Janet Gaynor-Lew Ayres In "Servants' Entrance"

"Servants' Entrance," co-starring Janet Gaynor and Lew Ayres, will be shown at the Broadlands theater this Friday and Saturday night.

In their newest roles Janet portrays a merry million-heiress of an automobile manufacturer who goes from riches to poverty, and back again, while Lew is a chauffeur who goes from poverty to riches. Starting from opposite rungs of the social ladder, they meet at the bottom. The climb upward is fraught with humorous and fascinating adventures.

Janet's descent to poverty is motivated by a desire to become a useful woman—to learn to cook sew, bake a cake and take care of babies. So she disappears through the front door of her own palatial home, and makes her way to the servants' entrance of another, masquerading as a maid. It is thus that she meets Lew, a chauffeur with an inventive turn of mind whose passion is a new type of motorboat. To win his love, and to make him capitalize his invention without revealing her identity, become Janet's amusing problems.

In addition to Janet Gaynor and Lew Ayres, the cast includes Ned Sparks, Walter Connolly, Louise Dresser, Astrid Allwyn, Siegfried Rumann, and many others.

Lincoln's Grammar

An intimate memento of Abraham Lincoln and his youthful sweetheart, Ann Rutledge, was recently received by the Library of Congress, where it will be preserved with other relics of our first martyred president. It is Kirkham's Grammar which Lincoln and Ann studied in New Salem, 100 years ago.

Textbooks were scarce in those days and Lincoln obtained the grammar second-hand from its former owner, walking a dozen miles to secure it. This was in 1831, when he was clerking in a New Salem store and boarding with Ann's parents. When he had mastered its contents he gave the book to Ann, writing on the title page, "Ann M. Rutledge is now learning grammar."

It is said that Abraham and Ann became engaged on July 4, 1833, shortly before Lincoln's election to the state legislature. Ann was stricken with malarial fever and died August 25, 1835, and intimate friends of Lincoln declared he never recovered from his grief for the only woman he ever truly loved.

The book was preserved by the Rutledge family, finally coming into the possession of William Rutledge of Milton, Mont., a nephew of Ann. From him it was borrowed by Miss Jane Hamand for the public library at Decatur, Ill. Not long ago with Mr. Rutledge's consent she presented it to the Congressional Library. There it may now be seen in the case which also contains Lincoln's Bible in which he inscribed his family records with his own hand.

Health Fads

The subject of how to live long is always of interest, which perhaps accounts for the eagerness of the average mortal to seize upon the various methods which are recommended for promoting health and longevity, such as doing daily exercise to radio music and the like.

In spite of all the propaganda on the subject, however, there are many who are skeptical regarding the real benefits of strenuous physical activity. One of these wrote a letter to the Cleveland Press pointing out that Walter Camp, famed athlete and originator of the "daily dozen," died at 65, while he, the writer, had never taken any kind of exercise to speak of and was still in excellent health, although a great-grandfather. He added that "the longest-lived people are the physically lazy but mentally alert."

Commenting on the letter, William Feather, a well-known editor, declares that several years ago he adopted a vigorous health program, including vegetarianism, cold baths and the daily dozen, with this result:

"Acute indigestion led to the abandonment of vegetarianism on doctor's orders. Another doctor recommended discontinuance of cold baths. The daily dozen are still pursued, but faith in them has been shaken by the untimely death of their inventor.

Still, we may find many who swear by the health fads and feel that their lives have been saved thereby. As the proverb has it, "What is food for some is black poison for others."

Sidelights

If your doctor tells you that you are a goner, don't despair. A physician told Mrs. Amanda Smith of Atlanta that she was going to die, and she has just done so—66 years later, at the age of 104.

Aviators who habitually make three-point landings have nothing on Herbert Pickett of Newark. He landed squarely on all fours and was uninjured when a train hit his car and hurled it 30 feet.

Abe Buzzard, a 68-year-old Pennsylvanian, has spent more than 30 years of his life in jail for stealing, principally, chickens. Between jail terms he is an evangelist. Another neat little problem for the psychologists.

Negroes are noted for giving fantastic names to their fraternal and social organizations. A society in Miami is called the Improved Order of Pallbearers of America, although it has no connection with funerals or corpse-toting.

Harper's tells of a little girl sent to an institution for the feeble-minded, where she was found to be merely sub-normal and sent home. Her little sister in a burst of confidence told a playmate: "Janie was sent away to be an idiot, but she couldn't pass and had to come back."

Annoyed by interference with traffic by slow-moving funerals, authorities at Campi Salentino, Italy, ordered them to proceed at a livelier pace. Jazz was substituted for the plaintive strains of Chopin, and the trick was done, in spite of many protests.

Someone has evidently been humanizing the officials of a certain trans-Atlantic line. Its board of directors have gravely decided that babies born aboard its vessels may be carried to the end of the voyage without the payment of fare.

Due to improved chemical methods, corn sugar is becoming increasingly popular, according to the president of the American Baking Institute, and may serve to absorb future surpluses. Other devotees of applied chemistry are doing their bit in this direction by making a potent liquid product which appears to be in rather steady demand.

Explosion Damage to Diesel Engine Repaired

The Diesel engine which pumps city water, lights the streets and furnishes electricity for municipal purposes in Kewanee, Illinois, was placed back in service on Saturday, February 16, after a two weeks' shutdown. Experts from the Beloit plant of the Fairbanks Morse Company, manufacturers of the engine, assisted city workmen in repairing the damage which occurred February 1, when a cylinder exploded damaging the fly wheel, engine base and crank shaft. No one was injured when the engine which was installed about a year ago, was wrecked.

Water and lighting service was maintained during the period of shutdown through the prompt action of city officials who arranged for an emergency connection with the lines of the Kewanee Public Service Company.

The engine received considerable publicity last month when city officials invited representatives from other municipalities in northern Illinois to attend a two day meeting held to celebrate the first anniversary of its operation.

Aunt Emma

By CHET GRANT
McClure Newspaper Syndicate.
WNU Service.

"LISTEN, ma, when is she goin' home, huh, ma?"
George Blake turned his attention from driving the Iron Horse to catch his mother's eye, but Mrs. Blake was examining the contents of her shopping bag.
"When is who going home, Georgie?"
"When is who going home?"
Georgie repeated with disgust. "You know who I mean, all right. Aunt Emma: the pest!"
"Now, Georgie, remember, she is your father's sister," Mrs. Blake remarked automatically; she had been saying it for weeks. Then she gave a relieved sigh, "Ah, here it is. I was afraid I'd forgotten Aunt Emma's reducing salts."
"I wish she'd take an overdose of those things and reduce herself back to California," Georgie snapped savagely. "Don't be silly," his mother advised. "She means all right. It's just that she loves you so much she . . ."
"Listen," Georgie hissed. "Listen, ma, how would you like it if your private life was spread out for public gaze the way mine is every day? How would you like it if somebody went around tellin' how cute you looked in a— a bellyband and showin' a picture of you stark naked on a bearskin rug? Good-night, ma! What made you have that picture taken for, anyway? Like I was a freak or somepln!"
"You must remember . . ."
"That she's my father's sister!"
Georgie groaned, reaching for the shopping bag. "I guess you're kind of fed-up, aren't you, ma? You looked kind of mad last night when Aunt Emma was tellin' the minister's wife how hard you set your cap to catch pop."
"We'll say no more about it," his mother remarked severely.
A little more than a month ago Aunt Emma had come from California for a short surprise visit with her brother. She had just turned forty and was working might and main to reverse the process and trip up the march of time. No diet or exercise was too rigorous for her Spartan spirit.
"Yoo-hoo, I'm upstairs," Aunt Emma's soprano heaved against the walls. "Georgie, deah! Guess who's coming up tonight."
"Eddie Cantor," Georgie growled. "You funny boy!" Aunt Emma twittered. "Of course not. It's the Elston's Young People's society."
"What!" Georgie was in the hall with one wild leap. "What are they comin' up here for?" Alas for all his careful plans to keep plenty of distance between Aunt Emma and the gang's eager ears!
"I knew you'd be delighted, Georgie. You're friend, Mabel Porter, phoned while you were out, so I invited them all to come up to a party."
"Aw, Aunt Emma, I—"
"We'll have the duckiest time, Georgie. Ice cream, cake . . ."
"Nuts!" Georgie mooched into the living room.
"Yes, and nuts," Aunt Emma cooed after him.
The society arrived in a body for Aunt Emma's fame had spread. Suddenly a bright light shone through the red indignation that surrounded Georgie. The smile he bore as he entered the living room a few minutes later would have ruined a pound of butter.
"Here's my baby now," Aunt Emma clucked. Georgie caught his father's sympathetic wink as the society snickered. "The meeting," Georgie intoned, "will now come to order."
"Listen to the great big man," Aunt Emma cooed. "And I knew him when he couldn't say anything but 'Goo-goo and ga-ga!'"
"Haw, haw, haw!" That was Skiny Tate, Georgie made mental note. "Say, I'll bet he was all mouth," somebody remarked. "I'll bet he didn't win any baby shows."
"He did, too!" Aunt Emma defended. "Look at this picture taken the day he won first prize at the County fair baby show." The society went into several huddles. "Look at the curls! Wasn't he the cherub! Why, Georgie, shame on you!"
If his friends expected a wrathful outburst from Georgie or a show of discomfort, they were disappointed. He became preoccupied with a package taken from one of his pockets. "Say," Tootles Walsh demanded suddenly, "what're you carryin' that puncture kit in here for?" Georgie grinned as the others turned their attention to this new interest. "Oh," he remarked with a fine nonchalance, "I carry this on account of Aunt Emma's rubber corset. She might get a blowout."
Mrs. Blake and Aunt Emma gasped. Georgie drew the rubber chin strap out of his pocket. "Aunt Emma—" he began when the room was suddenly plunged into darkness. His father's voice cut through the murk. "You'd better come down cellar and help me fix that fuse, Georgie."
The enormity of his deed settled upon Georgie as he crept down the cellar steps. "I ought to belt you," Mr. Blake growled in the darkness. "I . . . Oh, for Pete's sake, kid, holler for your aunt's appreciation. I . . . I have to sit down."
Georgie heard his father chuckling and with a relieved grin he fumbled for the fuse box. The light flashed on before he reached it and his mother came down the stairs.
"I turned out the lights," she snapped. "Shame, Georgie Blake. . . I've apologized. I've done everything I can."
"Is she going home?" Georgie and his father asked simultaneously.
"She is not," Mrs. Blake wailed. "She's staying another month just to show us she hasn't any hard feeling."

Time Lost is Money Lost

It costs money to be sick. You see it directly if your pay envelope is short. You lose out on some important work if you live on a farm or if you are one of the few who are not docked for lost time. You can't afford to show up on the job unless you are feeling fit. The boss wants results—not excuses.

How many times do Gas on Stomach, Head-ache, Sour Stomach, "That Tired Feeling," That "Morning After" Feeling, Neuralgic, Rheumatic, Sciatic, Muscular or Periodic Pains keep you at home or interfere with your doing a full day's work?

All these troubles are caused or made worse by too much acid in your body. To correct this condition take

ALKA-SELTZER

The New Pain Relieving, Alkalizing, Effervescent Tablet.

It is called Alka-Seltzer because it makes a sparkling alkaline drink, and as it contains an analgesic (Acetyl-Salicylate) it first relieves the pain of everyday ailments and then by restoring the alkaline balance corrects the cause when due to excess acid. Alka-Seltzer is pleasant to take, harmless, non-laxative.

Why don't you try it? Get a drink at your drug store soda fountain for a nickel. Buy a package for home use.

Large Package 60 cents
Small Package 30 cents

Motor Fuel Money to be Used Solely for Roads

A bill that is creating considerable favorable comment has been introduced by Senators Mason and Gunning. The bill proposes that motor fuel money be used solely to construct roads to the end that every farm, and every city, village and town and every unincorporated community of over fifty population be connected by an improved road, passable in all seasons of the year with the State Road System, and that a super-highway be constructed from Chicago.
