in that respect, according to a bulletin issued recently by Dr. Frank Jirka, state health director. For the first quarter of this year the number of fatal accidents stood 47 per cent above the record for the first quarter of 1933 and 13 per cent above that of 1931, the previous high record.

The 207 deaths reported in March gave a new high record for that month which was 50 per cent above the experience in March of last year. For the first quarter of this year, the increase was 55 per cent down-state and 36 per cent in Chicago. At the present rate, motor vehicle accidents are responsible for nearly twice as many deaths as the aggregate mortality to all common diseases except tuberculosis and pneumonia.

Melvin Bean Sentenced on New Plea, Saturday

Tuscola, May 26—Melvin Bean charged with the murder of Sherman Denny, May 17, 1924, was allowed to plead guilty to a charge of assault with intent to commit murder, in the Douglas County Circuit Court, Saturday. He was sentenced to serve one day in solitary confinement, and one year in Menard penitentiary by Circuit Judge J. L. McLaughlin.

Sheriff Andrew Knapp indicated that he would transfer Bean to the penitentiary, Tuesday.

With Bean's plea of guilty to the assault with intent to murder charge, H. L. Pate, State's Attorney, told the court that the 10-year-old crime, had been solved. Through Bean's confession, he said it was established that the bullet which killed Denny had been fired by another person.

Three men had been acquitted of the murder in 1925.

Pate told the court that he believed the best interests of the public would be served if Bean were allowed to plead guilty to the lesser charge, thereby saving a trial on the murder charge, to which Bean had pleaded not guilty, and saving Douglas County about $7,000.

Cold Weather Damages Crops

Some of the farmers of this community tell us that their crops and gardens were greatly damaged by the freezing weather the latter part of last week. Others say their crops were not badly damaged. The bean crop seems to have suffered the most, some declaring that their beans were practically ruined. Some of the corn fields are looking bad, but they say that the roots are still healthy and that it will live and grow if rain comes in time. Seemingly the weather was freakish.

The community is still suffering from the long drouth, pastures and gardens are looking sickly.

Real summer weather is now here and if rain doesn't come soon it looks like all growing vegetation will soon go up in smoke.

The Government Now Behind Home Building

The next major activity of government will be an attempt to stimulate heavy industries—which normally provide the bulk of employment, were hit hardest by depression, and have been the most lethargic in recovering from it. The first step in doing that will be to unloose capital for home-building and repairing, through Federal guarantees of mortgages. Mr. Roosevelt has sent a special message to Congress to expedite such legislation.

Experts estimate that it is possible to unloose credit to the tune of $1,500,000,000 or more in this manner. That money would go to painters, carpenters, masons, plumbers, contractors. It would buy cement, steel, paint, lumber, roofing, electric fixtures. It would pass through a hundred great industries, creating jobs and opportunities as it went. It doesn't take much imagination to visualize the extent of its influence in pulling business of all kinds out of the doldrums.

Here's a thought for the wise property-owner to start considering right now: If building is greatly accelerated, prices for everything involved are going to rise. They're going to leave depression levels behind and return to the normal average—that, in fact, is one of the cardinal aims at this time. Those who can afford to repair and build now have an opportunity that may never be repeated in a lifetime.

Health Rules For Summer

In a bulletin issued today by the Medical Committee of the Illinois Tuberculosis Association, special rules are set forth for the maintenance of health during hot-weather months.

The rules are:

1. Do not run for train or street car. Another will be along in a few minutes, but you only have one heart.
2. Eat less fats, starches, sweets. They provide heat. Eat more vegetables, fruits.
3. Drink plenty of water. It is a most important factor in nature's cooling system for the body.
4. Eliminate stimulants.
5. Bathe frequently. Soap and water help keep the pores of the skin open and facilitate perspiration.
6. Do not go out in the sun without a head covering. Sun stroke may result.
7. Tan gradually. Too large doses of sunshine can be harmful.
8. Wear loose, porous clothing, light in weight and color, to permit free circulation of air about the body.
9. Don't talk about the weather. The other fellow knows it is hot and would rather not be reminded of it.

Synthetic Scents

An interesting recent development in chemistry is the synthetic production of perfumes or scents in almost endless variety, and the many practical uses to which they are put. Dr. Arnold A. Laird of Colgate University describes some of these developments in a recent article.

These artificial scents are used for their pleasing odors alone, as ordinary perfumes are used, or to overcome unpleasant odors, such as those from certain food while being cooked. They are also used to neutralize the smell of shoe polish and rubber, moth balls and the like. Dr. Laird tells of some new fads in scenting clothes.

"Gowns were created with a heliotrope shade carrying a fragrance of that aroma in the very fibers of the cloth itself. Lilac hues were impregnated with lasting lilac scents, and sport ensembles were given the aroma of pines and outdoor scents. A yarn manufacturer is using synthetic perfumes which have a distinctive and good smell, and other textiles will carry pleasing odors to enhance their charm."

It may be that soon the housewife can sprinkle a few drops of synthetic perfume about the house and banish the pungency of father's ancient pipe—or a moonshine still might be caused to emit the innocent aroma of steaming coffee.

James Rooney of Newark, who can not read, argued with a traffic cop who stopped him for having no license plate. He exhibited to the policeman a document which he said entitled him to drive his car. It was marked "back seat driver's license," and Rooney said he had paid a stranger $3 for it.

The Charity Worker

"THAT Miss Dresden was calling again," announced Bob Williams at the Omega Chi fraternity house addressing some of the group gathered around the large fireplace in the main hall just before dinner. "You know, she's the old girl that wants our old clothes. Miss Dresden—Elsie Dresden—ouch!"

No one was especially interested, nor especially concerned. The name suggested to them all a rather dried-up spinster, of which the college town had plenty. This particular one happened to be interested in an industrial mission. The mission, she said, needed all the old clothes they could get. They sold the garments at a very small price to the men who applied for help and shelter. Sometimes, she said, all the men needed to get back on their feet again was a decent suit of clothes. It was hard to get old clothes. And it had occurred to her that the men at the fraternity houses would have lots of clothes to discard before they were really at all badly worn.

No one thought enough more about it to get together anything for the industrial mission. Then one afternoon at about five, when Bob Williams was reclining very comfortably before the open fire, Miss Dresden drew up in her flivver and with jaunty self-assurance walked to the front door of the fraternity house and rang the bell. As was the custom, Bob Williams, being nearest the front door, opened it, and straightway he knew that this Elsie Dresden was a very welcome number.

She had come for the clothes, she told him. The industrial mission was her pet charity. She and her grandmother, she explained, had not lived in town long and they felt that they were fortunate to have such an interesting cause to work for.

"I'm mighty sorry," Bob Williams told her, "that we haven't anything ready now, but I'm sure we will have tomorrow. Can you call, or shall I or one of the other men bring them around?"

"I'll call," smiled Elsie brightly, and Bob found himself smiling rather eagerly back at her.

After she had gone he explained and likewise assured the brothers, one and all, that it was their duty to produce something or other for the bundle for the industrial mission.

Ronald Price was responsible for the package that followed, but he never would have thought of it if it had not been that Bob Williams insisted that Ronald should donate his old raincoat and his second pair of shoes, not to mention all the neckties he owned but two, and all his winter underclothes to the cause. "You're a savior," Bob told him. "You'll soon be earning money and you can buy some more by the time winter comes around."

So the bundle was assembled. Ronald took upon his shoulders the task of packing it up, and the next afternoon Bob waited to be able to give it to Miss Dresden when she called. He asked if he could not go with her to the mission—so he could help carry the bundle—and before he had left her he had dated her up for the next Saturday night house dance.

That night Bob discovered that his spring suit—the only suit he owned beside the one he was wearing and his tuxedo—had disappeared from his closet. Ronald Price said that it seemed only fair. He had sent Ronald's suit.

Bob Williams made no comment, but the next morning early he found his way to the industrial mission. A brisk looking white-haired lady, apparently rather near-sighted in spite of thick-lensed glasses, was at the desk in the reception room. Ranged on books and hangers behind her and around the room were various suits, coats, hats, etc.

"Is there something I can do for you, young man?" she said, and right away Bob knew she was Elsie's grandmother. "We have some rather nice things this morning."

This was an opportunity, thought Bob. It would be easier getting his suit back this way than by explaining the prank and making himself out an Indian giver.

"I was looking for a suit, so's I could go to work," she said, and with assumed wistfulness. "The one I'm wearing is borrowed." Bob hated to lie to a lady, but the situation seemed to warrant the falsehood.

With a little maneuvering he picked out his own suit and retired to another room to try it on. The kind old lady insisted that a dollar was quite ample pay for it and threw in a half dozen rather good second-hand ties and some shirts, into the bargain.

Later when Elsie Dresden knew Bob much better she told how she had first begun really to admire him when he gave an almost new suit to the industrial mission. Her grandmother had told her that she let a very poor young man have it—a poor down-and-out fellow who was trying to get a job.

And even after they were engaged Bob did not tell Elsie Dresden the truth of the matter. And he is wondering whether it is one of the confessions he ought to make before they are married at the altar.

THE OLIVER ROW CROP

A 4-Row Cultivator that works close, keeps level, covers big acreage and does not pack the soil

So much is done automatically, so much more is made simple that clean, close cultivating becomes a very easy job with the Row Crop. Big acreage can be covered with this 4-row job!

The Row Crop method of steering that brakes—brakes that steer—makes it simple for the operator to follow his rows closely at all times.

The tractor, itself, is high above, and far away from the crops. The Tip-toe Wheels instead of packing actually help cultivate the soil. All shovels are out in front of the operator. There are none behind that he has to watch.

The guide wheels and the 12-inch vertical "float" allow each gang to adjust itself to the contour of the ground . . . independently. All shovels on each gang are level at all times—there is no hinge action in the gang.

You want to see this tractor—a wide variety of sweeps and shovels fit it for every cultivating job. Complete tools and power for all farm work make it a most adaptable, most universal, most economical power farm unit.

Viking Game Board Found

Harvard archeologists found an ancient Viking game in Ireland. It was found in a Tenth century lake dwelling. The game consists of a board about nine inches square, perforated with 49 round holes. The center hole is surrounded by a double ring, cut in the wood. This board is set inside an ornately carved frame with two wood handles. Each handle is rounded like a doorknob, one almost twice the size of the other. Christian crosses of a type found on the Isle of Man are also on the game board.

Foods of Ancient Peoples

The inhabitants of Germany in the Iron age, about 800 B. C., ate ground grains, milk, and butter made of hazelnuts, according to Dr. Johannes Gruss of Berlin-Rahnsdorf, who examined recent archeological finds discovered near Muhlbach, Germany. The relics consisted chiefly of the remains of a man and food urns that had been cremated before burial, and an urn containing hazelnut butter was in the fire. This sterilized the contents, and Doctor Gruss found the butter still in good condition, though 2,700 years old. —Literary Digest.

Florence's Triumph

By IDA MELLON

©. by McClure Newspaper Syndicate WNU Service

FLORENCE had expected to have a wonderful time when she went to visit her aunt and cousins in New York. But somehow when she arrived things were not just what she had expected them to be.

Her cousins, Dolly and Joan, had changed, for one thing. They seemed to be so anxious all the time about their various social engagements. They were anxious, too, about Florence.

"You mustn't be too nice to Dick Thomas," they told her, the night after Dick had entertained them all at dinner and the theater. "He's nice enough, of course, but he hasn't any money, and it's useless to have a man like that hanging around all the time; it keeps other men away."

"But—he must have spent a good deal," ventured their cousin from the country.

"Probably you're right, Florence," Joan answered. "But it must have taken nearly every cent he earned last week to do it. Let's see—we'll have to have him here for dinner some time soon, to pay him back for last night; let's ask him the night Peggy Frances comes, and get rid of both of them at once!"

Florence didn't like that way of doing things.

At her home in a sleepy little southern town you were friendly with people whether they had money or not.

Florence knew without being told that her cousins wanted to get married—and with them, getting married meant marrying a man who had money.

To Florence it seemed hideous, but Joan and Dolly and their mother seemed to think it was the only thing for a girl to do.

"You just have to have money," Joan told her once. "Without it life's just impossible."

One of the young men to whom Dolly was especially nice discovered that Florence was the daughter of the famous Samuel Darwin, and devoted himself to her after that. Her aunt told Florence that she ought to be delighted, that the young man was a great catch. Florence said nothing.

He gave a dinner for Florence a month after she arrived in New York, at a very smart new restaurant. It happened to be an evening when she was feeling especially homesick, when it seemed that she must pack her trunk in the morning and go straight back home. She was trying hard to pretend to enjoy herself, when, glancing up, she saw the face of the young man who was picking up the soiled dishes.

"Why—why—" she turned in her chair, but he had gone off to the kitchen, and the next course was being served. Florence was very quiet until it was over, and the young man appeared again. Then, as he removed her plate, she laid her hand on his arm.

"You're Billy James, aren't you?" she said, in her soft, southern drawl.

"Yes—I am," he said, and his voice had that same soft drawl in it.

"Florence!" exclaimed her aunt, from across the table. "That's the bus boy!"

"I don't care," Florence answered defiantly. "I used to know him down home—and—"

He had come back for more dishes, reluctantly. She motioned him to her side.

"Billy, what are you doing here? Won't you come to see me?" she asked. "I'd really like to see you. Please?"

"Why, Florence, I—I—" "Florence!" her aunt exclaimed again, and the young man disappeared once more. He didn't come back again.

"I haven't seen him for ages; he ran away from home," she said. "And now maybe I won't see him again. Oh—"

And suddenly the other diners in the smart restaurant were amazed to see a pretty young girl in a white and silver frock rise from her chair and hurry across the dining room, to the door of the kitchen—and rush straight through it, with the head waiter following.

"Billy!" she cried, as she caught up with him. "Why are you running away from me?"

"Because I'm a flat failure," he told her. "I said I'd come up here and make good, because I was sure I could sell that play I wrote down home. Well, I haven't sold it, and I had to earn a living somehow—you shouldn't have spoken to me!"

"Don't be silly!" Florence told him, catching hold of his arm with both hands. "I don't care what you're doing—I love you, and I always will!"

Florence's aunt scolded frantically, and tried to prevent the wedding which, nevertheless, took place the next morning. She stopped scolding only when Billy's play was accepted, a week later. Then she told her friends, as Florence had told everyone from the start, "Of course I knew that dear Billy would succeed!"

And she took credit to herself for the very pretty romance that grew out of Florence's speaking to the bus boy.

Mound Builders a Puzzle

The Smithsonian Institution says that up to the present the Mound Builders have remained a mysterious people. They were unquestionably Indians, but it has been impossible to establish any relationship between them and any tribe encountered in North America by the earliest white explorers. It has been impossible to establish what became of them.

STRONGER BUSINESS AND STRONGER BANKS

By F. M. LAW
President American Bankers Association

DURING the crisis when confidence was shattered, bankers were properly concerned in liquidity. Their main thought was to prepare to meet any demand for withdrawal of funds. They were more interested therefore in collecting loans than in making them. For this they cannot be justly blamed. It was a proper procedure.

F. M. LAW

Now that confidence has been so largely restored banks will naturally resume a more normal lending policy. This does not mean they will or should extend loose or unsound credit, but that in the utmost good faith bankers will perform their proper part in recovery by a sympathetic and constructive attitude in the making of sound loans. Nor should commercial banks make capital or long time loans, for the reason that their loans are made from funds derived from deposits payable for the most part on demand.

When the return of confidence is further on its way, business men will find need for credit in making their plans. Then good borrowers, who for the most part have been so conspicuously absent from the market, will return. They will be warmly welcomed by the banks.

Business Men's Fears

Business men have not yet laid all their fears. They worry about what Congress may or may not do. They concern themselves about a trend toward control of business by government. They fear taxes beyond their power to pay. These are real sources of worry and when they are reassured along these lines they will be more inclined to take a fresh look at the future and to make plans to go forward.

As a matter of fact there are tangible evidences of recovery. The Federal Reserve Board officially has stated that prices, wages, business activity and production were back to the highest peak since early in 1931. Commercial failures in the United States are being cut almost in half as compared with the same period last year. It has been reported that the decline in export and import trade was definitely checked in the middle of 1933 and replaced during the last half of the year by a substantial recovery movement.

Among favorable factors is the improved condition of the banks. It is doubtless true that the banking structure of the country has never been in a sounder, stronger and more liquid condition than it is today. My authority for that statement is the Comptroller of the Currency. No longer is there any fear or thought of bank runs. Depositors once more know that their money is safe and the banker, thrice armed in the knowledge of his own strength, is looking forward.

Training for Bankers

The American Bankers Association has been active for many years training young men and women in order that they may be duly qualified for the business of banking. Standard courses are furnished with able and experienced teachers. This work is done under the direction of the American Institute of Banking Section of the association. Over two hundred chapters, or local banking schools, are in active operation throughout the country and thousands of the younger generation of bankers are being graduated each year. These students are taught not only banking practices and policies, but they are also well grounded in the highest ideals and standards of business ethics. A proposal is now under consideration to establish a central school, which will offer advanced or graduate work to a selective list taken from those who have completed the standard courses.—F. M. Law, President American Bankers Association.

Banks Repaying Loans From R. F. C.

Although banks and trust companies have been the largest borrowers from the Reconstruction Finance Corporation, they have exceeded all other classes of borrowers in the rapidity of their repayments. Since the inception of the R. F. C. in February, 1932, loans have been authorized by it to 7,080 banking institutions in the amount of $1,995,000,000. Of this sum $442,000,000 was not taken by the borrowers, the actual advances being $1,553,000,000.

Repayments against these advances through April 30, 1934, aggregated $925,000,000, or about 60 per cent. The ratio of repayments for all classes of borrowers has been only about 37 per cent. These rapid repayments by the banks are taken by competent observers as a strong indication of returning normal financial and banking conditions.

Bankers Finance Scholarships

The American Bankers Association Foundation for Education in Economics has since its establishment in 1928, awarded 354 college loan scholarships, the total loans repaid in that period being $262,000 and the amount now outstanding $86,900. The total investments of its funds are $540,000.

PINEAPPLE ROUTE TO MAN'S HEART!

The way to a man's heart is known by all good cooks!

But the shortest distance between his mouth and his affection is undeniably the Pineapple Cream Cake way! And for men—from 5 to 85—this decorative edible is a luxury which may be indulged in often. Its pineapple filling is healthful as it is luscious, for canned pineapple, according to dietetic advice, should be included in the daily menu in some form or another.

A pineapple cream cake fit to serve as birthday cake for even the most special of holidays may be made easily—with several different kinds of cake—your favorite white cake, sponge cake or Lady Baltimore. But one of the simplest and most delicious of all is the Pineapple Cream Cake recipe which follows:

SPONGE LAYER CAKE
4 eggs 1½ tsp. baking powder
3 tbsp. cold water ¼ cup sugar
1 cup sugar ¼ tsp. salt
1½ tsp. cornstarch 1 tsp. vanilla or almond extract
Flour (about one cup)

Separate eggs and beat yolks into cold water. Add sugar gradually and beat two minutes after all of the sugar is added. Put cornstarch in cup, and fill to brim with flour, sifted. Mix, and sift cornstarch and flour with the baking powder and beaten egg whites, and flavoring. Bake in three layer pans, in moderate oven, 325 to 350 degrees about 45 minutes.

PINEAPPLE CREAM FILLING
½ cup butter 2 tbsp. cream
creamed ½ cup well-drained crushed pineapple
2 cups powdered sugar
1 tsp. flavoring—almond or vanilla

Cream butter in the top of a double boiler, add cream, and powdered sugar, flavoring and well-drained pineapple. Spread layers with the cream pineapple mixture. Frost the cake with the same mixture. Pat chopped brown nuts or coconut on top and sides, and set wedges of canned sliced pineapple on top.

England Being Freed From Signal Nuisance

Motorists in England are rapidly being freed from the "stop-and-go" signal nuisance, according to a bulletin issued by the highway engineering department of the Chicago Motor Club, which says: "The English highway authorities, realizing the importance of traffic operation on the streets and highways, have been concentrating on modernizing the English traffic signal system. Instead of the common traffic signal which blinks from red to green on an arbitrary schedule, vehicle actuated control is being widely installed. In Surrey county 97 per cent of the installations are of this modern type. In five other counties more than half of the lights are equipped in this manner.

"Throughout Illinois fewer than one per cent of the stop-and-go signals are of this time-saving variety. As yet, the state has not made a single installation on a major rural highway. The advantage of these signals is that they are operated by traffic passing over a detector in the street in conformity with the flow of traffic. If a motorist drives up to an intersection so controlled when there is no traffic on the cross street, he will be given the green signal at once and permitted to go ahead without any of the annoying delay so common at the average controlled intersection. Not only is this a time-saving device, but it also acts as a safety measure, since it brings motorists to have a greater respect for signals in general by causing them to stop only when necessary."

Take it for nothing, retorted the druggist. I wouldn't write 'assafetida' and 'Hezekiah Honeyfuckle' for a nickel.

Coloring Copper

Various methods of producing a green coloring on copper or brass, apart from painting or lacquering, are given. To produce on a copper statue a patina-like deposit, brush it over with a very dilute solution of copper nitrate, to which a little common salt solution has been added. When entirely dry, it is brushed with a fluid composed of 100 parts weak vinegar, five parts sal ammoniac and one part oxalic acid; repeat after drying. The green-brown color forms in about a week.
