Sidney Votes $41,000 for Gravel Roads

Sidney, Aug. 10.—The "farm to market" road program gained impetus here today, when citizens of Sidney Township decisively voted in favor of a $41,000 bond issue for road purposes. The bond issue proposal for the graveling of all the unimproved roads of the township, under a WPA project, if and when approved. Of the 221 votes cast, 191 were "for," 29 "against" and one was thrown out for being marked wrong. Officials plan to obtain a white rock gravel from the Fairmount bank, for the surfacing material, when the program gets underway. — News-Gazette.

Mrs. Lillie Bowman Hostess to Y. W. O's.

Mrs. Lillie Bowman entertained the Y. W. O. Class of the U. B. Sunday School at her home Wednesday evening. T. W. Bergfield was elected treasurer of the class, and the other officers were reelected. The hostess served refreshments of ice cream and cake. Guests present were: Frances Martinie, Mrs. Flora Bailey, Mrs. Mary Rayl, and the members of the Indiana Central College Quartette. Members present were Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Bergfield, Mr. and Mrs. John Nohren, Howard Clem and family, Clark Henson and family, Rev. and Mrs. J. F. Turner, Oscar Witt and family, Mrs. P. O. Rayl, Mr. and Mrs. Archie Campbell, Miss Dorothy Turner and Mrs. Lillie Bowman.

Broadlands and Newman Teams Have Combined

The Broadlands and Newman baseball clubs have combined for the remainder of the season, and will play alternate games at the two places.

The first battle under the new arrangement will be played at Newman this Sunday, August 18, their opponents being the strong Westville aggregation.

Then on Sunday, August 25, the game will be played at Broadlands, Hart's Oilers of Cham-paign being their opponents.

This new arrangement is only an experiment, but it is thought the plan will work out to the advantage of Broadlands and Newman, giving both a strong club.

Speed Takes More Gas

We heard of a motorist who, when he suddenly discovered his gasoline was very low, speeded up so as to get to the next filling station before the gas gave out. Of course, he should have known that to get the most mileage out of a given amount of gas one must not drive faster than about 20 miles an hour.

Many tests have been made to determine the rate of gasoline consumption at various speeds, and these tests have invariably shown that the faster one drives the greater the consumption per mile. A typical illustration is given by the Bureau of Standards, taking a car that gets 18.9 miles per gallon at a speed of 20 miles per hour.

At 30 miles an hour the same car will get 18 miles per gallon.

At 40 miles an hour it will get 16.4 miles per gallon.

At 50 miles an hour it will get 14.9 miles per gallon.

At 60 miles an hour it will get 12.6 miles per gallon.

At 70 miles an hour it will get 10.6 miles per gallon.

At 80 miles an hour it will get 8.6 miles per gallon.

It is shown also that the consumption of oil at 60 miles an hour is six times as great as it is at 30 miles an hour.

Excessive speed places a great strain on an automobile and shortens its life, as the engine, tires and steering mechanism are all subject to unusual wear and tear. Not only as a matter of safety, but as a measure of economy as well, driving at moderate speeds is recommended to all motorists.

Couple Die 2 Weeks Apart; Court to Rule on Estate

Lawrence and Virginia Rudicil, prominent residents of Sidney, recently died about two weeks apart, and left no children. Both had wills, Mr. Rudicil leaving all of his property to her and Mrs. Rudicil leaving all of her property to her husband. Petitions to admit the wills to probate have been filed.

The couple left a farm in Sidney Township, a home in the village of Sidney and personal property. As Mr. Rudicil died first, Mrs. Rudicil was practically in possession of all the property at his death, and her blood relation will have the property divided between them. — News-Gazette.

John, Scott, 74, Is Killed When Train Hits Car

John Scott, 74, residing one mile south of Georgetown, former resident of Broadlands, was killed instantly Monday morning when the car in which he was riding was struck by a south-bound Big Four freight train, near Georgetown. Charles Gilkerson, driver of the car, received only minor injuries.

Both men were riding in the front seat, and Scott was thrown through the top of the car, suffering a fractured skull and other injuries.

Funeral services were held at 1:30 o'clock on Wednesday afternoon in Georgetown, and interment was made in the St. John's cemetery, northwest of Broadlands.

Mr. Scott leaves his widow, one daughter, Mrs. Ralph Sanders, and an adopted son, Wayne at home.

William Messman Celebrates Birthday

A number of friends gathered at the home of Wm. Messman on last Friday evening to celebrate his birthday. Ice cream and cake were served.

Those present were John Nohren and family, Ed Nohren and family, Louis Stuebe and family, Mrs. John Rayl, Mrs. Lillie Bowman, Miss Phyllis Bergfield, Mrs. Flora Bailey, Wm. Messman and daughter Miss Wilma.

Phi Beta Deltas Meet At Schumacher Home

The Phi Beta Delta Class of the St. John's Evangelical Sunday School held their August meeting at the Emil Schumacher home on Tuesday evening.

Oscar Limp resigned as secretary of the class and the office was turned over to Bill Zenke who had been his assistant. Following the devotional and business periods of the meeting, the evening was spent in fun and fellowship and ice cream and cake were served as refreshments.

Thieves Steal His Gas And Bite His Thumb

Simon Bostick caught a thief draining gas from his truck while the free movie show was in progress at Broadlands last Saturday night. Simon flew into the thief with all the fight he had and the thief's pal flew into Simon. It was two against one and seemingly Simon got the worst of the fight. One of the thieves chewed on Simon's thumb during the melee and it became necessary for him to go to the doctor's office and have the member dressed. Simon states that he will probably use his large "hoss" pistol if he ever has to fight gas thieves again.

The Public Forgot

For business men who appear to think the public does not need to be constantly reminded of whom they are, where they are, and what they have to sell, the well known story of what happened to a product called Pyle's Pearline will bear repeating.

In the early years of this century, Pearline, a cleaning material, was used by most housewives of the country. In 1904 the company spent $500,000 in advertising. Then the advertising was greatly curtailed and about 1907 it was discontinued altogether, as the company thought the product was so well known that no further advertising was necessary. Sales fell off rapidly, but the company's owners persisted in their non-advertising policy until 1915, when the whole concern was sold for $12,000. Pearline was dead. Many other products whose names were household words a few years ago are no longer sold, because the manufacturers failed to keep up their advertising, and consequently the public forgot them.

Business men should remember that new generations of potential customers are coming along all the time, and that these new buyers must be sold on a product or a store, as their fathers and mothers were before them.

The only time it is safe to stop advertising is when one is ready to go out of business.

New Army Air Depots

Blanket authority for the construction of air depots throughout the nation and its possessions is granted the Army in a bill recently passed by Congress, although it is recommended that definite areas be considered for the location of these new adjuncts to the national defense, as follows:

Atlantic Northeast—To provide for training in cold weather and in fog.

Atlantic Southeast and Caribbean Areas—To permit training in long-range operations, especially those incident to reinforcing the Panama Canal.

Southeastern States—To provide a depot essential to the maintenance of the general headquarters air force.

Pacific Northwest—To establish and maintain air communication with Alaska.

Alaska—For training under conditions of extreme cold.

Rocky Mountain Area—To provide a depot essential to the maintenance of the general headquarters air force, and to afford opportunity for training in operations from fields in high altitudes.

While no appropriation is provided, it is expected that the 110 million dollars or more required will be provided by an allotment from the work relief billions.

In view of the doubtful value of many projects being undertaken with work relief funds, it seems that an even greater amount might well be devoted to establishments of this kind, which would be in the nature of permanent contributions to the national defense.

New Hand Signaling

Hand signals by automobile drivers are required under the new uniform act regulating traffic on the highways in Illinois. According to this act, no person shall turn a vehicle, stop or suddenly decrease its speed without first having given adequate warning to motorists in the rear, or approaching from the opposite direction, or to pedestrians.

The new signaling requirements are the same as those in many states, the left turn being indicated by an arm extended horizontally from the car window; a right turn, by the arm extended upward, or by a beckoning motion, sweeping the arm from the rear to the front, while the intention to stop or slow down is indicated by an arm extended downward.

These signaling requirements will do away with the uncertainty caused when the car ahead of you swings to the left, perhaps to make an easier right turn, or to turn left, although the outcome cannot be predicted until the maneuver is completed.

Failing to signal, or improper signaling, was the principal cause of 220 traffic deaths and 33,420 injuries in the United States in 1934.

APPLE PIE, apricot pie, berry pies, chocolate pie, cherry pie, lemon pie, peach pie, pumpkin pie, rhubarb pie! Oh, isn't there a new pie particularly appropriate for the summer months which will vary from all these good old standbys? Yes, there is. Pineapple pie.

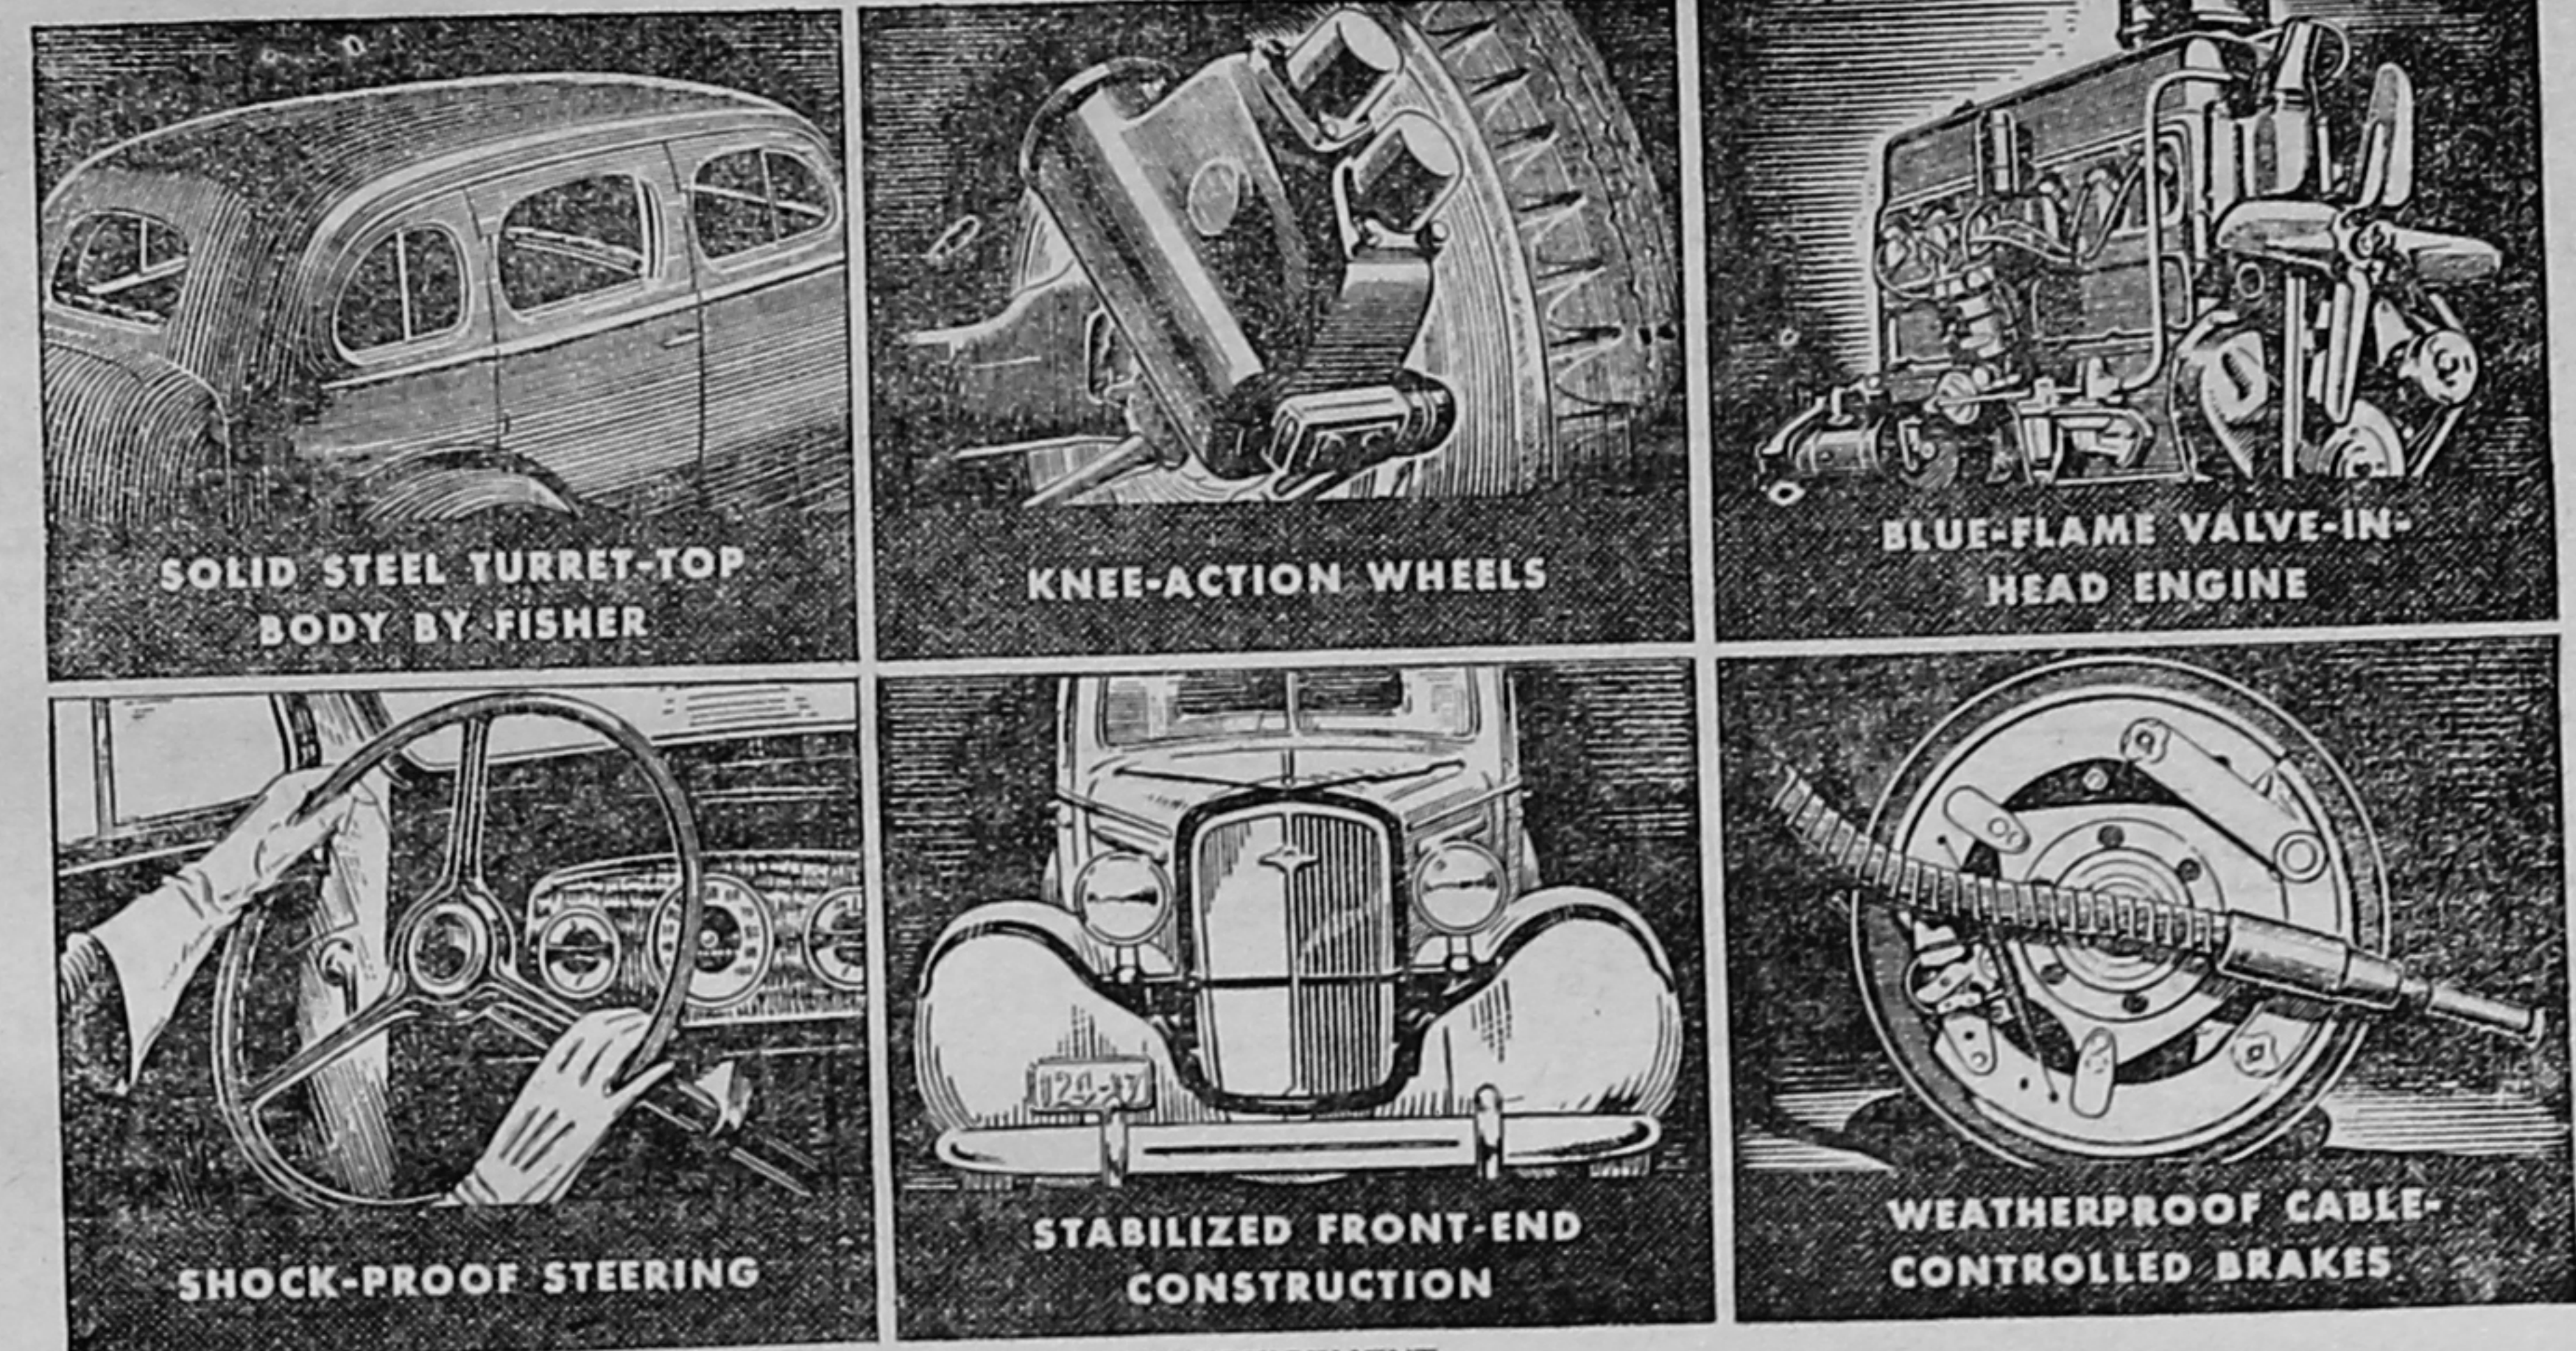

Pineapple grows in a land where it is perpetual summer and looms large in the tropical diet which is eaten there. No need to tell you that it's delicious, but what we can tell you is the way to make a fine pineapple pie. So, here goes:

With Another Tropical Fruit

Pineapple Banana Meringue Pie: Mix one-half cup sugar and one-fourth cup cornstarch, add syrup pressed from the contents of a No. 2 can crushed Hawaiian pineapple, and cook until clear and thick, stirring constantly. Add one tablespoon butter. Then add two slightly beaten egg yolks, cook again in double boiler until thick, and cool. Add the drained pineapple and two-thirds cup banana pulp, and pour into baked pie shell. Cover with meringue made by beating two egg whites and then beating in one-third cup confectioner's sugar. Bake in oven—300 degrees—until a golden brown, about fifteen minutes. Makes one large pie.*

CONTROL OF CREDIT
A BASIC QUESTION

Economist Describes Conflict Between Opposing Social View-points on Government Bank.

Agitation for government banking is a phase of the conflict between our present "personal competitive enterprise system" in America and the "compulsory state collective security system" of several European States, Virgil Jordan, President National Industrial Conference Board, says in an article in a recent issue of "Banking" published by the American Bankers Association.

"They involve irreconcilable principles of human conduct and philosophy of life and the conflict between them is the key to the economic, social and political struggles of today," Mr. Jordan says.

The enterprise system of which "the development of the United States has been the unparalleled example, depends for its motive power of progress upon the inexhaustible reservoir of energy in individual desire for personal advancement in prosperity, but it guarantees nothing to the individual save freedom of opportunity," the article says in part.

The collectivist security system, he says, "places all emphasis upon the maintenance of a minimum standard of living for the mass without regard to the creative power of the individual, quite simply the security system involves the modern form of the philosophy of the slave society." He continues:

A Sign of the Times

"The many-sided movement toward governmental banking, deposit insurance and currency management is the most direct and decisive expression of the universal instinctive search for security which is the sign of the times. In America our so-called social security legislation is an important indication of the drift away from the enterprise system toward a collectivist security system with concentration of authority in a central Federal government.

"The nationalization of credit is crucial and indispensable for complete state control of the complex industrial and business structure of this country. The drive toward government banking and monetary control is most determined because the relation of the state to credit goes to the root of the enterprise system. A collective security system is inconceivable without nationalization of credit. An enterprise system is inconceivable with it."

Under a collective security system, based on government banking the controls "lie solely in the hands of a few persons and depend upon their judgment, will or caprice," Mr. Jordan says, adding that it is they who must determine "upon the basis of some predetermined plan or upon pure political expediency of the moment, what lines of industry and even what individual enterprises shall have access to the credit reservoir." The state, he says, has the power of life and death over all enterprise that utilizes credit.

"Every government is an organ of party power and must respond to the will of the party that put it in power," the Jordan article says. "Under unchecked government operation it is an inescapable tendency of every currency to depreciate and for credit to expand. However much it may be in the interest of the nation, deflation is too dangerous politically for any government to undertake it deliberately.

"In the end government banking and currency management resolve themselves simply into the use of credit as a political instrument of power, and this instrument tends to be used in the long run for expropriation of the savings of the community."

THE FARM BUDGET

By DAN H. OTIS, Agricultural Director, American Bankers Association

Inventories aid in the formation of a farm budget. Some banks, as well as the Farm Credit Administration, recommend outlining in advance the method of using production loans. Under this plan provision is made for monthly expenditures and funds are granted to the borrower in accordance with the budget plan. The budget helps to show how loans can be repaid.

With the accumulated data from previous inventories and budgets, budget making becomes easier and more accurate and valuable. As one branch of the farming plant requires more expenditure, such as for new machinery, fencing, livestock, etc., it may be necessary to limit other branches in order to meet these pressing requirements.

The budget helps to formulate a financial program. It is of special importance in arranging to meet special or large expenditures. If the income and expenditures are carefully budgeted it prevents the spending of money needed for interest and taxes before the time of their payment arrives. It helps to provide a reserve.

The Agricultural Commission of the American Bankers Association feels that this type of work is so important that special emphasis has been placed upon the field of farm inventories, budgets and credit statements as one of its national projects for farm aid.

D. H. OTIS

Two Islands Remnant of French Colonial Empire

The French colony of St. Pierre and Miquelon consists of two islands lying ten miles off the southern coast of Newfoundland. Together they have an area of less than 100 square miles and are the sole remnant of the great French colonial empire in North America, notes a correspondent in the Chicago Tribune.

At the beginning of the Eighteenth century France was in control of North America, except for the English colonies along the Atlantic seaboard, and the Spanish settlements in Florida and in the region reaching south and west from Texas. When the French attempted to build a line of forts from Presqu'Isle, now Erie, Pa., to the navigable waters of the Ohio river in Pennsylvania, the English moved against them and started what is known in American history as the French and Indian war. The treaty which settled this disturbance stripped France of its American possessions, leaving it the islands of St. Pierre and Miquelon as a fishing station. At that time there were three islands, Great Miquelon, Little Miquelon or Langlade and St. Pierre, but since 1783 the Miquelons have been connected by a mud bank.

England has taken the islands three times since the end of the French and Indian war, but France has been in undisputed possession since 1814. Their usefulness as a fishing station has gradually diminished, but at one time they were in a fair way to become the world's greatest smuggling station. This was checked to a great extent when the British government placed a consular agent on the islands.

Sees No Fish Shortage; Ample Supply for World

Fish as a substitute for meat has seven outstanding advantages, the Fish and Sea Food Institute points out as a food hint, and leads off with the statement that there are 162 available varieties. The other points are:

No other class of food has so many varieties; there will probably never be a sea drought to make fish scarce; adequate iodine gets into the diet of fish eaters; fish is a source of vitamin D, the dietary factor that prevents and cures rickets; fish is rich in calcium, necessary for bone and teeth health; of all flesh foods it is the most delicate and the easiest to digest; though an epicurean food, it is usually cheap enough for the purses of the poor.

This country, Great Britain and Japan are the greatest fish markets in the world. The United States produces about one billion pounds a year and the Department of Agriculture anticipates an increase of per capita, because drouths with the resulting grain and pasture shortages increase the price of meats.

Celestial Visitors

There is really nothing extraordinary about a daylight meteor, except that it must be unusually large and close to the surface of the earth to demonstrate itself against the sun-illuminated atmosphere. These "celestial visitors," as they have been called, are coursing through space constantly, more of them at certain seasons, but some of them all the time. It is only when they come within the air envelope of the earth that they manifest themselves, through being heated to incandescence in their passage. Some are entirely consumed by the heat thus engendered, while others, partly consumed, fall to the surface and explode and in rare instances large fragments of them are found. Some great masses of meteoric material have reached the earth.

Stomach Gas Exploded

In an English medical journal, the Lancet, Dr. T. East reports the case of a man who complained of a stomach ache after supper, but took his wife to a movie just the same. In the wait between shows the man took out a cigarette and scratched a match, but when he applied the light to the end of the cigarette there was an explosion which blew the cigarette across several rows of seats, singed the man's mustache and burned his fingers. Doctor East explains this mishap was caused by the gas from the victim's stomach mingling with air taken in by breathing in just the right proportions to make it inflammable. He literally ignited his breath, causing the explosion.—Wall Street Journal.

Receivers Paid Postage

In the days before postage stamps, when letters were paid for by the receiver and postage amounted to 25 cents and more, poor people resorted to all kinds of schemes to get their mail and still avoid paying the post, a favorite method being to send a letter with but a blank piece of paper inside which the receiver refused but which by a prearranged plan was notice of "all is well," "yes," or the like.

Peanut a Legume

The peanut is a first cousin to peas and beans, being leguminous. It has a peculiar habit of blooming above the ground then burying the seed pods in the ground. The peanut is very nutritious, offering fat, protein, and such minerals as phosphorus and iron together with vitamin B.

Found in Blue Ridge

In the Blue Ridge mountains, and nowhere else, are found weird natural crosses of stone. According to local legend, angels cried at the time of the crucifixion and their tears crystallized in this form of stone.

"HIS MAJESTY, YOUR DOG"

A DOG-OWNER in one of our large cities recently received an elaborately engraved document the front page of which read:

The CANINE CATERING COMPANY request the pleasure of serving HIS MAJESTY, YOUR DOG and invite you to investigate their unique service R.S.V.P.

Above this formal invitation appeared a doggy crest, and on the inside pages the science, economy and convenience of this service were extolled. One page was devoted to "table d'hotel" menus. The first, entitled "Veterinary Meal," was called "a ration scientifically balanced" and included

- Fresh Lean Beef, U. S. Inspected Raw or Cooked—Cubed or Ground
- Vegetable Vitamine Juices in Beef Broth
- Shredded Cabbage, Lettuce or Beet Tops—Optional
- Special Zwiebach or Shredded Wheat
- In Separate Cup—Optional

The second, entitled a "Kennel Meal (Raw)," was heralded as "a ration successfully used in many famous kennels," and included

- Fresh Lean Beef, U. S. Inspected Cabbage or Beet Tops
- Shredded Wheat in separate container

This page concluded with the assurance that "a special diet for invalid or growing dogs will be prepared according to the advice of your veterinarian."

No Surprise

The dog owner was not surprised at this elaborate document because he had seen a recent survey of sales in 102 principal cities which showed an approximate annual sales volume of $48,000,000, and he knew that the total annual retail sales of prepared dog foods are approximately $60,000,000! Moreover, it has been estimated that there are now about twelve million dogs in this country. So, what could be more logical than for someone to start this "canine catering company" to furnish food to "His Majesty, Your Dog"? One canning firm alone processes enough prepared dog food to feed half a million dogs a day.

Doggone Good Dinners

Prize dogs nowadays are not only fed whole wheat bread, pink salmon, spinach and evaporated milk from cans in order to nourish them properly and insure glossy coats by means of and insure glossy contents of these foods, but a whole line of distinctive dog foods is especially canned for them.

There are more than two hundred brands of these. The best of dog foods are now scientifically blended, cooked and canned so that they will keep in perfect condition and be ready for your dog at a moment's notice. And you can be sure that he won't growl about them, even if he's an epicure—we mean, of course, epicure.

There are canned foods for big dogs like Newfoundlands, St. Bernards and Great Danes, and lesser quantities of these are recommended for medium sized dogs such as English setters, Police dogs, Collies and Shepherd dogs; for little chaps such as Chows, Airedales, Spaniels and Terriers, and even for the smallest herds such as Chihuahuas and Pekingese.

Now a National Association

The result of all this is that a National Dog Food Manufacturers' Association has been formed, including leading manufacturers in its membership, and maintains offices at 608 Fifth Avenue, New York. The officers of this Association are H. C. Clayburg, California Animal Products Co., president; Carl J. Rich, Rich Products Corporation, first vice president; Stewart Rose, Simpson Products Company, second vice president; and Sidney Davidson, Foster Canning Company, secretary and treasurer. Its Board of Directors, in addition to the officers, includes Lawrence I. Becker of the Atlas Canning Co., F. J. McDermott, Frank O'Connell, E. E. Schlessler of Schlessler Brothers, Inc., and Walter Mowll of the Old Trusty Dog Food Company.

Lawrence I. Becker is trade secretary of the Association and states as its objects the promotion and betterment of the industry.

CONFETTI streamers wound their way across a hundred shoulders; but there was no confetti on the man in gray. He paced along the deck, surveying those who crowded at the rail.

A pair of deep blasts from the liner's whistle, and there came the singing: "All ashore! Last call!" Late arrivals scrambled up the gangplank, visitors trotted down. Upon it all the man in gray bent a constant and still roving and somewhat furtive eye.

Ten minutes later the great ship was prow about and steaming down San Pedro channel. Slowly the man in gray ascended to the boat deck, lit a cigarette and strolled toward the stern.

He sauntered around the end of a life boat and almost stumbled over her. Down against the rail she sat, a huddled, hatless figure in a tan sports coat. She looked up with parted lips and startled eyes. The man in gray stepped quickly back.

"Sorry," he said; "I must have been star-gazing or something, I guess."

"Oh, it's—all right. I don't blame you for not expecting to find anyone here."

"Have a smoke?" he suggested, proffering the pack.

"Thanks." She plucked one and held it to his lighted match. Then suddenly she grasped his arm and said:

"Please—I've got to tell you something—I can't keep on like this. Maybe just talking about it will help."

As he gazed at her quizzically, she pulled him further into shadows.

"Let's stand back here," she begged. "I want to explain about—about myself before somebody finds us—me, I mean."

"I haven't any right to be on board; I didn't buy a ticket. I suppose they'll call me a stowaway. But I can't help it; there was nothing else to do—after I'd been foolish enough to run away in the first place. I—"

She checked herself and shrugged and half turned her back to him, amending: "But of course that doesn't make sense. If I'm going to tell it, I might as well start at the beginning."

She leaned on the rail, staring down at the dark swells that slapped the liner's flank. The man in gray was casually attentive.

"I won a popularity contest back home and came to Hollywood to become a famous actress and—oh, you know the rest. This morning I'd been out here just four weeks and I found I had five hundred dollars and a wrist watch left—and the watch wouldn't run."

"That's why I was in the store—to have it fixed. The man wrote down my name and address and went into the back room for a minute. There were some diamond rings out on the counter, in one of those velvet trays with slots in it. About half of them were empty, and all of a sudden I began thinking how easy it would be to grab one or two rings."

"Well, right then it happened. I guess that's the reason I acted like such a fool—because I'd just had the idea of stealing, I mean. Anyway, the first thing I knew someone brushed past me and snatched up that pad of rings and dashed out again. I tried to scream and couldn't. Then I felt simply terrified, and I—I ran out, too."

No longer was the man at her side preoccupied.

"You!" he gasped, wide eyes upon her; "you—"

"Yes, I know," she hurried on; "there was nothing sensible about it. But somehow I felt guilty and terribly afraid, and so I ran. And then I didn't dare go back; I was sure they'd think I was an accomplice. I rushed across the street and jumped into a taxi and told the driver to get away from there as fast as he could."

"When we'd gone two blocks I asked him how far a five-dollar ride would be. He grinned and named over a lot of places; San Pedro was one of them, and I said to take me there. I decided to try to sneak on board the first ship that was sailing soon and—here I am. It isn't—"

The clasp of firm hands on her shoulders cut that sentence short. He spun her around to face him, demanding:

"Would you know the man who did that job if you saw him again?"

"Why, I—I'm not sure," she stammered; "all I noticed was that he wore a felt hat and a light suit, and he was about your height. I think he had a mustache, too."

The rhythmic sputtering of an engine sounded from below. They looked down and saw a launch coming out from shore.

"The boat for the pilot!" exclaimed the man in gray. "We're at the break-water already."

"Police!" cried the girl, and fled across the deck.

"Just get over there and keep out of sight!" the man called after her. Then he turned and ran toward the stairs that led down.

Officer Donahy swung aboard and touched his visor.

"Hello, captain," he said; "what luck?"

"Good," the man in gray replied tersely; "but that taxi driver's half-baked tip about a dame was screwy. You can go back to town and pinch 'Nimble' Barlow—thank God! Miss him up so he won't look like my double any more. That guy's been big grief to me for years. Now beat it; I'm staying on board to follow up a—uh—well, a new angle."

Quick Drinks

for Juicy Health

HEALTH insurance comes in fruits. They not only taste good and stimulate the appetite, but they are dietetically important as sources of mineral elements and vitamins. The modern generation wants to do things quick. They're all very busy at what interests them, and they want to drink down their health at one gulp.

Fortunately for them there is a way in which they can imbibe health from fruits, if not in one gulp, at least in a series of rapid sips. That is by drinking fruit juices. And another fortunate circumstance is that they don't even have to spend the time to squeeze the fruits because the best of grapefruit juice, pineapple juice and prune juice comes, already squeezed, in cans.

Summer Drinks

Prunade: Boil one-third cup sugar and two cups water together five minutes; then cool. Add the juice of eight limes, one cup canned pineapple syrup, one cup canned prune juice and three cups cold water. Serve very cold in punch glasses. This recipe makes from twelve to fifteen punch glasses which will disappear as if by magic.

And here's another summer drink which doesn't take any longer to prepare and deserves its name

Citric Delight: Boil three-fourths cup sugar and one cup water five minutes; then cool. Add the contents of an 11-ounce can grapefruit juice, one cup orange juice, one-fourth cup lemon juice and four cups cold water (charged, if desired). Serve very cold. This makes fifteen punch glasses.*
