John C. Wienke Is Summoned

Funeral services for John C. Wienke, who died last Saturday morning, were held at the Immanuel Lutheran church on Wednesday afternoon, conducted by Wm. E. Klausch, the pastor, following a short service in the home.

A quartet composed of Herman Rohl, Wilbert Sy, Mrs. Elsie Cress and Mrs. Teresa Smith, sang for the services, with Martin Sy presiding at the organ.

The beautiful floral offerings and the large attendance bore witness of the esteem in which the deceased was held.

Interment was in the church cemetery.

The following obituary was read at the services:

John Carl William Wienke, a son of the late Fried. David Wienke and his wife Carolina (nee Lemke) whose earthly remains we are about to lay to rest in God's Acre, was born August 25, 1866 at Dorow, Pomerania, Germany.

Soon after birth he was brought to Christ in holy baptism, and the new spiritual life created in him by the washing of regeneration, was nourished by his pious parents, and strengthened by the instructions in God's word imparted by faithful pastors. Having reached the age of discretion he was received into full membership of the Ev. Lutheran church by the rite of Confirmation in the St. John's Ev. Lutheran church, Champaign, on April 20, 1879.

In the year 1870 at the age of four years he emigrated with his parents from Germany to the United States, making their home in and near Champaign for seven years. In the year 1877 they moved to this community, where Mr. Wienke continued to reside to the time of his demise.

On March 4, 1890, the deceased was united in the bonds of holy wedlock with Miss Mary Rothermel. This union which lasted for 44 years was blessed with seven children, two sons and five daughters. Of these one son, Lawrence, and one daughter, Leota, preceded their father into eternity, in their infancy.

Mr. Wienke entered his eternal reward Saturday morning, September 15, 1934, at the age of 68 years and 21 days.

He leaves to mourn his demise, his loving wife, Mary; one son, Clarence, of Broadlands, Ill.; four daughters, Mrs. Ida Beck, Freeville, N. Y.; Mrs. Augusta Albers, Sidell, Ill.; Mrs. Josie Oye, Tuscola, Ill.; and Miss Ellenora, at home. Surviving him are also two brothers and two sisters, and 20 grandchildren. Mrs. Ralph Messman of Homer made her home with the Wienke family for 17½ years.

Do Not Drive While Fatigued

Many fatal auto accidents might be accounted for as due to "sleep at the wheel" if any one were left to tell the story. Secretary of State Edward J. Hughes said in an automobile safety bulletin issued today, in which he warned against driving while fatigued.

"Those who have done considerable night driving know the danger of drowsiness. In an instant the sleepy driver in many cases has been shifted from a safe highway, to death against an obstruction or in a crash at the bottom of a ditch. And in most every case it might have been prevented."

"Don't drive while sleepy. Many drivers there are who boast of long drives, without giving thought to the risks taken or the bad judgment displayed. It is for this reason that many commercial concerns employing drivers for trucks and buses have set arbitrary limits on the number of hours and the distance they may drive without rest.

"The hours one may safely spend at the wheel or the number of miles one may travel without showing signs of fatigue depends for the most part upon the physical fitness of the particular individual.

"The rule of common sense is the best one to follow. A driver should not jeopardize his or her life or the lives of others by continuing at the wheel when they show the least sign of being tired or sleepy.

"The use of stimulants to eliminate drowsiness may serve their purpose in an emergency but the wise motorist will drive to a safe place off the road and take a nap."

New Film Theme in "No Greater Glory"

To theatergoers who are fed up on sex triangles, gang wars, racing thrillers, and other such movie plots, it should be welcome news to hear that the Columbia production, "No Greater Glory," is to be shown at the Broadlands Theater on Friday and Saturday nights, September 21 and 22.

The screen story is based on Ferenc Molnar's novel, "Paul Street Boys." It deals with a cross-section of life which reflects the author's intimacy with the part of Budapest, Hungary, that is its setting. It might as well be Boston, England or Japan, so far as the universality of its appeal is concerned.

Two rival bands of youths engage in a struggle to decide the possession of a city lot for a drill and playground. As primitive passions got into control, the lot becomes their sacred nation, and their self inflicted sacrifices become patriotism of the highest order. The results are not what one could calculate on a piece of paper, nor anticipate from knowing how conventional movies usually end. The author wrote what he saw and what he felt, and the motion picture production of his story has not flinched from telling it straight.

Under the skilful direction of Frank Borzage, "No Greater Glory" throws off the shackles of time, place and age, and becomes a record of humanity.

Peter Witt, 91, Goes To Reward

Peter Witt, 91, passed away at his home here last Sunday evening, following an illness of over nine years duration. He had been seriously ill for several days and his death did not come unexpectedly. His daughter, Miss Marie, and son, Walter, tenderly cared for him during his long years of affliction.

Funeral services were held at the family residence last Wednesday afternoon at 1:30 o'clock, followed by services at the M. E. church at 2:00 o'clock. Rev. Alfred Wicks, of Danville, a former pastor of the church, conducted the services, and was assisted by Rev. Edward Hardy, present pastor of the church. George W. Telling, of Danville, sang "Abide With Me," and "Beautiful Isle of Somewhere." A quartet composed of Mrs. Mary Dicks, Mrs. Lillie Bowman, Rev. Edward Hardy and Charles Smith, sang "Jesus Lover of My Soul," and "It Is Well With My Soul." Mrs. Ira Laverick presided at the piano.

The flower bearers were Mesdames Reimer Witt, Oscar Witt, Amiel Witt, Walter Witt, Oliver Smith, Oscar Smith, Marley Neff and Misses Lola Bruhn, Jessie Witt and Ferne Witt.

The pallbearers were the four sons, and two grandsons, Oliver and Oscar Smith, who with their sister, Helen, made their home with their grandparents after the death of their mother.

Interment was in the family lot in the St. John's Evangelical cemetery, northwest of Broadlands.

The following obituary, prepared by a friend, was read at the funeral rites:

Peter Witt was born in Holstein, Germany, August 17, 1843, and departed this life on Sunday evening, September 16, 1934, at 8:45 o'clock, at his home in Broadlands, Illinois, at the age of 91 years and one month.

He came to the United States in the year 1864, locating at Sidney, Illinois. He was united in marriage to Caroline Shillhorn of Sidney on March 21, 1876, and to this union eight children came to bless their home. He with his family moved to his farm northeast of Broadlands in 1894 and resided there until 1918 when they moved to town.

Mr. Witt was a faithful member of the Broadlands M. E. church for many years, always standing for the things that were Christlike. He was a kind, loving and understanding father, desiring for his family the things that would bring them contentment and happiness, and ever living before them the example of a christian. Mr. Witt's illness extended over a period of nine and one half years. During all this time of pain and discomfort he accepted his cross as a soldier of Christ. On entering his sick room one was always greeted with a smile and in leaving one always felt strengthened by his example of patience and cheerfulness. One of his favorite passages in the bible was St. John, 14th chapter and the first seven verses. He received much comfort in reading it as long as his strength would permit and enjoyed having it read to him when he became too weak to read for himself. It was a joy and comfort to him to talk about the Mansion on High and often spoke of longing to enter the place the Lord has prepared for his faithful followers.

A young man once remarked "I would like to be a christian if I could be one like Grandpa Witt." And these words are surely the highest tribute that could be rendered one who was trying to follow the example of "The Man of Galilee." In the passing of Mr. Witt there is a vacancy in the home and community that will be greatly felt by all who knew him. As a citizen he always stood for the things that were for the betterment of the community.

Mr. Witt was preceded in death by his wife in 1916, and one daughter, Mrs. Fanny Smith in 1910.

He leaves to mourn his departure the following children: Reimer Witt, Homer; Mrs. Katharine Bruhn, Monticello; Amiel Witt, Hume; Oscar and Walter, both of Broadlands; Mrs. Emma Darnall of Broadlands; and Miss Marie Witt at home; also twenty-two grandchildren and thirteen great-grandchildren, and a host of friends.

AFTER

After the toil and trouble,
There cometh a day of rest;
After the weary conflict,
Peace on the Saviour's breast;
After the care and sorrow,
The glory of light and love;
After the wilderness journey,
The Father's bright home above,

After the night of darkness,
The shadows all flee away;
After the day of sadness,
Hope sheds her brightest ray;
After the strife and struggle,
The victory is won;
After the work is over,
The Master's own word, "Well done."

After the hour of chastening,
The spirit made pure and bright;

After the earth's dark shadow,
Clear in the light of Light;
After the guiding counsel,
Communion full and sweet;
After the willing service,
All laid at the Saviour's feet.

After the pain and sickness,
The tears are all wiped away;
After the flowers are gathered,
No more of earth's decay;
After the deep heart sorrow,
An end of every strife;
After the daily crosses,
A glorious crown of life.

Marne Anniversary

Twenty years ago, from September 6 to 10, 1914, the momentous First Battle of the Marne was fought, the victory of the French and British under General Joffre saving Paris from capture by the Germans, and probably deciding the war in its first great battle.

Prior to the beginning of this historic five days' struggle the Germans had advanced through Belgium and northern France and were within a few miles of Paris. Joffre had gradually retired in the face of the superior German force until his resources could be mobilized sufficiently to enable him to take the offensive.

Having maneuvered his armies into positions which seemed to make an offensive drive likely to succeed, Joffre attacked the Germans at dawn on Sunday, September 6. After five days of the most desperate fighting, during which Joffre displayed daring and masterly strategy, the Germans were in full retreat toward previously prepared positions. Paris had been saved.

In this great battle it is estimated that 900,000 Germans and 1,000,000 Allies were engaged on a battle front 120 miles long.

Nearly four years later much of the same territory was to be the scene of the second battle of the Marne, in which, with Marshal Foch in supreme command of the Allied armies, Germany's last hope of winning the war was definitely blasted.

Oath for Teachers

Teachers in both public and private schools in the state of New York will be required to take the oath of allegiance, in compliance with a law recently passed and signed by Governor Lehman. Bills containing a similar provision are proposed in several other states.

It might seem to some that such a law is superfluous, but the fact that many teachers have protested against taking the oath, indicates that the requirement may not be a bad idea. It is said that no less than 800 teachers in New York City alone have objected to swearing allegiance to the government and the Constitution.

Every official must take the constitutional oath of office, and as there are few positions in which loyalty to the nation is more essential than that of a teacher, it is difficult to see why there should be any objection to it, unless the teacher be a Communist or other enemy of American institutions.

A loyal teacher could have no valid reason for not declaring his or her loyalty, while a refusal to make such a declaration would be rather conclusive evidence that the teacher in question was unfit to teach future American citizens.

School Bus Drivers

With the increasing number of consolidated schools throughout the country, the school bus has become an important transportation necessity, carrying many thousands of children daily.

It is impossible to emphasize too strongly the need for highly competent and careful drivers for these vehicles. It is a great responsibility to be entrusted with the lives of these children and no one should be employed as a driver who does not fully realize that responsibility and possess the qualifications to insure their safety.

Immature or irresponsible persons have no business driving a school bus, as many deplorable tragedies have demonstrated in the past. It should be a rigid requirement that drivers must come to a full stop before crossing a railroad track. A failure to observe this rule has cost many lives and may cost many more. Excessive speed should not be tolerated and any disregard of safety precautions should be followed by a prompt dismissal of the offending driver.

School authorities are primarily responsible for the competency of the drivers they employ, and unless they investigate carefully each applicant and keep a watch on his performances they are guilty of gross negligence toward the children whose safety is in their keeping.

Let Chevrolet tell its own story of riding and driving comfort

Make the ownership test

One Ride is worth a thousand words

THE best way to get at the truth behind the fine things you hear and read about the new Chevrolet, is to get in the car and drive. Take this car, drive it over the same routes, in the same way you drive your present automobile, and let the results you can see and feel tell their own story. You have heard that Knee-Action makes bad roads good, and good roads better. A ride will prove it. You have heard that Chevrolet provides shock-proof steering, Syncro-Mesh gear-shifting, a remarkably flexible 80-horsepower engine, and cable-controlled brakes. A few minutes at the wheel will show you what a difference these advancements make in safety and driving ease. And when the ride is over, and you step out refreshed and ready for more, you will know why so many thousands have found it impossible to return to ordinary driving after an experience like this. That is the Ownership Test—easy, enjoyable, and the most practical way to choose a car.

Mary's Surprise

By ALICE DUANE

© by McClure Newspaper Syndicate
WNU Service

"IT ISN'T as if there was any nourishment for me in meeting the Castles," argued Mary. "Mr. Harold Castle's married, and if he wasn't I wouldn't consider being the wife of a college president. So that settles that. So far as any social advantage that I can get by passing around tea and microscopic sandwiches at your friend, Mrs. Wilson's, while she and the wife of the new president stand in the front of the house and shake hands with two hundred and more women—well, I'm sure I don't see the point in it."

"Mary, you don't mean half you say," said her mother. "Of course, it is something of an honor to be asked to assist at the tea. Only seven other girls have been asked—but, anyway, even if there weren't any 'nourishment' in going to the reception—what do you have in mind for this afternoon that would be 'nourishing,' as you call it?"

Mary raised her pretty eyebrows. "I haven't decided what to do," she said. "Maybe I'll start west to seek my fortune."

And so it happened that on the day when all the women who were considered of any social importance around Blissville—the seat of Tome college—were attending the reception given in honor of the new hostess of the president's house, Mary Vernon, daughter of one of the leading trustees of the college, was driving her car toward the lake shore in a direction where there was little automobile traffic during the week days.

She had been speeding along for about fifteen minutes when she noticed a none too good-looking car drawn up at the side of the road and a little later a tall, well-built man peering into the opened hood of the car's engine. Mary stopped her car and offered whatever assistance she could provide.

The man smiled and explained that he didn't have the least idea as to what was wrong. But the way it jumped had annoyed him and he knew something was radically wrong with the old bus.

Mary, who liked to tinker with her roadster, looked in at the engine. Her knowledge of the mechanics or automobiles was better than the average girl of her class because her brother had taught her considerable. She smiled at the man and asked if he had a tool kit.

After tightening a couple of bolts and readjusting a wire connection, she asked the stranger to try turning on the motor.

"I think it will be all right now," she said. "I hope you won't be late wherever you're bound for."

The man thanked her and laughed. "I wasn't going anywhere in particular. And I hope I haven't detained you from some very important engagement."

Mary laughed. "I wasn't going anywhere, either—I was just out killing time."

"Want to kill some more time?" asked the man, and then he suddenly seemed embarrassed at what he had said. "I was wondering," he added, "if you would consider ourselves sufficiently introduced to warrant my asking you to stop in a little shop for some tea—there's a nice little place a few miles along this road."

Over the teacups Mary became more or less confidential as she talked to this man. Somehow his dignity seemed to invite her confidence. She told him that she had retreated from a reception in honor of the wife of the new college president. The man asked a few questions and then looked surprised, and after that, very much amused. Finally Mary added that she had been brought up in more or less of a college environment, and in her opinion most college presidents and professors as well as their wives were insufferably dull.

The man smiled and the smile developed into a hearty, good-natured laugh. As they arose from the table and it was time for them to separate, the man produced his personal card and handed it to her.

"Perhaps I shouldn't have waited so long to introduce myself," he said. "My name is Harold Castle—"

Mary looked bewildered, then she blushed and she wished she could sink right through the tea-room floor. But Mr. Castle held her hand reassuringly in his. "You see, I'm just a dull sort of college president—but at any rate I'm glad I'm coming to Tome for a while. Perhaps, then, I'll be able to see you occasionally."

"I didn't suppose," stammered Mary, "that college presidents who have wives picked up girls on the road and took them to tea. It's perfectly all right with me, and I won't divulge the pleasant time we've had to anyone, but it's quite a surprise, Mr. Castle."

"That's the funny part of it all," said Mr. Castle. "There just isn't any Mrs. Castle. My sister is my hostess."

Mary arrived home a little while later. At the dinner table Mrs. Vernon couldn't keep her bit of gossip to herself.

"There really isn't any Mrs. Castle, Mary," she said. "Mrs. Wilson made a mistake and sent cards out to meet Mrs. Castle instead of Miss, and when she found out about it, it was too late to send out other cards. So really the new president is a bachelor. Perhaps he'll marry one of the girls in Blissville—"

"That would be nice," responded Mary. "Wouldn't it, mother?"
