Not only small items will be offered but many articles sold in Danville stores, merchandise on a higher plane and many wanted items of seasonable merchandise will be offered the public at startling reductions. No matter where you live it will pay you well to visit Danville on Dollar Day. To stay away means the loss of many opportunities that all who visit Danville will have the chance to grasp. The tide is turning and prices on everything is beginning to rise. We've hit rock-bottom—now prices are on the upward turn. Fire destroyed the large barn and its contents on the J. P. Potter farm 2½ miles northeast of Broadlands last Saturday night about 10 o'clock. J. P. Potter, owner of the building lost about 40 bushels of corn and about 40 bushels of oats in the fire. Russell Potter lost four or five tons of baled straw, and Edgar Moser between 25 and 30 tons of baled straw, alfalfa and clover hay, and a new oats seeder. The barn and its contents were partially insured.

The house is unoccupied and the origin of the fire is unknown. The Broadlands fire engine was rushed to the scene but the blaze had gotten beyond control and nothing could be done to save the building or its contents. A large number of people were attracted to the scene of the blaze.

A Big Increase in Motor Vehicle Accidents

An enormous increase in motor vehicle accidents in Illinois this year as compared with last is indicated by a report from the State Department of Public Health issued recently, which shows a 38 per cent jump in mortality attributed to automobile mishaps during the first five months of 1934. A total of 956 deaths were recorded compared with 691 in the corresponding five months of 1933. A big increase has been observed in each month.

If the present rate continues more than 3,000 people will be killed in motor accidents during the year of 1934. The highest number of fatalities recorded in any previous year was 2,333 for 1931.

Lightning Rods O. K.

Some 50 years ago practically every farmer who could afford it had his home and barn equipped with lightning rods, at least in some sections of the country. In fact, the use of lightning rods was quite common for many years.

But the lightning rod business came to be exploited by slick-tongued and often unscrupulous agents, some of whom swindled their farmer customers outright, while others installed the rods in such a faulty manner as to make them worthless. As a result a strong prejudice against lightning rods developed and their use was almost discontinued. The idea became widespread that the rods were only fakes, anyway, and of no protective value.

In recent years it has been scientifically demonstrated that lightning rods, properly installed are really effective. A leading electrical expert, who specializes in the study of lightning and means for combating it, recently declared that a good lightning rod will afford protection in 99 cases out of 100.

Most lightning damage occurs in the country, and of about 50 deaths from lightning each year nine out of 10 are among the rural population. Lightning damage is almost unknown in cities, where the steel frames of skyscrapers carry the bolts harmlessly into the ground.

A Real Death Ray?

In recent years there have been reports of the discovery of a powerful "death ray" by various persons, but none of them seems to have amounted to anything. This month however, the famous 77-year-old inventor, Nikola Tesla, announced that he had produced a destructive ray which could be projected many miles, destroying everything in its path.

This mysterious new ray would be of greatest value as a protection of cities from enemy attack, according to the inventor, who declares it could be projected in vast curtains 100 miles long and several miles high, which would be impenetrable from land or air.

If announced by an unknown inventor, the extravagant claims made for the new ray would hardly be taken seriously. Coming from one of Dr. Tesla's standing they will have respectful consideration at least.

Born in Europe, Dr. Tesla came to America and became associated with Thomas A. Edison 50 years ago, and is a naturalized American citizen. He has been granted about 100 patents, some of which marked revolutionary advances in the electrical arts. For several years he has been engaged in efforts to solve the problem of electrical transmission without wires.

Dr. Tesla is reported to have expressed his intention to place his death ray at the disposal of the Geneva disarmament conference in the interest of peace. He considers the new invention to be a defensive weapon, whose purpose is to make war a foolhardy venture in the future.

Further developments and tests of the Tesla death ray will be awaited with intense interest.

Oriental Wisdom

Addressing a conference of missionaries, Rev. Harris Kirk of Baltimore declared that "heathens have good reason for disliking civilization, because it always introduces the vices and evils of civilized countries."

He also predicted that the world will eventually look to the Orient for political and moral leadership.

Many missionaries have complained of increasing difficulties since the world war, owing to the bad impression created by so-called Christian nations engaging in that unholy orgy of death and destruction.

Even in peace times it can not be denied that the prevalence of crime, especially in the United States, is a rather sorry example to hold up to the heathen. No wonder they are skeptical of Western culture and religion, when such fruits are borne by our vaunted white civilization.

Alluding to this phase of the problem, Robert Doan of Columbus expressed the view that "practicing Christianity at home is more essential than preaching it abroad."

Rev. Kirk is no doubt sound in his idea that we have much to learn of philosophy and true morality from some of the Eastern peoples. The Orientals have been from time immemorial given to serious meditation on these problems.

We might also remember that Christianity, like all the other principal religions of the world, had its beginning in Asia.

Monuments To A. E. F.

Impressive dedication ceremonies will be held in France during the next few weeks when monuments to the heroism of the American Expeditionary Force will be unveiled on the principal battlefields where United States troops fought during the World War.

These monuments have been erected under the supervision of the American Battle Monuments Commission, of which General John J. Pershing is chairman, created by an act of Congress approved March 4, 1923.

Among the battlefields and cemeteries selected for the erection of monuments and other memorial structures are Chateau-Thierry (Hill 204), St. Mihiel, Belleau Wood, Montfaucon, Surness, Blanc Mont, and Cantigny. There also has been erected a Naval memorial at Brest, commemorating the well-performed task of the United States Navy in convoying American troops to France.

In addition to its work in selecting sites, approving designs and erecting these memorials, the commission has gathered much historical material pertaining to the war, including photographs of the battlefields upon which American troops were engaged.

Since his retirement from active military duty in 1924, General Pershing has devoted the greater part of his time to the work of the Monuments Commission, which needless to say, has been done with the utmost care and thoroughness. It is gratifying that the distinguished commander of the A. E. F., who will be 74 years of age on September 13, has been spared to complete this important patriotic service.

We enjoy our right to the pursuit of happiness more if we can pursue it in a better car than our neighbors have.

In country driving keep at least two car lengths behind the car ahead, advises a bulletin from the accident prevention department of the Chicago Motor Club. This space is not only a margin of safety but affords an opportunity for cars overtaking yours to get back into the proper lane when opposing traffic approaches. This practice is a nice bit of highway courtesy and may prevent a sad mishap.

After the Club Meeting

By FLORENCE DOUGLAS

WHEN it first happened Mabel thought that they ought to call off the club meeting. With little sister Daisy and herself so upset that they couldn't cut the bread for the sandwiches straight, how were they going to be able to act as hostesses for the literary club that night? But after talking to the president of the club over the telephone Mabel reluctantly changed her mind.

"Something really rather upsetting has happened," she said, with an air of mystery. "Especially upsetting to poor little Daisy, though I'm nervous enough over it, goodness knows."

"Poor little Daisy," was a rather beautiful young woman of twenty-five, who lived alone with her bachelor sister, some ten years her senior.

"You'll just have to have the meeting," Mrs. Henry Jones, the president of the club, insisted, "unless, of course, it is physically impossible. Every one is expecting to be there, and we couldn't reach every one now. We're going to have theatrical charades—going to act out the names of great actors or plays—and your house is so nice for charades, with the wide double doors and the large drawing room."

Daisy appeared rather pale and listless that evening, while Mabel, who was clearly excited, showed cheeks that flamed with color.

The charades progressed smoothly enough, the members of the club dividing themselves into four groups, each one of which presented some distinguished actor, living or dead. The group of which Mrs. Jones was leader had chosen Richard Mansfield. "Rich" was easy enough, and "ard" would be rendered by a Cockney Englishman trying to say hard. For the last name, "field" was comparatively easy, and for the first syllable they would just need a man's hat or coat.

"No use searching here," said Mrs. Jones. "There never was a man in the family, or at least not for ever so long. But I'll just run to one of the neighbors. I guess Professor Barnes, next door, would be glad enough to let me have his hat."

So she hurried to the Barnes. But the house was closed. So she went on to the next house. The first knock at the old-fashioned brass knocker brought a prepossessing man to the door.

"I have come on a strange errand," said the thoroughly substantial Mrs. Jones. "We are having a club meeting and are doing charades. We need a man's hat or coat. Would you lend us one?"

"I'll lend you both," said the young man, somewhat amused.

The charade was entirely successful. True, Mabel looked surprised when Mrs. Jones appeared in a derby and ulster. "I wonder where she got the man's hat and coat?" she said, which gave her the clue she needed to guessing the charade.

It was some minutes after the last guest had departed, and Mabel and Daisy were straightening up before going to bed. Daisy had just come upon the derby and ulster when the telephone called Mabel.

"I'm awfully sorry," came Mrs. Jones' voice, "but I forgot to return the man's hat and coat I borrowed. I got them at the house just beyond Professor Barnes. Would you mind seeing that they get back?" And she hung up.

"The house beyond the Barnes," Mabel repeated, looking blankly into the receiver. "Why, Daisy—that hat and coat—they must belong to—"

"Not to—" and Daisy went even paler than she had been the rest of the evening.

After Mabel had made Daisy take a cup of black coffee they talked the matter over. First Mabel insisted that she would go alone, and then it was agreed that it would look better if they went together. There was hardly a chance that "he" would come to the door.

But "he" did come to the door—Hunter James Corbett himself.

"Your hat and ulster," Mabel said.

"Oh, we hardly expected to see you," said Daisy.

Mabel was protesting. But somehow Hunter Corbett contrived to get his neighbors into the living room. And in a marvelously short time, considering, he had persuaded Mabel as well as Daisy that he hadn't really been to blame at all. Daisy and he had been engaged, four years ago, and then there was a misunderstanding. Then he went away and had not written because he thought Daisy loved some one else. He had come back that day for the first time in four years to try and win her back.

The terrible thing that had so shaken Mabel's nerves was the event that morning of their seeing James return as they walked out to do the morning's ordering.

"And to think I borrowed a hat from Daisy's future husband," said Mrs. Jones later, though she never did find out to her own satisfaction just what the excitement was all about.

Nerves Do they torture you by day? Keep you awake at night?

What is it that keeps hospitals open and doctors busy? NERVES. What is it that makes your face wrinkled and makes you feel old? NERVES. Nine times out of ten it's NERVES that make you restless, worried, haggard.

Nerves Do they make you Cranky, Blue—give you Nervous Indigestion, Nervous Headache?

When nerves are over-taxed, you worry over trifles, find it hard to concentrate, can't sit still. Nerve Strain brings on Headache. Nervous people often suffer from Indigestion. There may be absolutely nothing wrong with the organs of digestion, but the Nerves are not on the job to make the organs do their work properly.

Nerves Do they interfere with your work; ruin your pleasure; drive away your friends?

You're cheating yourself and the man who pays you if you work when your NERVES are not normal. You can't have a good time when you are nervous. You can't make or keep friends when you are keyed up and irritable. You may excuse yourself, but to others you are just a plain crank.
