Miles Of Hot Dogs

Someone has estimated that the great American appetite requires about four and a half billion hot dogs a year, and someone else has figured that if strung end to end this number would reach to the moon. Both may be right, for all we know.

Anyway, it is certain that few viands have attained greater popularity than has been achieved by the hot dog, since its introduction about the year 1900. They have been known by many names, including frankfurters, red hots, half-smokes, barkies, wieners, wienies, Coney Islands, Vienna sausages, and gorias sobachi, the latter being the Russian designation.

The origination of the term hot dog is credited to the late T. A. Dorgan, who used it in a cartoon in 1907, and hot dog it has been to the American public ever since, undignified as the name sounds.

When properly prepared it contains about equal parts of fresh beef and pork, ground fine and highly spiced. Garnished with mustard, chili sauce, a bit of onion and sauerkraut—well, everybody knows what it tastes like, and everybody likes its taste.

Italy and Ethiopia

Immediate causes of the threat of war between Italy and Ethiopia are somewhat obscure, but they arise from treaty disputes and mutual jealousies of long standing. Ethiopia borders on two of Italy's African colonies, Eritrea and Somaliland, and Italy has sought for many years to establish a protectorate over Ethiopia.

An effort to establish such a protectorate was made as far back as 1889, but it was decisively defeated in 1896, when at the battle of Adowa an army of 12,000 Italians was annihilated by some 80,000 Ethiopians under King Menelek.

Ethiopia has an estimated population of about 10 million, while Italy has more than 44 million. The Italians would have a great advantage in numbers and in modern war equipment, but would have to fight the war on far distant soil, in a mountainous country from which it might be difficult to dislodge the native Ethiopians.

Even if successful, it seems doubtful that Italy would gain enough to offset the great losses in men and money which her victory would inevitably cost. Emperor Haile Selassie of Ethiopia has defied Mussolini, and declares his people will fight to the death to maintain their independence.

Efforts are being made by the League of Nations, and also by England and France, to avert war, but owing to the stubbornness of both Mussolini and Selassie the prospects for continued peace do not appear very bright. There is also grave danger that in case of war other nations might become involved, with another European conflict among the possibilities.

Volcanic Terrors

In the far away Malay Archipelago thousands of natives stand daily in dread of disaster, for the mighty volcano, Krakatao once staged the most stupendous eruption of recorded history.

It was in 1883 that this volcanic island, after two centuries of repose, blew up on August 26 with a roar that was heard 3,000 miles away. The nearby island of Rakata was half blown away, and great sea waves, 75 to 100 feet high, were sent rolling in all directions, affecting the tides practically around the world.

Seacoast towns throughout the archipelago were inundated by the tidal waves, and it is estimated that 40,000 persons perished. Ashes were thrown to such a height that they drifted all over the globe, causing weird sunset effects in all latitudes for months afterward.

Following this, Krakatao was quiet for 45 years, but since 1923 it has shown signs of activity at intervals. Whether the present eruption is the forerunner of another tremendous upheaval can not be foretold, but it is no wonder that the Malays are in terror.

While scientists have learned much about volcanoes in recent years, they are never certain of what one may do next. Vesuvius was thought to be extinct for many centuries before its first recorded eruption in the year 79, when it destroyed the towns of Pompeii, Herculaneum and Stabiae, with great loss of life. Many eruptions have occurred since, one in 1906 killing 2,000 persons and doing enormous property damage.

Still, people continue to live in the shadow of these death-dealing monsters, hoping for the best while fearing the worst.

A Servant Of Mankind

To have been the means of saving even one human life is a most worthy accomplishment. How splendid, then, to have been the discoverer of a method of saving the lives of countless thousands, not only of the past and present but of generations yet unborn.

Such was the service to mankind rendered by Sir Joseph Lister, famed English surgeon, the 100th anniversary of whose birth was celebrated at Westminster Abbey in London and was noticed by scientific men and the public in every civilized land.

Our own Public Health Service in a published statement called attention to Lister's service to humanity through his discovery of the efficiency of carbolic acid as an antiseptic in the treatment of wounds and in preventing infection after surgical operations. Before Lister's discovery hospital gangrene was common, and operations were frequently followed by erysipelas, blood poisoning or lockjaw. The highest surgical skill was set at naught by these accompanying causes of suffering and death. As a result of Lister's method it became possible to extend surgical treatment into fields formerly inaccessible, including abdominal, chest and brain surgery.

Another epoch-making contribution to surgery by Lister was the employment of "catgut" in sewing up breaks of human tissues, instead of silk. "Catgut" stitches are finally absorbed whereas the silk remained as a source of possible future irritation or of abscess formation.

In recognition of his eminent services, Lord Lister received many honors. He was president of leading British scientific societies, was created a baronet in 1883, raised to peerage in 1897, and was made an original member of the Order of Merit instituted in 1902. He died in 1912 at the age of 85.

A girl's idea of a perfect man is subject to frequent revision.

Mistaking a moonlit concrete highway in Indiana for a stream of water, a flock of wild ducks swooped down on it so hard that 18 of the birds were killed.

Egypt Was in Existence Before Recorded History

Egypt as a nation arose before the beginning of recorded history. Even at that early date its people were cultivators, builders, artisans, and priests, and not to be confused, because they were Africans, with the simple savages that still inhabit the jungles. This, says a writer in the Chicago Tribune, likewise holds true for a considerable proportion of the people of Ethiopia of the present day, who are on a higher plane than the witch-ridden folk of the interior.

The dawn of Egypt is shrouded in myths of fearful gods and goddesses, but the nation was an old one when King Sneferu built the pyramid of Medum, possibly as early as 4750 B. C. King Menes, founder of the first dynasty, was born many centuries after the establishment of kings and their kingdoms in the valley of the Nile. It is nearly 3,500 years since there reigned in Egypt the great King Thotmes III, who conquered Palestine and Syria, overthrew the Hittites, and placed his nation at the height of its power. Ramses II, who lived in the Thirteenth century before Christ and also subdued Palestine and Syria, is believed to have been the Pharaoh of Israel's oppression. And Moses led the children of Israel out of Egypt 500 to 650 years before the legendary founding of Rome by Romulus and Remus.

Alsation Wolf Dog Does Not Welcome Strangers

The Alsation Wolf dog, whose breeding is considered to approximate that of the Eskimo dog, has been subjected to much exaggerated criticism, writes an authority in Answer's Magazine.

Because he is a super-guard, he has been called savage; because he has no friendliness for strangers, he has been dubbed treacherous. Yet an unshakable sense of duty when on guard and a suspicion of strangers are surely the first duties of a dog in relation to his master.

If you desire an animal that will wag his tail at all comers, avoid the Alsation! But for intelligence, strength, vigilance, reliability in an allotted task, the wolf-gray dog is hard to beat.

Wolf-dog crosses occurred centuries ago; but it was not until 1887 that the systematic crossing of wolves and dogs resulted in a new breed of German sheepdog.

Lady Kitty Ritson, than whom there is no better authority, is definite that since that year there has been no new introduction of wolf blood into this breed, either here or abroad; and this view may be accepted as conclusive.

Apart from his strongly individualistic mentality, the Alsation's most striking characteristic is his long loping gait.

The James Boys

Following the death of Jesse James, who was shot by Bob Ford, a bandit, in 1882, for a reward of $50,000, Frank surrendered in Jefferson City, Mo. He was taken to Independence, where he was held three weeks, when he was taken to Gallatin, where he remained in jail a year awaiting trial. The trial was hard fought, and lasted several weeks, but ended in acquittal. He retired to his farm home where he lived quietly the remainder of his life. He died February 18, 1915. He was never in any penitentiary or convicted on any of the many charges against him. Their mother's name was Verelda Cole and their father's name was Robert. She was a Catholic and he was a Baptist minister.

Wild Ox of Europe

The aurochs, the wild ox of Europe, has been extinct since the Seventeenth century, its last point of survival being Poland. It was of great size, some specimens having stood six feet at the shoulder, and was black in color. On the extinction of this animal the name aurochs was in common parlance transferred to the European bison, which is almost extinct, but which survives in protected areas as does the American bison.

Arizona Cactus Plant

The Arizona cactus plant, which is known as the Saguaro, grows to a tremendous size. One specimen weighed over 1,000 pounds. There's a reason for the great weight achieved by these giant plants that is not evident from their external appearance. Inside the soft pulpy outer covering is a thick core of real wood.

Geese as "Watch Dogs"

In the West Indies, Chinese geese have been trained for use as watch animals. And once trained, these feathered watchmen are the most furious and tireless of squawkers. Indeed, the difficulty is to make them cease their warning rumpus after they have notified the neighborhood of some disturbance.

Only One "Ataturk" Allowed

There can be only one "Ataturk" in Turkey, and that is the Ghazi Mustapha Kemal. Thus reads the law passed by the Turkish parliament at Angora. All other persons are forbidden to use the name for it means "Father of the Turks" or "The Greatest Turk."

Handy About the Home

The most noted or rather notorious prisoner of the ancient world was a woman, Locusta by name, who lived in Rome during the middle of the First century. She was a professional prisoner.

Clapping Hands Is Part of Prayer With Japanese

There are no regular weekly services at Shinto shrines in Japan. Only a great festival once a year, commemorating an emperor's birthday, a heroic deed, boys' festival, girls' festival, rice planting festival, cherry blossom festival, and similar secular celebrations. Sacred and religious ceremonies are held in the Buddhist temples. It seems that Shintoism is for life in this world and Buddhism for the hereafter, observes a writer in the Chicago Tribune.

Before approaching the shrine the devotee washes his hands at a fountain provided for that purpose. There is no kneeling—simply close eyes, bow head, clap hands two or three times, concentrate two or three seconds on prayer. The handclapping is to indicate that one comes to the shrine unarmed and in a spirit of peace and good will; handclapping is not possible while clasping a weapon.

The long lines of school children at the Meiji shrine suggest the thought that every boy and girl in all Japan must be duty bound to visit this great group of memorial buildings.

In the spacious outer precincts of the Meiji shrine is the Jingu stadium, with seating capacity for 55,000 spectators, with the largest and finest arena in the Orient; a baseball diamond and grandstands to seat 50,000; a swimming pool in which 15,000 can disport themselves; a jujitsu or wrestling ring, and plenty of apparatus and paraphernalia for other games and contests. On alternate years the Japanese National Olympic games are held on these ample grounds.

Most Dangerous Farm Is One That Grows Microbes

Not far from the King's road, Chelsea, is one of the most dangerous farms in the world—a germ farm. It is known as the Lister Institute of Preventive Medicine, and the millions of germs in their respective test tubes are guarded more closely than the crown jewels, for if they escaped they would wipe out the entire population of London, asserts a writer in Tit-Bits Magazine.

The function of the institute is to breed germs with a view to studying them and defeating them during epidemics. They thrive well on certain foods: sugar of malt, and eggs in the form of a flip; potato salad; and a broth made with agar, a form of Japanese seaweed.

Every year the institute sends more than 5,000 germ cultures to scientists in every part of the world for experimental purposes. Every parcel is carefully packed and there is sufficient food for the germs during the whole voyage. Many human beings would envy the care and attention that is given these microbes, for unless their individual likes and dislikes are studied, they refuse to develop as they should.

Pont Du Gard

There is something ironical in the thought that the Pont du Gard which was built across the Rhone in the First century B. C. should have survived nearly 2,000 years of invasions, revolutions, floods, and other forms of violence, and that it should be threatened with destruction by the vibration of the traffic on a neighboring bridge. Nearly 300 yards long and 160 feet high, the Pont du Gard stands as one of the most splendid relics of the Roman occupation of France. The only damage which the aqueduct has undergone occurred in the Fifth century. The structure, as it stands, is almost exactly the same as it was a time when it was built.—Montreal Herald.

The Hymn "Rock of Ages"

The hymn "Rock of Ages," one of the most popular, was written by Augustus Montague Toplady, who was born in 1740 and died in 1778. It is said that he wrote it while sheltering from a storm under a great cleft rock near Cheddar, Somerset. The phrase itself, "Rock of Ages," is, however, much older, and is traced to a note on Isaiah 26:4, where the words "Everlasting strength" are stated to be, in the Hebrew, "Rock of Ages." Wesley used it in one of his hymns, and it also appears in Southey's poetry.—Answers Magazine.

Rothschild Loans

In the later Napoleonic campaigns, England gave large subsidies to many of her allies to offset the larger number of troops furnished by some other nations that had men but no money. Nathan Meyer Rothschild of London negotiated drafts made by the Duke of Wellington in his campaigns against Napoleon, which the English government was unable to meet, and also arranged for the subsidies to other nations, including Prussia, to be safely transferred and delivered.

Morgan's Raid

Gen. John H. Morgan's famous raid into Indiana and Ohio was not a matter of a day, but a campaign of six weeks. It started from Alexandria, Ky., on June 11, 1863, and ended with the capture of the commander and the last of the raiders seven miles south of Lisbon, Ohio, on July 26. Morgan was confined in the Ohio penitentiary at Columbus, from which he escaped on November 23.

Properly Stowed Bags Add to Comfort

Comfort, pleasure, and safety on a tour depend largely on efficient loading of the luggage, and modern body designs have done much to ease the problem, as these views of Chevrolet models reveal. In the upper left view, the suitcases have been fitted snugly, the adjustable front seat having been moved forward to allow extra leeway, and the driver is now pushing back the seat to clamp the bags in place for the day. Upper right, the tourist is utilizing the baggage space back of the rear seat. The two lower pictures show the loading of a coupe compartment and a sedan trunk.

American Bankers Association Describes Its Activities to Create Better Understanding Regarding Banks

NEW YORK.—Eight different lines of activity through which the American Bankers Association is constantly aiming to promote better public understanding and opinion in regard to banking and the attitude of bankers toward legislation are described in detail in a statement made public here by R. S. Hecht, president of the association.

The aim, he says, is "to strengthen the real basis for good opinion in regard to the banks," through fostering informative bank advertising in the newspapers and in other ways. The statement was issued in reply to suggestions received urging a nationwide public educational program in regard to "the business of banking and its place in the life of our country."

Mr. Hecht declares that "we have tried very hard to convince the public that the banking fraternity has truly profited by the lessons of the past, is determined to approach all questions of banking policy from the broad viewpoint of public welfare and is prepared to carry its full share of the burden in connection with all efforts to restore sound prosperity in this country."

The Means Employed

In describing the various measures of the association "to exert a beneficial influence on public opinion regarding the functions, methods and operations of banks," Mr. Hecht enumerated the following activities:

1. The Public Education Commission, which prepares plain language talks about banking for use of bankers and others before schools, civic clubs and over the radio.
2. The Constructive Customer Relations program, installed in many banks to help qualify bank employees to promote a better informed and more sympathetic attitude among their customers regarding banking.
3. The Publicity Department, supplying city and county daily and weekly newspapers with articles regarding banking and allied subjects and furnishing general press with news and information regarding the activities of the association.
4. The Advertising Department, supplying members of the association with a series of informative newspaper advertisements setting forth in brief, popular language the methods and various ways in which banks operate, their effective practices for protecting depositors' funds, the services they render and the various ways in which they cooperate with business in their own communities in fostering sound recovery and progress.
5. The Executive Officers and the Committee on Banking Studies, who are active, particularly at Washington, in consulting with Administration and Congressional leaders in formulating proposals for banking reform based on broad lines of public welfare.
6. The Agricultural Commission, promoting among bankers in the farm districts the practice of aiding their farm customers in installing on their farms better financial and operating methods.
7. The American Institute of Banking, having primarily to do with the technical education of the younger banker, but now directing these efforts toward also playing a part in improving public relations for banking as a whole, particularly through stressing the public responsibilities and the ethical aspects of practical banking.
8. The publication of "Banking," the official organ of the association, circulating among bankers, bank directors, business executives, economists, law firms, government departments, libraries, colleges, public schools and other publications, presenting articles regarding banking and banking viewpoints.

The Objective Sought

In commenting on the foregoing program, Mr. Hecht says that it is not "the primary objective to attract attention particularly to the American Bankers Association as such, but rather to focus attention on and give impetus to those ideas which it believes are beneficial in promoting understanding and solidarity among banking, business and the public." He adds:

"Our program for the development of satisfactory public relations for banking does not consist merely of newspaper publicity. It is calculated to produce a continuous and cumulative effect by varied efforts which are aimed to work day in and day out to strengthen the real basis for good opinion in regard to the banks.

"To have favorable things said about the banking business in the newspapers and over the radio is, the association recognizes, very helpful toward creating a sound public opinion regarding banking. But the association believes that the most important thing ultimately is to foster throughout the banking profession the doing sincerely of those things that reflect favorably the sound, helpful practices of the business of banking, and that then the true news of its constructive activities will constitute the best answers to misrepresentations aimed at banks and bankers."

Predicts Farm Loan Expansion

NEW BRUNSWICK, N. J. — With marked improvement in agriculture already apparent, and further improvement confidently expected, a greatly expanded volume of farm credit will be required, especially short-term credit, according to a statement here recently by W. I. Myers, Governor of the Farm Credit Administration, Washington, D. C. He was speaking before the Graduate School of Banking, conducted jointly by the American Institute of Banking Section of the American Bankers Association and Rutgers University.

"Some people have expressed a fear that the Cooperative Production Credit Associations are threatening the business of country banks, but these institutions have neither the desire nor the resources to monopolize a field which is still in the infancy of development," Governor Myers said. "Farmers who get their credit on time or by charge accounts have a basis for cash loans and should be buying their credit from a bank, production credit association or other institutions that sell credit on a business basis."
