Cheer Up Farmers! Drouth is Over for Next 25 Years

Chicago, July 16—Midwestern farmers were promised today that their drouth worries may be over for 25 years.

Willis Ray Gregg, Chief of the United States Weather Bureau in Washington, said that he was hopeful of increased annual precipitation, approaching a maximum in 10 or 15 years. The drouth, he said, appears to be the final vicious dip of a 25-year dry cycle.

"While it is impossible to accurately forecast weather conditions for a long period in advance, a study of weather charts for the past 100 years indicates that eras of maximum and minimum rainfall occur in 25-year cycles," he said. "The drouth this summer is at the bottom of such a dry cycle, according to charts, and should be followed by increasing rainfall."

Mr. Murdeck of Champaign, the president, was in charge of the services.

At the close the ladies of the church served refreshments to all in the town hall. About one hundred men were present.

Weather to be Deciding Factor in War on Pests

If recent wet weather continues for another two or three weeks, the chinch bug probably will not destroy more than 15 to 20 percent of the Illinois corn crop and the threat of the pest will be over for another period of years, W. P. Flint, chief entomologist of the State Natural History Survey and of the U. of I. College of Agriculture, Tuesday noon predicted before the weekly meeting of Urbana Rotary and the Urbana Golf and Country Club.

However, if the weather should turn dry, as much as 30 to 40 percent of the state's corn crop, with its average annual value of 120 million dollars, might easily fall prey to the bugs, he reported.

The bugs are dry weather insects, and repeated rains not only 'muds' them in but is also favorable to the development of the white fungus disease which attacks the pests, it was explained.

No matter what the weather is from now on, the bugs have already destroyed from 7 to 10 percent of the corn in the 72 infested counties and killed all the barley and wheat in the northeastern part of the state, Prof. Flint reported.

No insect causes more trouble in Illinois than does the chinch bug, and so serious is it for the country as a whole that it might easily destroy half the nation's crop if unopposed, Prof. Flint said.

Harry Richard Will Move to Champaign

Harry Richard, local rural route mail carrier, and family will remove to Champaign about the first of August, where he has been transferred to a vacancy from the Champaign post-office.

Route No. 1 out of Broadlands which Mr. Richard has served for the past 15 years will be consolidated with route two out of Broadlands and the Longview route.

The change which becomes effective Aug. 1 will add 12 miles to Carl Dicks route giving him a total of 39.75 miles to serve.

The other part of route one will be given to E. C. Hagerman, Longview carrier.

Mr. Richard has been very active in religious and civic circles during his 25 years residence here and will be missed by the entire community. However the best wishes of his many friends here will accompany him and his family to their new home in Champaign.

The first of the week the State Highway Dept. placed stop signs on the streets of Broadlands which connect with the paved roads which run east and west, and north and south through the village. This is a very good safety plan and should have been carried out years ago.

The largest crowd of the season attended the free all talking picture show at Broadlands last Saturday night. Why are the crowds getting larger each week? Here's the only explanation we can give: folks from other towns tell us that we have better shows here.

Corn Loans to be Due September 1

Champaign County farmers who borrowed money from the Federal government, offering stored corn as security, will not be called upon to liquidate their obligations until Sept. 1.

The Farm Administration has extended the time of maturity for one month, A. R. Grindley, secretary of the supervisory committee, said Monday.

The extension will permit any farmers who need corn feeding purposes to make necessary arrangements for discharging their obligations, officials advised. It will also permit a continuation of the orderly discharge of loan notes by farmers now able to settle.

The government will ask, however, for prompt settlement during August of loans on corn which is in poor condition or likely to deteriorate if left in unprotected cribs.

Under corn loan regulations now in effect borrowers may sell their corn and pay off notes held by the government at any time, receiving the difference between the market price and the loan rate of 45 cents per bushel plus interest and insurance charges.

Borrowers may also make partial settlement of their loans and obtain part of their grain for feeding.

The total corn on farms in corn loan states on July 1 was estimated at 382,753,000 bushels compared with 621,999,000 bushels on April 1. Of the stocks now on hand 256,532,000 bushels are stored under government loans.

Better Poultry

Farmers' wives formerly looked upon the poultry flock as merely a means of better providing for the family table, with possibly a little "pin money" from the surplus chickens and eggs. For these purposes it was not thought that any particular care was necessary in the selection of breeds or in the general handling of the flock.

But that idea is fast being discarded and the thrifty farm homemaker now looks upon her poultry as an important source of cash income. She has found that it is little more trouble to have a big flock than it is to have a small flock, and the big flock is a money-maker.

Not only does she have larger flocks nowadays, but she has better stock and employs scientific methods in her poultry raising. More attention is given to proper feeding and sanitation, poor layers are culled out; infertile eggs are produced and they are marketed clean, graded according to size and color.

A good-sized flock of pure-bred chickens affords one of the most dependable sources of farm income.

Sunday on Blue Monday

Whether we entirely agree with Evangelist Billy Sunday's theology or not, it must be admitted that he has a lot of common sense ideas about things in general. He handed out one in a sermon some time ago which should have caused listening husbands to sit up and take notice. He said:

"I don't believe I could preach a better sermon than to urge every farmer in America to get rid of Blue Monday. Washing with a tub and board is such hard work that women have given that name to the weekly washday."

Then he reminded husbands of the drudgery their wives undergo without complaining, yet at the expense of their health and beauty. He continued:

"Mr. Farmer, look at your wife and see how she has failed since the day you stood up with her before the preacher and promised to love, honor and cherish her through sickness and health, and hard times and good. Look at the care lines in her cheeks—those are love scars made for you."

He concluded with the pointed suggestion that the neglectful husband "hit the trail" immediately and buy for the overworked wife the greatest of all home labor savers, a washing machine.

The Seven Wonders

Nearly everyone has heard of the seven wonders of the world, but probably few could name them and fewer could tell what became of them. Those interested in such things might clip this out for their scrap book.

The seven wonders of the world were so named by Antipater, a writer of Palestine, about 200 B. C., as follows:

The Hanging Gardens of Babylon, destroyed in 484 B. C., more than 100 years before they were listed among the wonders.

The Temple of Diana at Ephesus, burned in 262 A. D.

The Statue of Zeus at Olympus, destroyed in 408.

The Colossus of Rhodes, sold for junk in 653.

The Lighthouse of Pharos at Alexandria, fell in an earthquake in 1375.

The Mausoleum of Artemisia, destroyed in 1402.

The Pyramid of Cheops, the only one of the 'Seven Wonders' still in existence.

Such were the seven wonders of the ancient world. Many lists of modern wonders have been made, but a recent writer selects not the perishable works of man, but the discoveries and inventions which have revolutionized civilization.

He names the radio, the telephone, the airplane, antiseptics, spectrum analysis and radium. Whether his list is the best that might be made or not, the wonders mentioned will survive as long as humanity exists, bestowing untold benefits upon mankind.

Sure Cures For All

A complete list of superstitious ideas concerning the prevention or cure of diseases, prevalent among ignorant people even to this day, would be almost endless. In a recent address Dr. Joseph L. Miller, long a practicing physician among the hill folk of West Virginia, enumerated a few of them, including the following:

Soot or cobwebs stop bleeding; a bag of asafetida hung around the neck prevents measles, diphtheria and whooping cough; amber necklaces prevent goiter; rubbing a greasy dishrag over a baby's face stops convulsions; piercing the ears aids weak eyes; nutmegs worn around the neck prevent indigestion and colic; blood from a black cat cures erysipelas; carrying horse chestnuts in the pocket prevents rheumatism; a coin held under the upper lip and a cold key dropped down the back will stop nose-bleed.

The annoyance of hiccoughs may be readily abated by taking nine sips of water, counting nine backwards and turning around nine times; putting on a baby's clothes feet first insures normal growth; wearing the knee cap of a sheep on the leg prevents cramps; placing a pan of water under the bed stops night sweats wearing a rattlesnake skin belt prevents lumbago; rubbing snake oil, skunk fat or fishing worm oil into the joints cures inflammation; wrapping a warm red woolen sock around the neck cures sore throat.

The ritual for curing asthma is more elaborate. Back the patient up against a tree, peg a lock of hair into a hole bored in its trunk and snip it off. When the bark grows over the hair the asthma will be gone.

All the foregoing are utterly foolish procedures, of course, but superstitious persons believe in some or all of them. And if such beliefs give them any comfort, who should worry?

Peter Finds a Way

By MARY MERRICK

© by McClure Newspaper Syndicate
WNU Service

AGNES MARKEY slammed the door of her small coupe and settled herself behind the wheel with an air of indignant finality.

And that's that, she thought—out of a job, no money to get back home, stuck in Florida with only one friend in the whole darned state, and that's life! Being Agnes, she gave a mental flip of her skirts to the whole foolish proceeding, and turned the car's nose south toward the cabbage palm desolated island where that one friend had a tiny cottage; where she knew she could get shelter, food, sympathy and a good cussing out.

Oh, yes, she'd been a fool to stay in Florida after having that fight with Peter, and giving him back his ring and refusing the marriage license. Might have known jobs didn't last forever—not even good jobs. Peter was the wise boy. He'd gone home and was now rolling in the sugar-coated luxury provided by that wealthy, silly mother who had been the cause of their disagreement. She hated that mother! She hated Peter!

She swept on at fifty miles an hour. She should have telephoned Lillian, but Lillian had no telephone. And a wire would get there in the morning—Agnes herself in two hours.

It was well after dark when Agnes reached the narrow bridge connecting the mainland with the island. And as she had thought possible, Lillian's house was dark. But she parked the car out on the road. She found, also as she had expected, that the door was unlocked.

She switched on a light and looked about. The room had that upset air of having been lately left. Lillian, in all probability, was somewhere playing bridge, or down at the beach taking a moonlight swim.

Lillian's bed was broad and looked comfortable. "Lillian may be surprised, I hope not unpleasantly," she murmured to herself, and took off her frock.

The light was scarcely out when Agnes, being Agnes, troubles and all, was sound asleep. She woke with a certain feeling of vagueness. The overhead light was shining brightly in her eyes. Oh, yes, of course, Lillian.

She turned over and looked—at a tall, brown-skinned, burnt-blond young man with ironically smiling eyes.

"Mamma's darling boy just dropped from his nice new shiny airplane as a little midnight surprise," Agnes managed to drawl.

"And doth the burnt bride returneth to the bridegroom?" returned Peter pleasantly.

"Clothing, as usual," Agnes came back smoothly. "But you'd better find your airplane and go back to mamma. I'm sure Lillian will be annoyed. She doesn't like midnight visitors—unannounced."

"Oh, as long as it's you," said Peter, unexpectedly. "I'm sure she wouldn't mind, but you see, she's gone to the east coast with some friends for the week-end . . ."

"Oooh," breathed Agnes, her aplomb noticeably shaken.

"And she turned the shack over to me—for the sunshine and all. You see before you the wreck of a pneumonia victim—recuperating."

But Agnes, now thoroughly awake and herself, which meant poised to the point of pugnacity, sat upright in bed and spoke firmly.

"Peter Bennett, you get right out of this room. If you don't, I'm getting up anyway, and I'm dressing and leaving here immediately. What do you mean by putting me in a position like this?"

"Splendid, Agnes, great! I'll leave, of course, but I'll wait for you in the living room."

Peter went out, and Agnes dressed. The sap, she thought, not a speck of fight in him. Mamma's boy! Oh, she'd like to wring his neck.

He was waiting for her in the living room. "I'm sorry you won't reconsider and stay," he said. "I'd take a blanket and sleep on the beach. We could talk it over in the morning."

"Oh, you . . ." spat Agnes. "I wouldn't stay within a mile of you. You're spineless, weak-brained, spoiled. . . . I told you so before. You still are."

She flung herself out of the door. She heard Peter laugh. "Good-by," he called.

She stepped on the starter. An angry growl was her only answer. The sweet purr of the motor remained dead. She stamped harder. She kicked. But all to no avail. The car wouldn't start.

She opened the door to get out. Peter was standing there, still smiling, in the moonlight.

"I didn't think you could get it started, dear," he said. "You see, I opened the tank, and your gas has all run away."

For a moment they stood staring at each other. Then, suddenly, they were in each other's arms.

"But, Peter, dear, we can't stay here, all night, together."

"Why not, dear? There's a minister living in the cottage down the beach, and I've still got that marriage license. What say?"

"We may be fools, but I'm game!" whispered Agnes, as her arms slipped once more about his neck.

WHEN you are suffering, you want relief—not tomorrow—not next week—but right away. DR. MILES' ANTI-PAIN PILLS relieve in just a few minutes—less than half the time required for many other pain-relieving medicines to act.

Next time you have a Headache, or Neuralgia, or Muscular, Sciatic, Rheumatic, or Periodic Pains, just take an Anti-Pain Pill. Learn for yourself how prompt and effective these little pain relievers are. You will never again want to use slower, less effective, less palatable medicines, after you have used Dr. Miles' Anti-Pain Pills.

I am much pleased with your Anti-Pain Pills. They sure are wonderful for a headache and for functional pains. I have tried every kind of pills for headache, but none satisfied me as your Anti-Pain Pills have.

FAIR PLANS BIG FARM PROGRAM

Barn Dance, Rural Events Featured at Chicago Aug. 11 to 18.

Chicago.—Four million persons have entered the gates of the new World's Fair since it opened here May 26. Most of the throngs that have thrilled to the new spectacle, the new "foreign villages," which offer in themselves a "tour of the world," the new shows and the new free entertainment projects, are city dwellers. Chicagoans, visitors from other cities all over the United States and visitors from foreign countries have poured in, in large numbers.

But the real farmer-visitors' invasion of A Century of Progress has not yet begun. It will reach its peak when the Fair celebrates Farm Week, from August 11 to August 18, inclusive.

Last year Farm Week accounted for the largest single week's attendance of the entire Fair. Plans to make the celebration interesting and important to farmers are even more elaborate now than last year, according to the events division of the exposition.

WLS Barn Dance at Fair.

Saturday, August 11, will lead off the program with a massive farm parade, including bands, farm implements, machinery and equipment and farm animals. Depicting the modernization of agriculture, it will be one of the longest and most comprehensive pageants of the entire exposition.

Sunday, August 12, will see special music and farm programs interlinked with the observance of Chicago Incorporation day, with Chicago acting as host to the out-of-town multitudes.

Rexford Tugwell, assistant secretary of agriculture, has been invited to be the principal speaker of the Farm Organization day program Monday. Tuesday will be farm radio day, with the entire WLS "Barn Dance" presenting a program in the Court of States; 40,000 persons saw this event in 1933.

Aerial Sham Battle Planned.

The farmer's wife will have her day Wednesday, August 15, which has been named Farm Women's day, with special programs arranged to pay tribute to the women who battled to carve a nation out of the wilderness. Farm Youth day, Thursday, will be full of recognition of the future farmers of the land, with emphasis on 4-H club work.

Programs of interest to rural newspapers and magazines will feature Farm Press day, Friday, Saturday, August 18, will be farm music day, with its high spot the gigantic Chicago-Music festival in Soldier Field, adjoining the Fair grounds. This annual event has attracted more than a half million persons in the four years of its existence. This day will also see many special contests, such as milk-maid, husband-calling and hog-calling contests.

Saturday is also Illinois day. There will be a review of 10,000 troops and demonstrations by anti-aircraft artillery units, shooting with tracer bullets at balloon targets towed by airplanes.

Farm Exhibits Are Many.

During Farm Week parties of farmers will be taken on free guided tours of the Fair grounds. Farm visitors, with only a limited time to spend, will in this way be able to see everything of vital interest to them.

Henry Ford's industrialized barn, where he shows how the farmer may, at low cost, raise soy beans, obtain the residue and process it himself, making industrial products for which he can obtain a profitable revenue, is one of the new exhibits. Another is the International Harvester company's radio-controlled tractor, which demonstrates how farming may be done from an easy chair on the veranda. Model farm homes will attract many rural sightseers, as will the exhibits of the great packing plants and the automobile manufacturers.

The Brook Hill Dairy farm, with its model farm of 1950, shows the last word in modern milk production, from cow to bottle. The International Egg Laying contest is a huge laboratory where the farmer may study the latest egg-production methods first-hand. Scores of commercial exhibitors will have displays of prime interest to Farm-Week visitors.

Special Rates Lower Cost.

Special railroad and bus rates will make it easier for the farmer to get to the Fair this summer. Automobile agencies and oil stations will give him assistance in highway travel. At the Fair, he will find costs surprisingly low. Restaurants are cheaper, transportation is cheaper, there is plentiful free entertainment and eighty per cent of all the comfort stations are free.

Probably one of the leading attractions for rural visitors will be the foreign villages, so faithful in reproductions of life and scenes in fifteen countries that they offer the equivalent of a tour of the world, right on the Fair grounds.
