Longview High School News

Rachel Davis, Reporter

Miss Bisson was unable to attend school last week.

The Seniors have selected their class play entitled "Digging Up The Dirt." Practice will begin soon.

Longview defeated Allerton last Friday night by a score of 21-30. Longview plays its next game at Ogden Friday night. Saturday night we will meet Sadorus on the opponent's floor.

The Sophomores entertained the student body and faculty at a Valentine party in the Gym Monday evening. Gayle Hardy and Virginia Postle were chosen King and Queen of Hearts. The Sophomores gave a one act play entitled "Bet's Best Bet." Those taking part were:

Sylvia—Marcelle Nohren.
Bettison—Kenneth Brownfield.
Jane—Kathryn Warner.
Don—Clyde Collins.

The Gym was attractively decorated in the valentine colors and at the close of the evening, dainty refreshments in keeping with the color scheme were served.

Cellophane is being used for coin wrappers, enabling bank tellers to count the money without unwrapping the rolls.

M. E. CHURCH NOTES

Edward Hardy, Pastor.

BROADLANDS
Sunday School—10:00 a. m.
Epworth League, 6:45 p. m.
The evening service at 7:30 will be a patriotic service in honor of the 2 great presidents born in February—Lincoln and Washington. Other great men born in February will be remembered such as Dickens, Longfellow, Edison, Lindbergh, Moody, Newman who gave us "Lead Kindly Light," and musicians such as Handel, Caruso, Victor Herbert, and Kreisler, the world's greatest violinist. The church orchestra will play several patriotic selections. There will be about 40 minutes of music, instrumental and vocal. Patriotic address by the pastor. You will enjoy this service.

LONGVIEW
Sunday School—10:00 a. m.
Preaching—11 a. m.
The morning service is always very worshipful and you will find it very helpful during these trying times. Communion with God is the one thing needed to keep us steady during these trying days.

Zane Grey's 'Wagon Wheels'

Randolph Scott plays the leading role in the filmization of Zane Grey's "Wagon Wheels," the dramatic account of the adventures of the first wagon train to cross the country to Oregon in 1844, which comes this Friday and Saturday night to the Broadlands theater.

With Gail Patrick, Monte Blue and Raymond Hatton in the chief supporting roles, the film also presents the newest discovery among child actors, little four-year-old Billy Lee, who plays an important role as Gail Patrick's son.

"Wagon Wheels" depicts the hardships, perils and romantic lives of the sturdy, adventuring pioneers who helped to forge an empire by their conquest of the West.

The action opens at Independence, Mo., where pioneers from all over the East are gathering for the start of their new adventure. Under the guidance of Scott and Hatton, as frontier scouts, they set forward.

Among the members of the train are a young widow, Gail Patrick, and her son, fleeing from her husband's parents who want to get possession of the boy. In the train, also, is a half breed Indian, played by Monte Blue, who has vowed to prevent the settlers from crossing into Oregon.

Gail Patrick is befriended by Blue and responds to his seeming kindness. But all along the trail they are beset by Indians, and it is only when they have crossed the Western Slope and are almost within sight of Oregon, that the Indians attack with the intention of slaughtering the members of the caravan.

Blue's true nature becomes evident when he appears with the Indians. The valiant defense by the pioneers is about to crumble when Scott saves the day and routs the Indians by a clever ruse. Safe at last, the pioneers cross over into Oregon, and Scott and Miss Patrick announce to little Billy that Scott will be his new father.

Prejudices

Most of us who consider ourselves broadminded are anything but that. Otherwise, how can we account for the fact that we are seldom interested in reading "the other side" of any question. We read almost exclusively such books, periodicals and newspapers as we know in advance will generally coincide with our own views. Few Republicans subscribe for a red-hot Democratic newspaper, or vice versa. People take church papers only of their own denomination. Capitalists take few labor papers, and laboring men would hardly look at one that reflects the capitalistic viewpoint.

In other words, we all have more or less confirmed opinions on nearly every important subject and do not admit that there may be some virtue in the opposite view.

As a recent writer has said, "The only facts we can tolerate are those we already know." We read, not really to learn anything new, but for the purpose of confirming ourselves in our present beliefs and prejudices.

Tall Men Winning Out

Some years ago, Phil E. Zimmerman, a Kansas traveling salesman about six and a half feet tall, got tired of crouching into short beds, Pullman berths and bath tubs, and decided to do something about it. He organized the National Society of Long Fellows, with the following platform:

"We want longer beds, bed-sheets and covers, Pullman berths, bath tubs, socks, coat sleeves, trousers' legs, and shirt tails. We want higher awnings, signs, light fixtures, doors and ceilings. We want wider spaces between theater seats and more room in motor cars."

Many tall men rallied to the cause and joined the society, which has really gotten results. Leading hotels have furnished certain rooms with seven and even eight-foot beds for especially tall guests. New streamlined trains have berths of extra length, and the comfort of tall men has been given consideration in other ways by establishments which serve the public.

Mr. Zimmerman declares that the motor car with sliding front seat is the direct result of agitation by his society.

Good for the Long Fellows! Long may they wave.

Relic of Lincoln

When President Abraham Lincoln, mortally wounded, was carried from Ford's theatre to the home of William Peterson, a tailor, living across the street, he was placed in the room of 13-year-old Pauline Peterson, where he breathed his last early the following morning.

During the night the blood-stained head of the martyred President had rested on the child's square feather pillow. The pillow was reverently preserved by the tailor's daughter, who afterwards became Mrs. Wenzing, and upon her death she willed the prized relic to Mrs. Jessie F. Webster, a school teacher. With it went an affidavit prepared by Mrs. Wenzing before her death, as follows:

"This is to certify that the pillow now in possession of Jessie F. Webster of the City of Washington, D. C., is the same pillow on which President Lincoln died, April 15, 1865. His death occurred in my room in my old home, No. 516 Tenth street, Washington, D. C."

The pillow, now yellow with age, still bears its crimson stains and is perhaps the most intimate memento of a national tragedy now in existence.

Virtue of Patience

One of the greatest aids to worthwhile accomplishment is the quality of patience. This applies to laying the foundation for a successful career in any profession or business. The person who depends upon short cuts and quick-action devices frequently meets with bitter disappointment, if not disgrace.

This is particularly true with respect to the accumulation of wealth, as many misguided individuals now behind prison bars can regretfully testify. Many men who go wrong through speculation with other people's money do not set out deliberately to be criminals, but they think they see an opportunity to make a "killing" and take the chance. They intend to replace the appropriated funds if they win, but they usually lose in the end. Some instances are related by a recent writer on theft:

One man used money not his own in what he considered to be a sure-thing real estate deal. The venture failed and one more was added to the suicide roll. Another lost in playing the market, then stole from his firm, lost again and went to prison. Innumerable cases like these might be cited.

On the other hand, the patient plodder, who builds upon a sound and honest foundation, frequently achieves success which is denied to the spectacular plunger. In fact, patience is generally one of the surest aids in the accomplishment of any worthy purpose.

Guessing The Future

Making predictions concerning what future years will bring forth has long been an interesting, if generally futile, indoor sport. A writer in Le Matin of Paris recently recalled some of the prophecies of the monk, Theodosius, whose writings were discovered in an old monastery. In the year 932 Theodosius tried to predict some of the things which would or would not happen in the coming 1,000 years, so that time is up. Here are some of his guesses:

That Mohammedanism would be destroyed, the Cross having conquered the Crescent. But there are still more than 200 million Mohammedans in the world. That the demand for books would cause pious monks to spend night and day copying manuscripts of the great bishops. He did not foresee the invention of printing.

That while the magnetic power of rubbed amber was interesting, nothing important would come of it. This phenomenon was later developed and became the clue to the discovery of electricity.

That it was madness to think man could ever fly, or raise himself into the air like a bird. Another poor guess.

But with respect to his skepticism about flying, Theodosius was no farther wrong than a certain United States Congressman of only 32 years ago, who opposed an appropriation for airplane experiments, declaring that only a fool would believe that mechanical flight was possible of accomplishment. A few months later the Wright brothers flew at Kitty Hawk—and everybody knows what has happened since.

Old Sam's Advice

By E. L. GILL
© McClure Newspaper Syndicate, WNU Service.

THE flower caught Bill Holland's eye. Blooming there so whitely in the stagnant waters of the swamp. He grasped Old Sam Matthias by the shoulder and pointed it out. Old Sam grunted in noncommittal fashion.

Young Bill had not been a cheerful companion to Old Sam on this last trip and Old Sam was showing his disappointment. Young Bill, for his part, was both definitely disappointed and irritated with Old Sam. He had come to the mountain shack of the old guide, seeking sympathy and help in the major crisis of his twenty-two years. But Old Sam was bored. Countless times before the boy had taken his problems to the unlettered, weather-beaten old guide in the hills, and always before Old Sam had set him aright.

The old man's attitude deepened Bill's resentment toward the world in general—and Betty in particular. The entire trouble, of course, was Betty. It was an ancient story that Bill told Old Sam—a story of the magnificent love of a boy for a girl; the boy imbued with the idealism of the age of chivalry hopelessly, fantastically in love with a fascinating bit of a girl suddenly irked by the restraint of old-fashioned standards and "out to find what life is all about."

It was not, Bill often told himself, that he had any desire whatever for the young lady's affection any longer. The maddening thing was that he couldn't rid his heart and mind and soul of her.

"I wouldn't know what to say to that, son," Old Sam condescended once or twice during the day. Nothing more. And when night had settled and they sat on the porch of the mountain shack, Old Sam talked of trout.

"I'm going to bed," the youth said. "Got a little somethin' I'd might like to do tonight, been a thinkin' of that flower we saw back there in the swamp today. Somethin' sort of queer about that. Don't hanker much for sleep myself and have a mind to take the lantern and have a look. Better come along, you'll sleep the better for it."

The old man's suggestion sounded silly to the distracted youngster, who nevertheless consented, grudgingly.

The swamp was little more than a ten minute walk along the trail. Old Sam, boots drawn to his hips, led the way, carrying the lantern. The youth followed, flashlight in hand. At the edge of the water they stopped and, at Old Sam's direction, Bill searched the surface of the swamp until the flashlight caught the white flower.

"I'm a bit curious about that flower, Bill; I'm a-goin' to get it out and take it back to the shack; looks to me like a lily," and Old Sam started into the swamp, sinking knee-deep in the mire.

"It's some sort of a lily, sure as you live, son," he called back to Bill.

Back in the shack Ma Matthias rustled an old bucket, grumbling the while at "these consarn fool notions." Bill was dispatched to fill the bucket with clean rich earth and Old Sam set to work to replant his lily, talking the while in quiet, soothing tones, as he might have to a sick wayfarer.

"Brave little lady—had a right tough time of it out there in that swamp, I reckon."

"Can't figure out how you come to be in such a vile smelly place—mighty bad company you was in."

"Seemed to like it right smart at that—stubborn as an old mule about comin' out—guess you didn't know them weeds was a-goin' to choke you in time."

"There she is now, Ma, good as new—and ain't she a beauty! Reckon she feels a lot better, too—suspect if she could talk she would be a-tellin' us that she's mighty happy to get out of that swamp."

But Old Sam got no further with his monologue. Young Bill Holland was dashing out through the open doorway of the shack.

• • • Betty was dancing lightly from table to table, regaling the party with a song. Bill stood, unnoticed, watching. He waited until Betty's solo dance brought her close to where he stood. As she whirled, he caught her upraised arm in a biting grip. A youth rushed forward to resent the indignity. Bill's fist caught the point of his chin.

The merry-makers confronted Bill en masse at the doorway, denouncing him in shrill outbursts. Meanwhile, Bill was delivering eloquent if disjointed references to poisonous weeds and filthy water.

Betty was a subdued young lady. The first flush of fiery indignation passed as quickly as it came. It may have been an expression on Bill Holland's face; it may have been something else.

She was quite ready to go to the car with Bill. Meekly, she allowed herself to be led up the steps of the recorder's home. Meekly, too, aided by Bill's gruff promptings, she answered the necessary questions.

When they were again in the roadster and Bill had pocketed the document given him by the recorder, Betty laid her head on Bill's shoulder and, women-like, cried great, warm tears. Now, for the first time since he left Old Sam Matthias's shack far up in the hills, Bill's clenched jaw relaxed.

Far up in the hills Ma Matthias was again reminding Old Sam that he had to go to the swamp after breakfast. Ma was a practical soul and saw no sense in paying that florist down in town a dollar and a half for a potted lily and then leaving the pot buried in that dirty swamp.

But Old Sam was sleeping peacefully.

Whole Grain Corn

WHOLE grain canned corn has come into its own. Dietitians have devised many dishes to contain corn canned in this delicious form, and housewives are adding a page to the vegetable section of their personal books of pet recipes. Here are a few:

Corn Fritters: Chop the contents of a 10½-ounce can whole kernel Yellow Bantam corn, or put them through a food chopper. Add two well-beaten eggs and one-fourth cup milk. Add two-thirds cup flour, one teaspoon salt and one-half teaspoon baking powder. Drop by spoonfuls into hot fat or drippings in a skillet, and brown on both sides. Makes sixteen fritters.

Corn and Pea Rarebit on Toast: Make a cheese sauce of two tablespoons butter, two tablespoons flour, one and a half cups milk and one cup grated cheese. Drain one cup of whole kernel corn and the contents of an 11-ounce can peas, and sauté a few minutes in two tablespoons butter, then add to the cheese sauce. Season to taste with salt and pepper and serve on toast. Serves six to eight.

Sumptuous for Salads

Corn Salad: Marinate the contents of three 12-ounce cans whole kernel corn and one and a half cups grated or finely-chopped raw carrots in one cup French dressing for an hour or so in refrigerator. Add one cup shredded ripe olives, and serve in a nest of lettuce. Serves twenty-four.

Corn and Pepper Salad: Drain the contents of a No. 2 can whole grain corn, add one-half green pepper, diced, and one diced pimiento, season with salt and pepper, and marinate in one-fourth cup French dressing in refrigerator until very cold. Serve on lettuce leaves. Serves six.

Hectic Days Sleepless Nights

IF YOU are nervous today, you probably will not sleep well tonight. If you don't sleep well tonight, you will probably be nervous tomorrow.

Don't allow yourself to become nervous. Take Dr. Miles Nervine. It will relax your tense nerves and let you get a good night's sleep.

Irritability, Restlessness, Sleeplessness, often lead to Nervous Headache, Nervous Indigestion, Hysteria—sometimes to a nervous breakdown and organic trouble.

Some of the people, whose letters are printed below, were as nervous as you are—possibly more so—yet they have found relief.

Three years ago I was so nervous I could not bear to go out in company and could not sleep nights. A friend recommended Dr. Miles Nervine. I now enjoy myself thoroughly and sleep every night. Miss Juliette Currier, New Market, N. H.

I have used Dr. Miles Nervine in liquid form and find it the best medicine for the nerves I have ever used. Christene Lanier, Middleton, Tennessee

Whenever I have over-indulged and feel restless I take one or two Nervine Tablets just before I retire. In the morning when I awake I feel like a new person and can go about my work as usual. Dr. Miles Nervine Tablets quiet your nerves, brace you up and are the simplest, most convenient tablets to take I have ever found. Miss Grace Redman, St. James, Minn.

Before using your Nervine I was very nervous and irritable. Since I have started to take it I feel so much better that my family notice the difference. I still take it from time to time and the good result is wonderful. J. H. Redding, 1027 18th Ave., Rock Island, Ill.

Mr. Reddig His family appreciate his improved disposition.

Residents of this community who are interested in celestial phenomena will have further chance to glance skyward this year. A nice bright sun on Feb. 3rd aided observers in seeing an eclipse of the sun by the moon which was 53 percent at its maximum point.

"The sun in 1935 will present its greatest show of eclipses in the last 130 years," Prof. A. H. Joy, secretary of the Carnegie institution's Mount Wilson, observatory, at Pasadena, Calif., says. "The sun and moon together will offer seven eclipses the most possible in any one year."

The moon will pass between the sun and the earth five times and the moon will be in the earth's shadow twice.

Not since 1805 has the sun's rays been partly blotted from the earth so many times. It will be the second time of the five solar eclipses in one year since 1255 and there will not be another such number until 2485.

There have been seven eclipses in several years between, but always in a four-three combination.

This year there were two lunar and two solar eclipses, none visible in the United States.

A partial eclipse of the sun was visible over the United States on Sunday, Feb. 3rd.

A total eclipse of the moon will be visible over the entire United States July 16th.

The last total eclipse of the sun visible in the United States was on August 31, 1932, and there will not be another seen in this country until 1945.

Sidelights

John Kane of Pittsburgh, Pa., paints box cars for a living, and pictures for recreation. One of his pictures won the Carnegie Institute prize at an exhibition in his home city.

A church in Ohio operates a filling station which all members are asked to patronize. This may give some legislator the idea of imposing a special church tax on gasoline. It is taxed for nearly everything else.

With so many government inspectors snooping about, it is rather easy for impostors to pull their stuff. In Nashville a bandit armed with a fake search warrant gained admission to two homes and robbed them of several hundred dollars.

Harry B. Thayer, retired telephone magnate, made this sage observation at the end of his long business career: "It is easy to fool yourself; more difficult to fool those you work for; still more difficult to fool those you work with; and almost impossible to fool those who work under your direction."

Just how Deputy Sheriff John Fowler of Oklahoma learned to drive with one hand is not pertinent to this story, but his ability to do so came handy not long ago. Driving with one hand and shooting with the other he pursued two bank robbers, killing one and wounding the second, besides recovering the $3,750 they had stolen.

A business magazine tells of the enlightenment of a negro insurance agent, arrested for doing business without a license. The magistrate said: "Don't you know you can't sell life insurance without a license?" The darkey replied: "Boss, you done said a mouthful; I knowed I couldn't sell any, but I didn't know why."

Timely Hints By HELEN M. SMELTZER © McClure Newspaper Syndicate. WNU Service.

"EFFICIENCY! That's what you women need to learn!" Ben Gardner paced up and down, around little heaps of things not yet picked up from the bedroom floor. "If men ran their offices as carelessly as you women run your homes!" he continued. "If you utterly disregarded system the way you housekeepers do. Oh heavens! what a mess it would be."
"Oh hush up, you make me nervous," Esther shoved back bright curls. "I'm tired of always hearing you rave about masculine efficiency."
"Just like you—taking offense when I try to give a few helpful hints," Ben retorted.
Esther surveyed the cluttered room. She did try to plan, but there was always something coming up. One could say, "Dishes, 8 to 8:15; beds, 8:15 to 8:30; and so on. It looked fine on paper. But baby would choose 8:00 to fuss. He couldn't read mother's schedule of work. Esther grew highly indignant.
"Forget it or you'll dud your shots." She kept her voice bright—it was still early in the day and she had a lot to do. She had to be cheerful. Baby to bathe, dress, feed, put to sleep; dishes to wash and wipe; kitchen to mop; baby's washing; beds; clean up the living room; lunch—the morning seemed too short. Oh, well, no need for lunch exactly at twelve today. Ben's vacation took care of that. He didn't need to have a punctual meal these two weeks. Esther tied her neat apron hastily as The First started to wait for his breakfast.

Twelve o'clock. "Lunch ready?" Ben's booming voice woke the baby. Little Ben had refused to stay on schedule that morning and had started his nap an hour late.
"You quiet the baby, I'll be right down to fix something," Esther called from her bedroom.
"What! Nothing ready for lunch? Why it's twelve o'clock!" Ben sounded peeved.
"No hurry today, dear, you know," Esther called. "You don't have to be anywhere at one."
"You women!" Ben exploded again. "Say listen here, Esther. This afternoon you and I are going to take an hour off and I'll plan your work for you, since you don't seem able to do it yourself." Ben lost his temper completely and Esther knew that his golf had been bad. But she grew very resentful.
Lunch was a quiet, sullen affair.
At three, after little Ben went to sleep—off schedule—Esther joined her husband on the terrace. She carried pencil and paper. Her voice was soft—too soft, if Ben had stopped to notice. It put him off his guard.
"See how easy it is, if you just stop to plan!" he was saying, condescendingly. "Even a nit-wit could follow this scheme and have time to rest besides."
Esther's smile only became sweeter. "You rest now, dear," she said in a concerned voice. "I must catch up on some tag ends so that this schedule can go into effect in the morning without a hitch. I'm sure you'll find that things will run along as smoothly as they do in your office."

Bonnie woke at six, as usual, and Esther fed him and put him into his kiddy pen to play. She prepared breakfast and put her hat, coat, and suitcase near the front door. The alarm rang at seven. She heard Ben getting up as she slipped out the door.
"Well, how did the time budget work out, dear?" Esther, radiant, burst into the kitchen at twelve-thirty, three days later. Ben was preparing canned soup. The baby wailed.
"There! You've awakened the baby!" Ben's eyes were pleading. He was a bit embarrassed.
"Not off schedule, surely!" Esther appeared horrified. With a gay laugh she threw her arms around her unhappy husband. "Sorry I ran out on you, Sweet," she cooed. "But I got so tired of working so inefficiently. I knew the baby was safe, and as long as you could run things so much more efficiently—"

"Cut it, Esther," Ben said. "I couldn't work the darn thing even the first day. I had Elsie come in to do some of the things, but even at that—"
"Some one called up, and there were five minutes wasted," Esther said.
"And Mrs. Roberts talked a half hour over the fence while I burned the rubbish. Nosey," Ben confessed.
"And there was always something extra popping up, wasn't there, old dear?" Esther was really sorry for her husband.
"If you hadn't come today, I'd have hired everything done," he said.
"I was wondering if you would."
"Well, I was too stubborn, I guess," Ben admitted. "I just wanted to prove to you that it could be done. But it couldn't."
"Not with an infant around," Esther sympathized, hastening into the kitchen just in time to keep the soup from burning.

"Miss Ellis."
"Yes, Mr. Gardner?"
"Are those statements ready?"
"Not yet, Mr. Gardner, I'm sorry." Ben looked up from his desk. "Efficiency! That's what you women need," his voice trailed into an awkward silence.
"I beg your pardon?" The secretary's voice was an inquiry.
"Oh, nothing," Ben mumbled.

Handy Pies

A PUMPKIN pie is a mighty handy thing to have around during the holidays, even if you aren't a movie comedian. People do other things with pumpkin pies besides plastering them all over other people's faces, you know. So here's a good way to make a simple Country Pumpkin Pie: Smooth one-half cup cottage cheese, or pass it through a sieve, then mix with one and a third cups canned pumpkin. Mix two-thirds cup sugar with two-thirds teaspoon salt, two-thirds teaspoon cinnamon and one-fourth teaspoon nutmeg, and add with two beaten eggs and one and a third cups milk. Heat in a double boiler and pour into a pie tin lined with pastry. Bake, having oven hot, 45 degrees, for first ten minutes, then reducing it to 325 degrees for remaining time, about thirty minutes or until a knife inserted comes out clean. This makes one pie.

Or Else

If you're feeling dressy, you can doll up a pumpkin pie so that its country cousin wouldn't recognize it on the table. If you feel that way about it, try this Pumpkin Pie with Marshmallows: Add two-thirds cup sugar, one-fourth cup dark molasses, one-half teaspoon salt, one-half teaspoon cinnamon and one teaspoon ginger to two cups canned pumpkin (or half the contents of a No. 3 can). Add two beaten eggs, one cup milk and one-half cup cream, and heat in double boiler. Pour into tin lined with pastry and bake at 450 degrees for ten minutes, then at 325 degrees for thirty minutes or till set. Cut twelve marshmallows in halves and lay over top. Return to oven until marshmallows are browned. Makes one large pie.
