Questions On Old Age Pension Law

The Department of Public Welfare is being flooded with letters from all over the State in reference to the Old Age Pension Law passed by the last legislature, and we are informed by Mr. A. L. Bowen, Director of Public Welfare, that it will be impossible to answer these letters at this time as the law will have to be changed in order to comply with the Federal Law which has not as yet been passed, but will be before the end of the present session of Congress. Hundreds of questions are being asked the Department every day which they are unable to answer.

In order to have the State comply with the Federal law, when passed, Governor Horner has placed the law in the hands of Mr. Frank Bane, Director of the American Public Welfare Association, who will make the necessary changes in the law which will be enacted at the special session of the legislature to be called by the Governor some time in September or October. Mr. Bane was formerly Director of Public Welfare in Virginia.

C. T. Henson Home Catches on Fire Monday

There was considerable excitement in the village last Monday morning when the C. T. Henson home caught on fire. The siren screeched and the bucket brigade soon had the flames under control. Fire broke out in the kitchen and is thought to have been caused by an oil stove which was being used at the time. The walls in the kitchen and the kitchen furniture were badly scorched and burned. The house and household effects were insured.

The village fire truck (or plaything) was rushed to the scene of the fire but was not used. Every time a fire breaks out our citizens are made to realize that we need a real fire truck.

Let's buy a real one—now—before the next fire breaks out.

News From Game Dept.

Director C. H. Thompson of the State Conservation Department, reports that 18,000 pheasants have been hatched at Mt. Vernon; 5000 at Yorkville; 5000 quails at Springfield and 800 turkeys at Jonesboro this year.

A crew of men from the State Conservation Department are now engaged in ridding Horse Shoe Lake near Cairo of turtles, which are great destroyers of fish. As an illustration of the destruction of fish by turtles, 13 Blue Gills were placed in a tank with a turtle and in two days all the Blue Gills had been eaten by the turtle in addition to his regular rations. The turtles which are being taken from Horse Shoe Lake have already been sold to a Peoria fish dealer.

The only changes in the present Fish and Game Laws are that the open season has been set back 15 days. The quail season opens in the Northern Zone on the 10th of November, the Central Zone on the 20th and the Southern Zone the 25th; all run for 30 days. The season for pheasants opens on the same date but runs only 6 days. The season for rabbits opens Jan. 31.

Can Pay Taxes Without Penalties Attached

County Treasurer Willard G. Goodman announced Tuesday he is ready to receive delinquent taxes without the penalties attached, as provided by the new law recently passed by the legislature.

He has had special receipts printed that will relieve him of responsibility, if the act later is declared to be invalid.

Goodman is expecting the act to bring in at least $100,000 in back taxes to the various subdivisions of the county, possibly more, before taxes become delinquent again.

Six Million Gallons of Whiskey Destroyed

The Hiram Walker distillery of Peoria was wrecked by a terrific explosion and the fire which followed, last Tuesday. Six million gallons of whiskey was destroyed. The total damage is estimated at $2,700,000. Cause of explosion unknown.

The Losers Entertain Winners of Contest

During the past three months the Y. W. O. Class of the U. B. Church have been having a contest at their meetings, on Bible Questions. Mr. and Mrs. P. O. Rayl were the leaders, Mrs. Rayl's side losing.

On Thursday night of last week they gathered at Ben Rayl's home where the losers proceeded to entertain the winners. First was a Treasure Hunt. Four couples were sent, one in each direction, where they were met by secret service men and given further instruction. After a time, coming from the north was Jennie Nohren on a horse led by Howard Clem; east revealed Mrs. Agnes Turner in a spring wagon pulled by Clark Henson; south and west couples had a little difficulty at first in locating their chariots, but finally there came Ben Rayl pulling Leona Bergfield in a little red wagon, and Oscar Witt coming on the run pushing a wheel barrow containing Lillie Bowman. Next, all enjoyed an old fashioned hayrack ride over town during which, by the light of the moon and lantern, Olive Rayl revealed some ancient history of a few never-to-be-forgotten places.

Then they proceeded to Ed Maxwell's home where a mock wedding was enacted by the losers. Following were the characters: bride, Rev. J. F. Turner; bridegroom, Freda Maxwell; bridesmaid, John Nohren, best man, Ruth Henson; preacher, Zermah Witt; ring bearer, Thos. Bergfield; soloist, Thelma Clem; pianist, Olive Rayl.

Following the ceremony, ice cream and cake were served.

Invited guests were Roy Bergfield and family, Arch Campbell and family, the Hardyman brothers of Champaign, and the families of the members. There were 41 present.

Mrs. Belle Smith Is Hostess to L. W. Class

The L. W. Class of the U. B. Church met with Mrs. Belle Smith, Wednesday afternoon of last week. The meeting was presided over by the class president.

A shower of handkerchiefs was given to Mrs. Smith, this being her birthday month.

Refreshments consisted of ice cream, cakes and ice tea.

Four visitors were present, Mrs. Orville Reed, Misses Leone, Blanche and Nellie Smith.

Members present were Mesdames Leona Bergfield, Bessie Loomis, Ora Brown, Ella Maxwell, Flora Bailey, Mary Rayl, Olive Rayl, Della Reed, Agnes Turner, Dophia Warner, Belle Smith.

The next meeting will be held with Mrs. Ella Maxwell.

Last Civil War General

Holding the distinction of being the last surviving general of the Civil War, General Adelbert Ames reached the age of 97 before his death a few months ago. He was also one of the few living men who held the rank of general in the Spanish-American War.

The career of General Ames was a varied and often stormy one. A native of Rockland, Me. where he was born on October 31, 1835, he was graduated from West Point in 1861, at the outbreak of the Civil War, in which he served with distinction, being brevetted a major general of volunteers for gallantry in action.

He settled in Mississippi after the war and was a United States senator from that state from 1870 until 1873, when he was elected governor. His alleged favoritism toward the negroes led to a serious riot in Vicksburg. The legislature impeached him in 1876, but the charges were withdrawn and he resigned, later returning to the North. He was a brigadier general during the war with Spain.

Next to General Ames, the last Civil War general was J. Warren Keifer of Ohio, former speaker of the national House of Representatives, who died at his home in Springfield, O., on April 22, 1932, at the age of 96.

In Puritan Days

Some interesting facts concerning the life of New England Puritans immediately after the Revolution are related by Arthur Train in his "Puritan's Progress," written after extensive research into old town records, newspapers, letters and other early documents.

There were few roads and no good ones, so most journeys were made on horseback. The first systematic stage route between New York and Boston began operation in 1783, the trip taking from eight to ten days. Relatives living only ten miles apart sometimes visited one another only once or twice a year.

There were no hospitals or trained nurses, no anesthetics, no vaccination against smallpox which caused countless deaths. The hourglass was still used as a timepiece, fires were lit with flint and steel. If teeth were given any attention it was by rubbing with gunpowder applied with a wooden stick.

While gambling with cards and lotteries prevailed generally, theatrical performances were unlawful, and so was kissing on Sunday, even by husband and wife. An official made his rounds on Sunday to see that everyone went to church. In the few schools which existed the Bible was the principal textbook. Harvard students had to get up for chapel at six, and retired when the curfew rang at nine. They had to call at the kitchen for their bread and milk, which was eaten in their rooms, in which no lights were allowed.

Women usually married young and died young, the average family being nine or ten, with twenty or more children not unusual, but about half of them died before maturity. And considering the hard conditions under which they would have been forced to live, those who died early may have been lucky at that.

Presidents' Families

Some facts regarding the family relations of our presidents may be of interest, as they are probably little known to the average reader. How many, for example, could tell off-hand how many presidents never married? The answer is, only one, Buchanan.

All the rest were married, and five of them married twice, Tyler, Fillmore, Benjamin Harrison, Theodore Roosevelt and Wilson, the last three taking widows as their second wives.

The wives of Jefferson, Jackson, Van Buren and Arthur died before their husbands became president. Cleveland went into office as a bachelor, but was married during his first term.

Washington, Madison, Jackson Polk and Harding were childless. Tyler was the father of 14 children, seven by each of his wives. W. H. Harrison was the father of 10, Hayes was the father of eight, Jefferson, Taylor and Theodore Roosevelt were the fathers of six each.

Two widows of presidents remarried. Mrs. Cleveland married T. J. Preston, Jr., a professor of archeology, in 1913, about five years after her husband's death. Mrs. Benjamin Harrison married James Blaine Walker, Jr., her third husband, in 1921, when she was 64 years of age.

The most unusual circumstances connected with the marital relations of any president concerned Andrew Jackson. Believing that Mrs. Lewis Robards had been divorced from her husband, he married her in 1791, only to discover that the decree of divorce had not yet been granted. Later the decree was issued and Jackson remarried Mrs. Robards in 1794.

Sidelights

If you were a young fellow, would you marry a woman 60 years old? In replying to a questionnaire, 90 per cent of the male students at the University of Oregon said they would—if she had a million dollars.

After a recent robbery of the Detroit Zoo safe of $1,053, Superintendent Millen announced that hereafter the safe would be kept in the lions' den at night. He also extended an invitation to cracksmen to "come and get it."

Lawrence Johnson of Ohio, happily married and the father of two children at the age of 21, is also justice of the peace. Wishing others to share the joys of married life, he offers to perform marriage ceremonies according to their capacity to pay, "from nothing to just a little."

One Ohio town ordinance provides as follows: "When two cars come to a crossing both shall stop and neither shall start until the other is gone." If this be carefully observed there will not be many collisions, but there may be some slight congestion of traffic.

Even a rooster has the right to life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness, including the right to crow whenever he feels like it, according to a decision by Judge Estes of Oklahoma City, who dismissed a complaint of neighbors against a citizen whose rooster was considered too noisy. It is said that the judge has a choice flock of poultry of his own.

Nineteen nations still owe the United States more than 13 billion dollars in war debts. All defaulted again in their payments due June 15 except Finland, the only country that has faithfully made all payments as agreed upon. As for the rest, Uncle Sam may about as well consider what they owe as a permanent investment.

TELLS HOW BANKS AIDED PROGRESS

Economist Describes the Ways Banking Institutions Have Contributed to Development of United States

OMAHA, Nebr.—Privately owned banking, despite its faults, has served America well, William A. Irwin, Professor of Economics, Washburn College, Topeka, Kansas, declared in a recent address here on "Banking in a Changing World."

"Under the leadership of individuals banking has helped to bring this country to a foremost place in economic development among the nations of the world," he said. "The small community has been developed by the individual bank. The frontiers of America have been pushed forward by the help and counsel of the individual banker. The shocks of wars and depressions in a century and a half have been withstood with the assistance of the individual banker."

Change May Be Necessary

"It may be that we have reached a tide in the affairs of America when new methods are needed. It may be that we have come to a point where the individual should be submerged for the greatest good of the greatest number."

"It may even be that complete centralization of the banking system has become an economic necessity in our complicated social life. But the banker ought to be satisfied that these things are so before he should give up his fight for the system we have known. We came to greatness under that kind of banking; we should not give it up without unmistakable proof of the absolute necessity of such a change."

The American Pattern

Professor Irwin said that the proposal which has been advanced for coordinating banking operations in the national interest under "a Supreme Court" for banking is typically American and ought to have the most serious consideration of those elements which are clamoring for political control, which is typically un-American."

It is not wise, he said, to oppose changes as such, but that bankers should "see to it that change, if and when it does come, shall preserve all that is good in the past and stick as closely as possible to the American pattern of things."

Banking is properly a conservative profession, he pointed out, and should cling to practices and principles of banking that are, and always have been, fundamentally sound.

"It is to its credit that so large a group of its members never faltered, even in boom times, in their allegiance to those sound principles," he declared. "We probably owe our salvation from chaos to that fact."

The Four
By WALDO L. CLEMENT
© McClure Newspaper Syndicate.
WNU Service.

IT WAS during our senior year that the rest of the class began to call us "The Four." Whether this name was intended for good natured kidding or otherwise I don't know, but anyway it stuck.

We were together a great deal those flying months; Tom and Laura, Anna and I.

Tom was broad shouldered and lean of hip. His hair was the color of corn silk and his eyes blue. The girl called him "The Viking."

Laura was like him; big boned, red haired and good natured.

Anne was different; she was slim and dark haired and quiet.

I never went in for athletics like Tom. A good book interested me more; an hour in the lab, burning holes in my shirt and concocting villainous chemical smells suited me better. A thin body on long spindly legs had something to do with it.

Tom and Laura were the life of any gathering. The fact that they were seniors didn't bother them a bit. They chased each other up and down stairs in the most undignified manner and hurled insults at each other with friendly grins. They were good pals. Anne and I laughed at their pranks but couldn't do these things ourselves; we weren't built that way.

Tom never took any liberties with Anne. He never washed her face in snow or called her a bow-legged bum the way he did Laura. He never appeared at ease when alone with her. They both acted funny that way.

Once I saw Tom kiss Laura when they were dancing and the lights were low. She laughed and pushed him away and five minutes later they were quarreling animatedly about the correct way to spell cantaloupe.

The inevitable happened, of course. Those fool tongue-wagging sophists started the story that they were engaged. It burned me up.

Just before the holidays we had a class sleigh ride; all the usual fixings including four horses, jingling bells, fur robes and a long sleigh filled with straw. We piled in helter skelter, and somehow "The Four" were together as usual. I built a cushion of straw for Anne's back and she leaned her shoulder against mine. It made me feel that I was responsible for her protection and comfort. I came near proposing to her that night.

On the long ride over the snow-packed country roads we sang lively college songs as we snuggled down under the robes and thrilled at the touch of soft hands in our own.

Coming home the moon was just dropping over Sawyer's hill when we reached the long steep grade by the mill pond. I remember we were singing something about "Soft and Low," when a big black dog jumped over the wall barking furiously. We felt a sudden jerk that threw us backward and the singing stopped; then came the thudding roll of hoofs and a biting wind filled with clods of snow blew over us.

Scrambling to our knees, we saw the driver sawing furiously at the bits and over the heads of the galloping horses the deep valley flowing up to meet us. The road was narrow and curved to the right at the foot of the hill. It seemed to end abruptly in the deep woods.

The sleigh began to rock dangerously and skid from side to side like the lash of a whip. Some of the girls screamed and stood up preparing to jump. I could feel Anne trembling as she buried her face on my shoulder.

Then I heard Laura's voice ring out clear and confident. She staggered across the bouncing sleigh and mustering all her superb strength hurled the frightened girls flat, "Crawl to the right side and hang on," she cried. "We'll make it!"

It was a miracle that we did. The sleigh tipped perilously as it rounded the curve and it seemed an eternity before we settled back and the floundering horses gained the road to plunge forward again. But Laura had gone over the side. I saw her fall, clutching at space, and forgot Anne. I forgot everything but Laura. Leaping feet first and praying I wouldn't strike her, I followed.

A pine tree took care of me; a burly pine that cracked two of my ribs and knocked me unconscious with one blow.

When I opened my eyes Laura was bending over me. She was crying and I knew she had just kissed me. Her mouth was trembling. "Bob," she whispered hoarsely, then choked up and began to cry again. My side was aching but I put my arms around her and kissed her. I kissed her many times and thrilled at her heart beating against mine. "I love you, Laura," I said holding her close. "I don't care if you and Tom are engaged, you're mine."

"Tom?" she eyed me queerly, "that clumsy clown?" The old ready laugh bubbled in her throat, then suddenly serious she stepped back and shook her head. "But Anne?" her eyes were probing into mine. "I thought you—that she—"

I was still attempting to describe just how it was when we overtook the rest of the crowd. They were paired off, walking slowly, and the very last ones were Tom and Anne. She had her head on his shoulder and was talking and laughing softly. It surprised me, knowing how quiet and reserved she was. "The Four"—"One for all and all for one"—and they hadn't even missed us!

SEES INFLATION A SLOW PROCESS

A Real Danger for the Future, Col. Ayres Tells Banking Groups.

NEW BRUNSWICK, N. J.—Present prospects do not indicate that inflation severe enough to cause further dollar devaluation will come soon in this country, but as an ultimate development it seems to be a very real danger, Leonard P. Ayres, Vice President Cleveland Trust Company, said here tonight in an address before the Graduate School of Banking. He believed this statement to be true "unless the government enters frankly upon a policy of issuing flat money with which to meet its expenses." At present that does not seem to be in sight, he said.

The Graduate School is operated jointly by the American Institute of Banking Section of the American Bankers Association and Rutgers University to offer advanced studies for bank officers.

"We have so enormously increased the capacity of our banking system for credit expansion that it is difficult to see how we could have a vigorous business revival without having it develop into a credit inflation," Colonel Ayres declared.

Inflation a Slow Process

If inflation does come it will be a slow process, he said, pointing out that in Germany, France, Belgium and Italy it took about five years to develop from the time when the governments entered upon policies of financing large peace-time deficits by bank credit up to the time when the public generally began to spend money rapidly because of fear that it would still further depreciate in purchasing power.

"If we are to go through such a period here it would seem likely that it might last rather longer than the corresponding periods did abroad," he said. "Its beginning would date from the spring of 1933 when we left the old gold basis for our money and entered upon the policy of financing large governmental deficits by the sale of Federal securities mainly to banks rather than to private investors."

"The method that we are following is the one that proved disastrous in Europe for in all those countries including Germany, the increasing issues of money that caused the inflations were not mere printing press issues of flat currency, but were secured by government bonds and notes discounted at the banks. Nevertheless, the process is inherently a slow one."

Among the clearest lessons taught by the European experience, Colonel Ayres asserted, is that there are "no good hedges against inflation." He added:

Did Not Lighten Debt Burdens

"One of the strange facts about these inflations is that while they destroyed the values of most existing debts, they did not succeed in lightening the debt burdens of either the people as a whole, or of the corporations."

"Inflation destroys the value of bonds and mortgages and so confiscates the property of these holders of obligations and hands it over to the shareholders and the equity owners. However, it introduces so many new economic difficulties that these share and equity holders are at once forced to incur new indebtedness so that when stabilization comes the problems of debt are about as troublesome as they were before, or even more so."

The five requisites of inflation were listed by Colonel Ayres as first, a period of sustained active business; second, a rising stock market; third, real credit expansion; fourth, greater outflow of gold "than we can tolerate which would force us to cut our currency entirely free from gold"; and fifth, continued large budget deficits in government operation.

A PROPHECY

Significant economic developments to be expected in the next decade are listed by a prominent business writer as follows: (1) Higher standard of living. (2) Continued advances in technical processes of production. (3) Factory built houses, better and cheaper than hand made houses. (4) Somewhat cheaper money. (5) Faster travel. (6) News printed by radio. (7) Mechanical cotton picker, revolutionizing the South. (8) Cheaper electric power. (9) Better distribution of goods; more chain stores. (10) Another depression five or six years hence, preceded by an inflationary boom.

TWO QUESTIONS ANSWERED

Why is it that one farmer raises 100 bushels of corn to the acre, and the other one, on the other side of the fence, raises 25 bushels to the acre? Why is it that one farmer produces 100 pounds of pork on five bushels of corn, and another uses 25 bushels? Not until power machinery, scientific principles of soil fertilization and restoration, rotation of crops, diversification of crops and economical feeding are applied to the farm, will the farmers' problem be solved, says a farm authority.

BANKING READY

NEW YORK. — There is abundant evidence that banks are in an unusually favorable position to finance a period of industrial growth, says the June issue of "Banking" published by the American Bankers Association.

An official survey on June 10 indicated that the Government of the United States, through its loans, was the potential owner of more than half of the existing world stocks of American cotton.

The annual resident sessions of the graduate school will be supplemented between periods by continued extension work for the students at their homes. The purpose of the school is described as being to offer in a three year course a comprehensive approach to an advanced study of the various administrative problems in banking and trust institutions. The teaching procedure is a combination of the case system and the lecture discussion method.

The Curriculum

The curriculum embraces banking administrative problems and policies, bank investment problems, legal and managerial aspects of trust business, legal phases of bank administration and economic problems in the field of money and credit. The public relations and responsibilities of banks and methods for meeting these obligations are emphasized in the courses.

It is planned to set up similar schools in cooperation with other universities in various parts of the country. The school will add 200 registrants each year for two years until 600 are enrolled.

The trustees of the Educational Foundation of the American Bankers Association have set aside funds from the foundation to grant 100 loan scholarships of $150 each to qualified applicants for attendance at the school.
