Hear Farm Credit Discussed Tuesday, March 5, at Longview High School

Tuesday, March 5, Mr. Chas. M. Stahl of the Champaign Production Credit Association will discuss Farm Credit. Mr. Stahl is in a position to discuss all of the methods set up by the government for aiding farmers financially. He will be able to answer questions in regard to financing land, purchase of stocker and feeder cattle, purchase of breeding stock, crop loans, refinancing old indebtedness, and many other phases covered by the Farm Credit Administration. There are many phases to the Farm Credit of the New Deal. Come to this meeting and learn about them. Time: 7:15.

THE AMERICAN PASSION PLAY

12th Annual Season, Scottish Rite Temple, Bloomington, Ill., April 14 to May 19

It is no longer necessary to journey to Europe to see a Passion Play. At Bloomington, Illinois, will be found a Passion Play which world travelers and renowned critics have pronounced to be the superior production of its kind in the world.

Twelve years ago a small group of earnest men and women, under the direction of Delmar D. Darrah, organized what is now known as the American Passion Play. From a very small beginning this play has grown into one of the most magnificent and stupendous stage productions in the world. The Play is presented in sixty-four scenes, commencing with the Sermon on the Mount, and concluding with the Ascension into Heaven. In these scenes, many of which are full stage settings, there are portrayed the life and works of Jesus of Nazareth. His teachings, his parables and healings are set forth in such a vivid manner as to make a deep and lasting impression on the minds of men, women and children.

A cast of two hundred and fifty appear during the presentation, while four choirs, a large chorus, a pipe organ and a number of performers upon ancient Jewish musical instruments furnish the music for this production.

The Play is highly educational because it portrays the life of Jesus of Nazareth, his works, his trials before Caiaphas and Pilate, exactly as they occurred. Every scene brings out the customs and habits of the people so that one receives a correct understanding of those among whom Jesus lived and worked.

The Play possesses a quality not found in any similar production and that quality is deep spirituality. Every person leaving the auditorium after the last curtain is under a tremendous spiritual impulse. The Play is purely a community effort. Its whole purpose is to bring to men and women a better understanding of the teachings of Jesus, and to demonstrate that he alone has offered to the world the only plan of life which can possibly lead to peace, happiness, prosperity, and moral triumph, not only for individuals, but for Nations as well.

For full particulars regarding this great Play, which is fast becoming a national institution, write the American Passion Play, Bloomington, Ill.

Village Caucus

A caucus will be held at the Town Hall Monday night, March 4, at 7:30 o'clock for the purpose of nominating candidates for the Citizens ticket to be voted upon at the coming village election.

News Items of 12 Years Ago

March 2, 1923

Claude Smith and family moved to Danville.

W. A. Albers and family moved near Palermo.

Miss Hazel Dohme taught Larned school in place of Mrs. Alfred Zenke who resigned.

Arthur Busick arrived home from Flat Rock, Mich. where he spent a month visiting his brother Clarence who was very ill.

The Ladies Aid of the Immanuel Lutheran church were entertained at the home of Mrs. Anna Poggendorf and spent the afternoon sewing for charity.

Sam Burns His Beans; Call Out Fire Truck

There was a bit of excitement in the village on Friday afternoon of last week, when Sam Warner's beans boiled over and caused a blaze to shoot to the ceiling of his domicile. The fire siren screeched and a crowd soon gathered. The fire truck was on deck but was not needed, as Sam put the fire out in a jiffy.

Broadlands Grade Team Beats Scotland, 14-11

Broadlands grade team defeated Scotland by a score of 14 to 11 at Scotland last Friday night. This makes the third game the locals have won this season. Miller was high scorer for the locals making a total of 8 points. Comer, Crain and Henson made two points each.

Republicans Nominate Ticket

A total of 68 ballots were cast at the Republican caucus last Saturday afternoon. Supervisor F. A. Messman was nominated for re-election to the office of supervisor, and Commissioner of Highways O. P. Witt was nominated for re-election to the office of commissioner of highways. The candidates had no opposition.

The offices of justice of the peace and constable went a begging, no names of candidates having been printed on the ballot for the posts. However several names were written in.

The election will be held on Tuesday, April 2.

Miss Florence Schumacher, farm census enumerator for Ayers, Raymond and South Homer townships, finished her task last Tuesday and delivered her reports to the officials at Champaign on Wednesday. It took her five weeks to finish the work and she was the first to turn in a report.

Broadlands Lodge, A. F. & A. M., will meet on next Monday night.—O. P. Witt, W. M.

O. D. Struck Home Burns Wednesday

The nine room home of O. D. Struck was completely destroyed by fire about 9:00 o'clock last Wednesday morning. Sparks from the chimney are thought to have caused the fire. Most of the household goods from the lower floor were saved, but everything in the upstairs rooms was consumed by the flames. Fire trucks from Broadlands, Sidney and Longview were called. The Longview truck was the only one which arrived in time to do any good and was making splendid headway in quenching the flames until the wells went dry. The house was partially insured.

Mrs. Struck who recently suffered a nervous breakdown is now a patient in a Champaign hospital. Mr. Struck is making his home with the Leon Strucks and Miss Marie is staying with the Bud Strucks.

- Behold My Wife.
- Hell in the Heavens.
- She Loves Me Not.
- 365 Nights In Hollywood.
- Ready For Love.
- Bright Eyes.

Farm Home Is Razed By Fire Near Murdock

Murdock, Feb. 26.—Fire of unknown origin Monday destroyed the large house on the Fred Messman farm. Some of the furniture was saved from the first floor, and one room was emptied on the second floor before the blaze reached there, but the rest of the uninsured personal property was lost. The house was partially insured.

The farm is tenanted by Ancil Easton and family. Mrs. Easton was in the kitchen at the time the fire broke out. Easton was shelling corn at the nearby William H. Davis farm when he saw the flames.

The house was a large, well-kept structure built by Jay Norton in the late nineties. The farm once sold for $415 an acre.

Dance and Card Party

A card party and dance will be held in the Bergfield building on Monday night, March 4, given by committee B. C. and D. of Immaculate Conception Church of Bongard. This will be the last party of the season. Everybody invited. Lunch, good music. Adm. 25c.

Shower Given in Honor of Miss Mabel Block

Mrs. George Messman, assisted by Mrs. William Nonman and Miss Nellie Block, entertained in the Messman home last Saturday at a miscellaneous shower in honor of Miss Mabel Block, who will become the bride of Albert Nonman in the near future. The bride-to-be received many beautiful and useful gifts.

Those present were Mesdames Lena Beisterfeld, Edna Struck, Anna Struck, Eva Block, Marie Krenzien, Phoebe Beatty, Daisy Beatty, Martha Charlton, Flora Messman, Laura Schweineke, Lydia Messman, Leora Messman, Elsie Cress, Leota Poggendorf, Teresa Smith, Patricia Beatty, Marie Warnes, Neva Frick, Marian Churchill, Bertha Messman, Mary Klautsch, Rose Smith, Lillie Bowman, Bertha Cook, Lena Nonman, Bessie Messman, and Misses Bertha Seider, Esther Wienke, Caroline Wienke, Marie Mohr, Marie Struck, Rosa Rothermel, Margaret Rothermel, Erna Klautsch, Hazel Block, Anna Rohl, Mary Beatty, Anna May Beatty, Frieda Schweineke, Wilma Schweineke, Mildred Messman, Dolores Messman, Maxine Cook, Mildred Sy, Clara Warnes, Ruth Warnes, Lena Churchill, Frances Daniels, Marian Gwinn, Mildred Krukewitt, Wilma Messman, Hilma Luth, Lois Nonman, Lola Nonman, Mabel Block, Nellie Block.

"Mrs. Wiggs of The Cabbage Patch," Mar. 1-2

Just as though the immortal characters of the famous book had sprung to life, the characters in Paramount's "Mrs. Wiggs of the Cabbage Patch," which comes to the Broadlands Theater, Friday and Saturday, March 1 and 2, provides chuckles, heart-throbs, tears and thrills.

To those millions who have read the book and to other millions who have seen the play, Paramount's film version of "Mrs. Wiggs of the Cabbage Patch" will be more than satisfying. To those for whom it is a new story, it will be a revelation.

The picture brings to the screen one of the most important new film personalities of recent years in Pauline Lord, noted stage star. Resisting all offers for years, until she was given the opportunity of playing Mrs. Wiggs, she handles the part with all the grace, delicacy and imagination which have won her the plaudits of the critics throughout the country. Her performance is amazingly flexible and correct, from the comedy scenes with the immortal "Cuby" to the touching death scene with young George Breakston, who plays Jimmy.

W. C. Fields and Zasu Pitts provide a hilarious romance. Evelyn Venable and Kent Taylor are excellent in a romantic bit of love interest.

Democrats Name Candidates

At the Democratic caucus held last Monday afternoon Kerna Block was nominated candidate for Supervisor, and P. O. Rayl was nominated for Commissioner of Highways. The candidates had no opposition. The election will be held on Tuesday, April 2.

John Richard of Champaign spent the weekend here with friends.

A Real Business Gain

The increased business activity shown during recent months is encouraging, although it is recognized, of course, that there still is room for improvement.

One of the striking phases of this activity is seen in the large expenditures for home improvement, both in repairs and additions to residential property, and in the installation of such added household equipment as washers and ironers and the like. This is due at least partly to the nation-wide promotion of home modernization programs.

To mention only one of the results of the movement for better home conditions, the demand for washing machines during 1934 reached a total of 1,240,000, an increase of 20 per cent over the previous year.

This indicates a gain in purchasing power on the part of a vast number of families, and the increased demand for such home conveniences may be regarded as an encouraging sign. The outlook for 1935 is even more promising.

Government Salaries

Some interesting facts respecting the early salaries of high government officials are given in a recent publication, which notes that Washington's salary of $25,000 a year was the pay of all Presidents until 1873, when an increase to $50,000 was made. In 1909 the present salary of $75,000 was authorized by Congress.

Cabinet officers in the early days received what would be considered very meager pay today. Thomas Jefferson drew only $3,500 a year as secretary of state; Alexander Hamilton drew the same as secretary of the treasury; General Knox, the first secretary of war, received but $3,000, and the attorney-general had a part-time job with little pay. These four were the only cabinet officers from 1789 to 1799.

Members of Congress received no regular yearly salary in the early days, but were paid $6 a day when actually attending sessions. In 1816 a salary of $1,500 a year was provided, but this was repealed the following year and $8 a day for actual service was established as their compensation. In 1856 the pay of members of Congress was fixed at $3,000; in 1866 at $5,000; in 1875 at $7,500, and in 1925 at $10,000.

Leading movie stars, prize-fighters, baseball sluggers and columnists would sniff at all these salaries, except that of the President, and many of them make, even if they do not earn, much more than is paid the nations chief executive.

The Macon's Fate

To anyone familiar with the history of dirigible airships the fate of the Macon, which went to the bottom of the Pacific Ocean off the California coast a few days ago, could hardly have come as a surprise.

What was surprising was the fact that all except two of the crew were saved, due to the nearness of naval vessels which were cruising in the vicinity at the time.

This is the fifth large dirigible owned by the United States government to meet disaster, the others being the ZR-2, the Roma, the Shenandoah, and the Akron. Only one, the Los Angeles, now obsolete and out of commission, escaped destruction while in service.

The ZR-2, built in England for the American Navy, buckled and exploded over Hull, England, on August 25, 1921, causing the death of 62 of the 66 men aboard.

The Roma, built in Italy for the United States Army, went out of control at Hampton Roads, Va., struck electric wires which broke, setting fire to the airship, causing the death of 35 out of a crew of 46, on Feb. 25, 1922.

The Shenandoah broke in three pieces and fell to earth during a storm over Noble county, Ohio, on September 3, 1925, killing 14 out of 41 on board.

The Akron was the victim of a storm off the New Jersey coast on April 4, 1933, and sank with the loss of 73 of the 76 men aboard. This was the most disastrous tragedy in the history of aeronautics. The Macon was a sister ship of the Akron, these being the largest aircraft ever built.

In the light of what has happened to practically every dirigible ever constructed, it seems time that this country should call a halt to the building of these "coffins of the air."

The whole record of dirigibles is one of wasted money and wasted lives. The world would be better off if these death-traps had never been invented.

A Secret Operation

Forty-odd years ago a candidate for the presidency of the United States was suffering from cancer of the mouth. But the fact was known only to himself and his physicians, and he was elected. The story of this remarkable case was recalled by the death of Dr. W. W. Keen, who assisted in performing a secret operation on the distinguished patient.

Shortly after entering upon his second term as president in 1893, and during the panic of that year, Grover Cleveland's condition became such as to necessitate surgical aid. Fearing public knowledge that he was afflicted with cancer would further depress the economic situation, Cleveland arranged to have an operation performed secretly.

This was done on the yacht Oneida, owned by Commodore E. C. Benedict, while cruising in the waters of Long Island Sound. A part of the president's left jaw and a portion of his palate were cut away as the yacht slowly steamed along. In five days he was able to walk ashore from what was supposed to be merely a recreation cruise. What had really happened was never publicly known until Dr. Keen related the story in 1917.

President Cleveland served out his term, as everyone knows, and lived until 1908, some 15 years after the operation had been performed. A vulcanized rubber substitute for the removed jawbone had aided him in keeping his secret.

The Astrologers

In our optimistic moments we sometimes think the world is becoming civilized. We like to believe that the age of superstition is past, or at least rapidly passing. But a calm survey of some things that are going on must convince us that the supposedly intelligent human race is still composed largely of credulous boobies.

In support of this statement, the amazing popularity and financial prosperity of certain alleged astrologers, even in this period of nation distress, may be mentioned.

Astrologers are seriously consulted by leaders in the business and political world, who seek to advance their interests by availing themselves of wisdom gained by a study of the stars.

Many otherwise reputable newspapers carry departments in which self-styled astrologers predict the future of their readers in response to questions submitted. Usually a more elaborate "reading" is offered for a suitable fee. Thus a large section of the metropolitan press is aiding and abetting one of the most flagrant species of charlatanism which now exploits a gullible public.

P. T. Barnum, the great showman, once attributed his success to the fact that the public likes to be humbugged. And Barnum was right.

Interesting Notes

Growing popularity of radio programs in India has stimulated the demand in that market for American receiving sets.

England's "brittle boy," Ernest Gardiner of Buckingham, has sustained 16 bone fractures during 16 years of his life.

Mrs. Mary Hart defied a Detroit judge to send her to jail and four policemen were required to lock her up.

Early peoples regarded rice as an emblem of productiveness; hence rice is thrown after a bride and groom.

One hundred persons of the 1,000 population in Detling, Kent, England, bear the surname of Brown.

Florida tomato growers are using artesian wells with much success in the irrigation of their fields.

Mrs. C. J. Hodges, 71, has ridden her bicycle about New York City every day for the last 35 years.

Miss Elsie Janis, known as the "sweetheart of the A. E. F.," because of her fine service in entertaining overseas soldiers, is now a radio announcer.

Smoking a cigar while repairing the gasoline line under his car caused an explosion and the death of Milo Williams of Portland, Ind.

Biting an iron nut in his fruit cake C. O. Melvin, of Gastonia, N. C., broke two teeth, he asserted in suing the baker for $1,000.

Joe Vandle, Charlotte, N. C., city employee, built a 3-room cottage from stray bricks he collected in streets, alleys and vacant lots.

An automobile roof panel invented in England will admit light, yet is practically unbreakable. It is constructed of a steel mesh covered with a glass-like substance.

Funny Breaks

Some of the funniest things in print are not those produced by writers who try to be humorous, but are the result of accident, through careless writing and proof reading.

The following paragraphs are samples, all of which actually appeared in various newspapers and magazines:

Found, fountain pen by woman half full of blue ink.

Why kill your wife? Let electricity do it. We'll help. Electric Supply and Fixture Company.

The family was made ill by pantomime poisoning.

To trade, $60 lady's plush coat; also girls for load of hay.

THEY came upon the gypsy at the same time. Linda was riding early. Jerry was riding late, and they met at the cross roads. The gypsy was a little stupid looking and very dirty. She looked rather blankly from the pretty girl on the bay horse to the handsome man on the roan, and held out a blackened claw.

"Tell fortune?" she asked. "Lady first?" Linda hesitated, her soft brown eyes alight. She was a practical young person, who wasn't given to probing into the future. Her eyes met the blue ones gazing at her impersonally from the higher horse.

"Shall I?" she asked impudently. Jerry shrugged lean, broad shoulders. "Rather foolish, isn't it?" he suggested. "A waste of time and money." It was the way of ways to persuade her. Her eyes flashed.

"Not at all," she answered crisply. "On a day like this anything might be true." She swung down off the horse and stood, little and slender and smart, near the gypsy. She held out a smooth hand.

"Tell me," she ordered. The gypsy looked more stupid than ever. "Cross hand with silver," she said flatly.

"Oh, of course." Linda slipped two fingers in her pocket and flushed faintly. She looked up in some embarrassment at Jerry who seemed exceedingly bored. "I have no change," she faltered. "Could you lend me. . . I'm so sorry. . . just a quarter will do."

Jerry dismounted politely. He fumbled through his coat pockets and handed her a fifty cent piece. As she thanked him, he lifted his cap and turned as if to mount again. Linda spoke impulsively.

"Oh, but aren't you going to have yours told? Come on, be a sport." He stared at her in some surprise. She really was very pretty. She caught the admiration in his glance and looked first surprised and then confused. "Well, will you?" she insisted. "I'll feel so silly all alone."

"Well, in that case—" He got out another coin and flipped it idly as the gypsy started.

"An' those man here, he is man for you to marry; good mind, good body, big heart. . . all yours. It written in the stars."

Linda turned scarlet; Jerry coughed. "I think I'd better be going," he murmured. But the gypsy caught at his coatsleeve.

"Mus' stay," he said urgently. "Caravan moves on ver' soon."

"Still," Jerry insisted, with great delicacy. But—unexpectedly Linda laughed.

"Oh, stick around and hear about yourself," she begged him cordially grinning like an urchin. Their glances crossed and something electric and warm and charming passed between them.

"Er—go on," Linda told the gypsy, quickly. "I'm in a hurry."

The gypsy droned on. "He loves you ver' much but he's proud; high temper. He want you so much. You marry pretty quick. That's what stars say." She didn't give Linda time to speak, but turned at once to Jerry.

"You mus' marry this girl. Never no happiness the stars bring you without red-haired girl. Your heart breaks if you don't take her. . . Maybe she find another man. Maybe he beg her to marry heem now. Better you hurry." Her tumbled broken words stopped abruptly as Jerry whirled away.

He glared ferociously at Linda. "So you're fooling around with the d—n golden-haired Leonard, are you? If you haven't got sense enough to know who you ought to belong to. . ."

"Yeah?" Linda stamped a well cut boot. "I belong to you—do I? Along with the rest of the harem. What about Emily and Catharine and Anne Burnett?" She sniffled and her voice quavered as she rubbed a sleeve roughly across her eyes.

Jerry took one stride across to her. "They can all," he said, into the glory of her hair, "go straight to h—l. Marry me, Lin? I want you so!"

Linda clung to him. "Well. . . She winkled her small nose comically, "if it's written in the stars. . . I never would have gotten the old divorce anyway if you hadn't been so indifferent about it."

"Indifferent!" Jerry's eyes flashed ominously. Then he drew a long breath and cuddled her. "Maybe it was partly my fault," he conceded generously, "anyway we'll find a justice of the peace; and this wedding will stick. Good old stars!"

He held his hands to assist her to mount, and the gypsy touched his arm timidly. "Kind gentleman, you promised me ten dollars if I told the lady what you said. Pretty lady, will you pay the five dollars you promised me? It is not my fault you came together, and the caravan moves on."

The two stared at each other. Incredulously, angrily. . . "Jerry, you dared!"

"Linda, of all the nerve!"

Gusts of laughter suddenly shook them. They fell into each others' arms. The gypsy looked anxiously from one to the other, and at length Jerry gave her two new bills.

"Stars or cash, which'll you have?" he asked Linda solemnly.

Linda smiled, but suddenly tears glittered on her lashes. "It was the stars," she said. "It was. We only paid to hear them."

THE two of them attracted considerable attention as they entered. Regular nightly visitors at the Silver Slipper had learned who they were.

"Oh, look!" a girl in a green hat nudged her escort. "That's them society swells. Her mother's the DePeyster society dame, and he's that millionaire rubber man's son. They're engaged. My Gawd, this place is gettin' ritzy."

The millionaire rubber man's son overheard the comment and frowned. He was uncomfortably conscious of the interest they created. It annoyed him. "Good heavens, Grace!" he muttered. "Must we come to this awful place every night? Whatever do you find of interest here?"

The girl fingered the menu and looked idly about. "Oh, I don't know, Von—there's something about I like. Perhaps it's the music." Her wide blue eyes were upon the slim back of the orchestra leader.

"Humph!" was the response. "I never knew you to take such an interest in second-rate music before."

They danced a few times, but Von was utterly bored. "I've had about all I can stand," he complained irritably. "Come, can't we go somewhere else?"

"In a little while, darling," she consoled him. Over his shoulder her eyes met the dark, flashing ones of the orchestra leader. A smile touched the violinist's lips—in a moment the orchestra commenced playing the "Rendezvous Waltz."

As the number ended, Grace excused herself. "Just a moment, darling, until I dab on a bit of powder, and we'll gallop along."

Von couldn't carry a tune and scarcely knew one song from another. Consequently he was not aware that every night, immediately following the "Rendezvous Waltz," his fiancée found it necessary to "dab on a bit of powder." But then Von wasn't a very observing young man. Had he been he would have noticed that the handsome orchestra leader invariably disappeared following the same number.

In a little alcove back of the orchestra platform, they met: "Oh, Tony. . ." she cried.

He held out his hands to her. In a moment she was in his arms. "Dearest, this can't go on," he whispered. "Break your engagement. Explain things to your mother. Let's have our love out in the open."

She clung to him. "You don't know mother. She—But I promise I'll tell her tonight. And this time I'll not give in to her. . ."

He kissed her tenderly. "Don't be afraid, darling. What does anything matter so long as we have each other?"

Tears glistened in Grace's eyes. "But, mother," she remonstrated. "You don't understand. You don't understand—I love Tony. We're going to be married. . ."

Mrs. DePeyster raised her patrician head and regarded her daughter in amazed horror. "Grace. . . Grace! Have you entirely lost your mind!" she gasped. "Marry a common entertainer in a cheap cafe. It's grotesque!" "But mother, what difference does it make what he does if we love each other? . . ."

Mrs. DePeyster drew herself up regally, her dark, imperious eyes blazing. "You are engaged to Von and you will marry him. Enough of this nonsense. Mother knows best!"

Grace broke into tears. "But I must at least see him and explain. . ."

"You'll do nothing of the sort. I'll settle him once and for all. I'll accompany you and Von to that impossible place and put an end to this outrageous affair!"

The wedding was a brilliant social event. Following the ceremony Grace and Von sailed for Cherbourg on a wedding trip.

Back home again a month later, Grace, for some obscure reason, insisted upon visiting the Silver Slipper once more "just for old time sake," she said.

Von groaned. "Oh, that terrible place! I'll humor you this once, but this is the last time—never again."

At their table, Grace glanced disinterestedly at the orchestra leader. How stupid of her ever to have imagined herself in love with such a person.

At first she didn't notice that the orchestra was playing the "Rendezvous Waltz." When she did, she caught her breath sharply. Was that fiddler fool enough to imagine that she was still infatuated with him?

Indifferently, she glanced about the room. Suddenly she gasped and sat up very straight, her eyes on a table tucked away in one corner. The lone woman there was sipping a cocktail and gazing in evident fascination at the dapper, patent-leather haired orchestra leader. It was her mother!

Grace couldn't tear her horrified eyes away. The number ended and she watched her mother leave the room; the orchestra leader suddenly disappeared.

It was scandalous! It was shocking! It was one of those Sunday supplement things—"Society Leader Marries Cafe Entertainer." The four hundred were aghast.

"Good Lord!" Von gasped at the breakfast table as he scanned the lurid headlines in the paper. "A common fiddler—how could she!"

Grace's eyes were noncommittally on her grapefruit. "I. . . I guess mother knows best, Von. . ."
