Arlen-Lupino Romance Team in New Movie

The new Paramount picture, "Ready for Love," which comes to the Broadlands Theater on Friday and Saturday, May 24 and 25, tells the story of a young girl who knows how to get into trouble, but better still, knows how to get out again. The cast is headed by Richard Arlen, Ida Lupino and Marjorie Rambeau.

In "Ready for Love," Ida Lupino plays the role of Marigold Tate, a young, impetuous girl who upon her arrival in a small town creates a bad reputation and becomes involved in a scandal.

Richard Arlen, as a young editor, is actually responsible for Marigold's plight, for it is he who misinterprets an innocent lark on the girl's part and spreads it across the front page of his newspaper, until she finds herself the center of a national scandal.

How Marigold and the serious editor come to grips and fight each other tooth and nail, even as they fall in love, supplies the picture with its dramatic punch.

Thief Enters the Roy Bergfield Home Sunday

A sneak thief entered the Roy Bergfield home last Sunday night during the family's absence.

The house being locked, the thief gained entrance by removing a screen from a basement window.

The family returned home about 8:30 o'clock after a visit with relatives at Philo. They noticed that the lights were turned on and upon investigation found a young man in the house.

Messrs. James, Dick and Wm. Fitzgerald who were visitors in the home of Mrs. Mary Fitzgerald at the time, were summoned to surround the Bergfield home together with Mr. Bergfield, in an effort to catch the thief.

However, the thief made his getaway via the front door. He was a real sprinter and none of the men present were fast enough to catch him, having given up the chase after a run of a block or so.

The thief got away with some small change and some jewelry. The man is known, it is said, and will no doubt make himself scarce around town for a while—maybe longer.

BURGLARS HERE TUESDAY NIGHT

Break Into Bergfield Bros.' Store; Seize, Bind James Handley, Watchman.

Burglars broke into Bergfield Bros. Store about three o'clock last Tuesday morning. They gained entrance through one of the back windows, after having cut a small opening in the glass, unfastening the latch and raising the window.

When James Handley, the watchman, awoke, he saw three bold, bad burglars surrounding him. One held a flashlight on him, one pointed a gun at him, and the third man bound him with leather belts and told him to keep his head shut, and turn his head in the other direction. James states the muzzle of the revolver looked as big as a cannon.

While one man kept watch over James, the other two took his shot gun and flashlight and proceeded to open the safe. They knocked the knob off the safe, but couldn't get the door open, and failed to get what they were looking for—money. Besides the shotgun and flashlight the thieves took about all the cigarettes there were in the store.

James released himself soon after the burglars departed. He says he doesn't think they stayed very long, but that it seemed like a long while.

Ask Me Another

A few years ago the "ask me another" tests were in great favor and while many of the questions were of little practical significance, the fad perhaps did to some extent lead inquiring minds to gain an added knowledge of things in general.

Recently 25 Princeton professors gave themselves an "intelligence test," and it may be of satisfaction to some to know that they made a rather sorry showing in their answers. Out of 41 questions asked, the star professor of the lot could answer only 19 correctly. Others made scores considerably lower.

But before we offhand decide that college professors are dumbbells, anyway, let's look at some of the questions. Here are three of them:

Did Naevius originate the fabulae praetextatae? Has the four-dimensional analog of a cube 12 corners? Are the roots of a general polynomial of degree higher than four, complex numbers?

Being somewhat conservative in matters of this kind, our answer to all three would probably have been the familiar "Yes—and No."

Pigeons In War

It may not occur to many, but one of the most valuable adjuncts of a modern army is its "pigeon corps." Major General Irving J. Carr, chief of the Army Signal Corps reports that his branch of the service maintains 1,300 carrier pigeons, stationed at 11 different posts.

This information was given recently, when General Carr defended his feathered messengers the upkeep of which was opposed by certain members of Congress during consideration of the Army appropriation bill. He declared that during active warfare the service should have a supply of several thousand birds a month.

Many stories were told of the highly important services performed by carrier pigeons during the World War, in which hundreds were killed in the fighting areas. Time and again wounded pigeons finished their flights back to their headquarters with messages, only to die when their tasks were finished.

In all the improvements in communication systems which have been developed by army intelligence departments, no machine or other means has been devised to substitute for the swift and intelligent feathered bearer of military dispatches.

Travel In Colombia

Perhaps no country in the world affords such varied means of transportation as Colombia, where the traveler may get about by methods ranging from mule-back to airplane, and including boat, train, auto and aerial cable.

From the Caribbean ports of Santa Marta, Cartagena and Barranquilla tourists can fly direct to Bogota, the capital, over 700 miles of thick jungle through which the Spanish "conquistadores" made their weary way in the 16th century. This flight is made by one of the safest plane systems in the world, the Scadta, operated for the last ten years without a single accident to passengers on regular flights. Or, they may take a longer route by stern-wheel river boats up the Magdalena to Honda, and thence by train and auto to Bogota.

From the Pacific side, disembarking at Buenaventura, the trip to the capital is made by train and auto, one point on the way reaching an altitude of 14,000 feet in the Andes. For side trips into the great prairies beyond, mules are used.

But the most novel trip of all is that by aerial cables, jumping across space and transporting coffee and passengers 72 kilometers from Manizales to the Magdalena river. These carry tiny cars swinging from 13 to 200 feet above ground and traveling only four and a half miles an hour. But slow as this seems, it isn't so bad. On foot one would do well to make four and a half miles in a whole day in that type of country.

Practical Education

An intelligent contribution to the current discussion regarding what is desirable in the way of present-day education was made by Dr. John J. Tigert, president of the University of Florida, who declared that the true purpose of education is to fit the citizen to serve as well as to live.

He draws attention to two schools of current thought, one of which would stress cultural education, while the other would place chief emphasis upon vocational training. He admits the validity of both, but he would not go to the extremes sought by the advocates of either. He favors a balanced program of education, with sufficient flexibility to meet the needs of each individual.

While not minimizing the value of cultural studies and their absolute necessity for those who would enter the learned professions, Dr. Tigert points out that "one can not live by culture alone, this is especially true of the great mass of our citizens who must engage in pursuits which involve the use of their hands."

Practical education should be planned in accordance with the needs of the individual in preparation for his life's work. At present too much time is given to preparing for college entrance examinations which only a small percentage of public school pupils will ever have the opportunity to take. The needs of those who must quit school at the end of grammar or the high school courses should have more consideration.

American Legion to Fight Accidents

The highway safety problem took a long step toward solution lately with the announcement that the American Legion is to carry on an aggressive, organized program in the interest of automobile accident prevention. The program is detailed in a booklet jointly published by the Legion and the National Bureau of Casualty and Surety Underwriters.

Under the suggested plan, the safety program will be handled by the Legion's Americanism Commission. Working under it will be State Traffic Committees, composed of representatives from each district. These committees in each state will maintain contact with the State Superintendent of Public Instruction, the State Motor Vehicle Commission, the State Highway Patrol and the Legislature.

Next there will be district safety committees, composed of a representative from each county in the district. These will hold meetings with county safety committees, to be composed of a representative of each local post in the county. The representative of each local post will work with local police, schools, city councils and engineering departments. All of the committees will cooperate with automobile clubs, insurance companies, newspapers, safety associations and similar organizations.

Workers in the cause of safety believe that the Legion can be of tremendous aid in reducing the inexcusable accident toll—a toll which reached 35,000 people killed on streets and highways last year. The Legion is to be complimented on accepting this arduous duty—and the result will be happier and safer living for the people of the country.

Willard Plans More Strength for State U.

President of Institution Outlines Program for Long-Time Improvement.

James O'Donnell Bennett, world famous reporter for the Chicago Tribune, summarized his interview with President Arthur Cutts Willard of the University of Illinois as follows:

DR. ARTHUR CUTTS WILLARD, President, University of Illinois

"From those utterances on the university's larger opportunities, the president moved on to the sketching of a program not so much of 'policies'—a word he is chary of using—but of aims."

"Those aims comprise: '1. Strengthening of an already notable faculty by bringing in new blood and by steadily advancing its present members so that they shall not be lured away from Urbana by other universities or by the industries.

'2. Greater emphasis upon the cultural side of the university's work, but without lessening its prestige—which is great—as a seat of technological instruction.

'3. Strict avoidance of cluttering the program of instruction with courses of an empirical nature. 'Many agencies throughout the state,' said the president, 'want us to teach this, that, and the other. We cannot provide unlimited diversification of curricula. The result would be thin spots and superficial training. We must select those things which are of the greatest importance to the largest number of our students.'

'4. Control of research' to the end that none of it shall lapse into futile puttering.

'5. Development of specific courses in citizenship and social problems along lines still to be determined.

'6. Further strengthening of the contacts, already close and cordial, between the University and the 1,200 public, parochial and private high schools in Illinois to the end that the standards of those schools shall be raised, thus making the schools more valuable to their students and at the same time freeing the university from the burden of what sometimes amounts to the almost elementary instruction of freshmen in certain branches.'

Illini Faculty Shows Progress With Writings

A progressive institution such as the University of Illinois needs a progressive faculty and it has one. That the Illini faculty is keeping pace with the times, in addition to its regular teaching and research, is indicated by the books, articles, and reviews written during the academic year just closing.

Forty-seven faculty members wrote new books and 27 were co-authors of others, thus adding to the world's store of facts and information available to others. Other Illinois faculty members contributed 553 scientific articles and 138 reviews. Two hundred sixty-two other articles were written jointly by those on the faculty.

The faculty of the College of Medicine alone contributed 147 papers dealing with scientific medical data. These facts emphasize once again that teaching and research are only some of the things done by members of the University faculty. Just as important, in the eyes of those who watch the progress of the University, is the other great work of creative writing turned out by the faculty and graduate school.

PATRICIA turned the corner and trudged up another busy street. Never had people seemed so much like marching ants as they filed past her, nor the world itself more like a dung-hill of crawling insects.

Claude, her stepfather, was waiting for her in the lobby of the Maldrige. Mother worked but Claude lived on a pension; he was gassed or something once. Patricia had just come to live with them since Aunt Margot died. Aunt Margot understood. Patricia was a sensitive child that needed encouragement and patience. Her talent needed good soil and fair weather for its growth. Aunt Margot had nourished Pat's literary seed. But Aunt Margot had died and Patricia at nineteen was left dependent on mother and Claude. Claude seemed to hold some strange power over mother. Patricia loathed him. He was heavy and almost vulgar and the once good contours of his face were flabby now. Claude thought Patricia a moon-struck fool. He had told her to get out and find a job and make her own. Mother had mildly added that it would do her no harm.

Three mornings now had she walked the streets and answered ads, and made inquiries. "Any experience?" How could one say yes? Some took her application; others would not do that. It was a strange, hateful world.

At the corner she saw a voluptuous old negress wabbling down the street. She was humming to the swaying of her rippling fat. Patricia watched her while waiting for the green light. The old black woman came up to her.

"Well, hello, honey, Miss Wilma." Pat stared at her not replying.

"I know you all think you don't know me," she went on, "but I know you. I know you by that pretty little dress you wearing." Patricia felt embarrassed.

"No, you don't know me. I'm . . ."

"Listen, honey, Miss Wilma, I don't fo'gt no dress after I done once washed it." Pat glanced uneasily at her green pleated crepe. It was only its second wearing. The old woman was mad.

"Get out," she said hurriedly. "I'm a stranger here in town." The light was green. Patricia hurried across but the old woman was at her heels and talking loudly.

"Sho nuff. Well you and Miss Wilma jus' look so much alike, ah, honey, you don' know no one what wants a good washwoman?" Well this was technique.

"No," said Patricia kindly and quickly realized her indulgent tone was a mistake; the negress was walking abreast of her now.

"Well, yo' all couldn' put a nickel on a church calendar, could ya?"

"I'm looking for a job myself," and Pat suddenly jay-walked to shake her off, but the old negress jay-walked, too.

"Dat's right, honey, dat's right. You'll find one, too. Just depend on da good Lord . . . he makes fo' us all." Well, that was a thought. Then the old woman stopped to confab with a street cleaner and, Pat, seeing her chance, dodged down the street. It was only a little piece, however, until the old woman came calling after her.

"Lissen, chile, you done run off and pass'd up a sign in dat winda . . . you mustn' nebbah pass a sign, Miss Honey."

Despairingly, Pat looked back. "Why, sure enough, it says 'Girl Wanted,' I might go in." The old woman nodded proudly and turned back with her. Well, this was too much.

"Listen, you stay here, I'd better go by myself," she said, but just as she was about to enter the shop door the old negress caught up with her.

"I ain' gonna let you po' child go in there without no he'p," she said, opening her dilapidated purse the while.

"Heah, now, this gonna he'p da good Lord do his work." She took out a rabbit's foot, and giving it three moaning kisses, handed it to the young girl. Laughingly Pat took it. What a quaint old fool, she mused, as she entered the place. Crazy as a loon, but she did give her a warm feeling inside. She saw a man standing in the back talking to a lady. Still smiling she sought him.

"I saw your sign in the window, sir."

"Oh, I forgot." But then he was staring round-eyed at the thing in her hand.

"What's that?" he said. Pat looked down and felt the heat creep over her chin and up her cheeks. She gave a silly little laugh.

"Oh, that's for good luck," she said. The man did not smile but looked a long time at her innocent young face.

"All right . . . all right . . ." he said at length gruffly. "Report in the morning. Place for a girl in the office."

The lady standing beside the manager gave a significant humph.

"I thought you wanted clerking help," she said.

"I did," he answered, "but I just hired a woman for that. I forgot to take the sign down."

"Then, why in the world did you hire this young thing for?"

"I don't know," he mused softly. "Did you see that rabbit's foot? Luella, do you remember how we tied our wedding rings to the horse shoe a full week before the wedding?"

Luella gave a snort and walked behind the counter.

"Just imagine people still believing in such charms. I didn't have the nerve to disillusion her, so young in life."

Sidelights

Originators of the "prosperity club" chain letters promise 15,625 dimes to gullible persons who fall for the racket. The chances are about 15,625 to 1 that a victim will receive even one dime. But it will be some amusement while it lasts.

When his radio went bad, Sam Cortwright of Johnstown, Pa., took the role of Mr.-Fix-it. Hooking a new wire to what he supposed was a house light wire, the radio was shattered to bits and Sam was badly burned. The wire he had connected with carried 2,300 volts.

Prof. Jean Capart, a noted Egyptologist, has unearthed some inscriptions said to be ancient maxims of schoolmasters who served under the Pharaohs 3,000 years ago. One of them is translated as follows: "The way to the brain of a boy is thru the seat of his pants."

An attack of paralysis would hardly seem helpful in starting one on a screen career, but such it proved for Miss Rosina Lawrence of Los Angeles. Dancing to aid her recovery, she became so proficient as to win a film contract, after conquering the ailment which lasted about a year and a half.

Columbia University is to have an unusual student soon, according to the New York Herald Tribune. He is Earle F. Peacox, who is serving a sentence of from 20 years to life for murder, and who has passed his college entrance examinations. Obviously, Peacox will not attend in person, but will take correspondence courses.

Office Seeker—Does anything else come with the job besides the salary?

Political Boss—Well, there's a little work connected with it.

Office Seeker—I was afraid there would be some catch to it.

Little David's mother had company and she went out in the back yard to bring him in and show him off. There was something of a scuffle in the next room and the visitors heard this from David: "I don't care if you have got company. I ain't goin' to have my face washed with spit."

Where It Is 3½ Years to Payday

Robert Morris, "Forgotten" Principal in One of Illinois "Ghost schools," and Two of His Tiny Charges.

Robert Morris, principal of the tumbledown schoolhouse in Halldayboro, Jackson county, came out to see what the photographer was doing. One of his sleeves was empty and his clothes were old, shiny and unpressed. "How much cash money do you get each month?" he was asked. "Money?" he replied. "Money? Why, I've only been on the job here one year. This district pays its teachers with orders. They're cashed in rotation. I'll get my first month's pay in about three and a half years." "How do you manage to live?" "I was saving in my youth," he said with a wan smile. Mr. Morris didn't want to have his picture taken. He was, he said, a bit sensitive about his clothes. But persuasion won. The holes in the schoolhouse assure plenty of ventilation. Salaries have been cut about in half; school supplies have been bought for the last three years; the janitor has been dismissed.

Son—Dad, what does "P. S." at the end of a letter mean? Dad—"Please Settle."

No, you can't have any more cookies tonight, Bobby, said his mother. Don't you know that you can't sleep on a full stomach?

Well, replied Bobby, I can sleep on my back.

Local High School Girl To Receive A Five Day All Expense Trip Tour Free

Trip includes tour and cruise to Detroit, Niagara Falls, and Toronto, Canada—absolutely free.

Sixty high school girls attending high school in the Danville area, including Broadlands and Longview, who secure the largest number of Tour and Cruise Certificates, by 9:30 p. m. Aug. 17, 1935, will receive from the business firms of Danville as a gift free a five day all-expense round trip tour to Detroit, Niagara Falls and Toronto, Canada. The trip includes all transportation, all meals, single beds in hotels, and single berths aboard ship, special sight-seeing trips, guides etc. Girls will not be expected to pay one cent of the trip's cost.

THE PLAN

Beginning Saturday morning, May 25th, 1935 a Tour and Cruise Certificate will be given by the business firms of Danville cooperating in this event for every 25c spent in their places of business on cash purchases or payments on account. Official Cruise and Tour stores will be designated by window displays in the windows of the cooperating concerns. All that is required is that everyone be sure that they receive a Tour and Cruise certificate for every 25c purchase they make in Danville and give this certificate to the high school student they wish to assist, who will fill them out and bring or send them to the Danville Chamber of Commerce as directed.

This plan makes it possible for every customer of the cooperating firms in Danville to help any particular girl or number of girls attending the local high school to receive these trips.

LOCAL HIGH SCHOOL GIRLS

This is an opportunity for you to secure a vacation trip free of all expenses such as has never been offered in this city before. All that is required to secure one of these trips is to do as follows: First—Register—by using the nomination blank appearing elsewhere in this newspaper, by writing your name and address and the name of the high school you attend on the Entry blank found in this issue of The Broadlands News, and mail or bring it to the Danville Chamber of Commerce Office. Second—See to it that your parents, relatives, friends and neighbors receive a Tour and Cruise Certificate with every 25c they spend in Danville on cash purchases or payments on account, and give them to you. Third—Write your name and the name of your high school on each certificate, save all you get, and send them or bring them to the Danville Chamber of Commerce office not later than 9:30 p. m. August 10th, 1935, the official closing hour. Have them tied together and counted in order that the judges can easily check the certificates and announce the local and all other winners as soon as possible after the closing hour.

Coast Drivers are Sure To Have Duel

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind.—Two "fire-crackers" from the far west will put on a little race among themselves during the 500-mile race at the Indianapolis Motor Speedway, May 30. For it won't make any difference in what spot either Al Gordon or Kelly Petillo may be running in the big event, they are certain to stage their own little contest all by themselves. Neither will stand for the other passing him. Petillo shot his red charger about the 25-mile qualifying test at nearly 120 miles an hour last year to win the pole position and is back this year with a new car. Gordon also has a faster machine and the pair are certain to stage an interesting duel.

Rose Lost $569 Per Second Last May 30

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind.—Mauri Rose finished 27 seconds behind the 500-mile race winner last year and each one of those precious moments cost him exactly $569.44 per second. The pay-off from the Indianapolis Motor Speedway and accessory and lap prizes to Wild Bill Cummings, the winner, was $29,725 exclusive of future money-earning capacity and Rose got $14,350 for second place, a difference of $15,350.

It was the closest finish in the history of the Speedway and Rose is back this May 30 with a new car—a faster one, he says, and he hopes the score will be different.

He will pilot the Four-Wheel-Drive Special with which Frank Brisko showed the way for 70 laps in last year's race.

"No one can be sure he is going to win," Rose says, "but I know I can hit the turns faster, maintain higher speed, use less gas and rubber in the Four-Wheel drive than I could in the rear wheel drive I had a year ago. With this added advantage, I hope to maintain a better average speed for the 500 miles."

Mauri thinks, too, that a majority of the field in the annual Decoration Day race at the Indianapolis Motor Speedway will be faster this year, too, and that it is likely Bill Cummings' winning speed record will be broken.
