The New Tokens

The new tokens for the Sales Tax are now out and are being distributed. They are made of aluminum and are square in shape with round corners. The first distribution is being made in the larger cities of the State but they will be in circulation in all parts of the state within a short time. They are of one and one-half mill denomination. Some of the merchants of the state have elected not to use the tokens but will collect the tax on a sliding scale. The state is not deeply interested in how the tax is collected—its only interest being in the collection of the tax. Considerable trouble has been caused by the Federal government failing to approve the first tokens which were issued. It is now thought that the new tokens will soon be in universal use.

Jas. G. Alexander Buys Sconce Land and Home

The transaction completed several weeks ago whereby James G. Alexander of Lake Forrest, purchased the beautiful country home near Sidell, of Harvey Sconce, and about 600 acres of the Sconce land has but recently become generally known. The land is considered as among the most productive in the state and the home is widely known for its beauty. Mr. and Mrs. Alexander, the latter the former Miss Winifred Jones and a local resident, make frequent visits here, but had not mentioned their latest land acquisition which is in addition to other large tracts in other parts of the state.—Tuscola Review.

The Emil Schumacher residence was the scene of the September meeting of the Ladies' Aid Society of St. John's Evangelical Church, on the afternoon of the 5th. The opening devotions were led by Mrs. Clarence Kilian. Among the items of business which were considered at the meeting were the following: (1) The society will try to get more members of the congregation to subscribe to The Evangelical Herald, the denomination's weekly publication. (2) The officers and as many other members of the society as possible will travel to Freeport on the 25th of this month to attend the North Illinois District Women's Union Conference. (3) The society will hire some one to give the church its regular fall cleaning. Each member is to donate fifty cents for this purpose and donations of the same amount from other members of the congregation will be gratefully received.

At the close of the meeting a delicious lunch was served by the hostess.

Chevrolet August Sales Set All Time Record

Detroit, Mich., Sept. 7—Chevrolet delivered to retail consumers 99,018 new cars and trucks in August, eclipsing its July sales by 24,979 units and setting an all-time August record, it was announced here today by W. E. Holler, vice president and general sales manager of the Chevrolet Motor Co.

August sales were 33,623 greater than in the same month last year, an increase of over 51 per cent, and exceeded every other August in the history of the company including August 1928. This August's sales exceeded the 1928 record by 4,100 units, Mr. Holler said.

Commenting on the heavy volume registered in a month which normally sees a slackening of automobile business, Mr. Holler cited the Chevrolet sales record as added evidence of improved business. "The fact that our volume increased so sharply over its total for July—itself an excellent month—shows unmistakably that the country's buying power is increasing, and that there is not only the ability but also a universal willingness on the part of the public to buy."

Return From Trip

Milo Berbaum, Raymond Frick, John Magers and Ernst Mohr returned from a trip through the southwest last Sunday evening. They visited Will Rogers home town, and the Grand Canyon at Arizona National Park, then on to California through the sand desert, and through the gold, silver and copper mining district in southern Arizona. They also drove to Old Mexico and returned through Texas and Arkansas. This was a 4500 mile trip which they made in eight days.

One Happy Reunion Old No. 9 School

Dr. and Mrs. T. A. Dicks and R. M. Hood attended a reunion of the Old No. 9 School, once located 1½ miles south of Sidney, where Mr. Hood was the teacher for four years.

It was the 30th annual meeting of the No. 9 School Girls and Mr. Hood was the guest of honor, it being the first time he had the opportunity to attend. The meeting was at the home of Mrs. Etta Lynch McCormick, 603 Washington Blvd., Urbana, Saturday.

The following program was carried out: Grace was said by Mrs. Janette Thompson Dunn, followed by prayer by R. M. Hood. After the dinner, roll was called and each No. 9 School Girl responded with some happy reminiscence of the old school days of forty years ago. Then Mr. Hood was asked for a speech to which he responded in a talk to the Old School more particularly. Before beginning his remarks Mr. Hood asked the No. 9 School to stand with him for a moment in memory of those departed from this life, those who had known them best, when life was young and youth was in its morning. He called the name of each one gone.

Mr. Hood's text was "Yesterday, Today and Tomorrow," and his theme was "Love." He pictured a dream of yester years when he sat in a sod shanty on plains, and gazed in fire, and as he thought of each one, no guilt could he trace in their honest faces as they pondered their lessons. That while he taught them the wisdom of knowledge, they taught him the goodness of God. He pictured the scenes at the old school where they played "frog in the 'medder,'" "ring around the rosey" and, "the last one squat is a 'nigger' baby." Then the bell rang.

But the memory of yesterday is not all laughter and thrill, but has a disappointment not easy to explain. How strange to still live on with so much of life and love gone. He compared yesterday to a seashell, an old cabin gone to ruin, a vacant chair, mother's picture, and the old school house so silent and still. Then he spoke of today, filled with faith, hope and love, and closed his remarks with his blessing.

Next, Dr. Dicks was called on to give the closing remarks. This he did in a pleasing and very appropriate manner. He said in part, that he understood as he never did before, from the talks he heard, just what all these meetings for 30 years was about. That it reminded him of the old darkey who said "I stole chicken, I have lied, I have cut them up with the razor, I've cussed and swore, but thank the Lord I've never lost my religion." Meaning that No. 9 School and teacher have kept the faith and love for each other.

Then goodbye was said as each expressed appreciation for the sumptuous dinner and general good time, and hoping for many returns of the glad day of reunion of No. 9.

When Oil Gives Out

For several years the great problem of the oil industry has been to keep down production resulting from the discovery of rich new fields, especially in Texas. Even with all the efforts made through legislation and voluntary agreements to stem the flood of oil being taken from the earth, a large surplus has been constantly on hand.

This condition may not long exist, however, according to estimates by Dr. L. C. Snider, an eminent geologist, and Dr. B. T. Brooks, a consulting chemical engineer, who believe a shortage may be expected in eight years or less.

They place the probable oil reserves of the United States at between 10 and 12 billion barrels or between 10 and 14 years' supply at the present rate of consumption. A report to this effect was made to the American Chemical Society at its recent meeting in San Francisco, when it was urged that chemists redouble their efforts to produce substitutes for natural crude oil and its products.

Similar warnings have been heard frequently in the past, but so far it has always happened that when one oil field played out other and larger ones were discovered. It is known, of course, that the supply of oil remaining under ground is limited, but whether the limit suggested by Messrs. Snider and Brooks is anywhere near correct is open to question.

Substitute fuels from oil-shale, hydrogenated coal fuel, and alcohol fuel can be produced at present, but their cost precludes their general use so long as crude oil is plentiful. The challenge to chemistry is to be prepared to make cheaper substitutes available if and when a shortage of petroleum occurs.

The War Lord's Prayer

Amid the tenseness which exists over the seemingly inevitable war between Italy and Ethiopia, and the fear which grips Europe over the possibility of another world conflict, an almost forgotten piece by Mark Twain is being republished.

Mark Twain was a delightful humorist, but there is no humor in this bitter piece of writing, called the "War Lord's Prayer," which follows:

"Help us to tear their soldiers to bloody shreds with our shells; help us to cover their smiling fields with the pale forms of their patriot dead; help us to drown the thunder of the guns with the wounded, writhing in pain; help us to lay waste their humble homes with a hurricane of fire; help us to wring the hearts of their unoffending widows with unavailing grief; help us to turn them out roofless with their little children to wander unfriended through wastes of their desolated land in rags and hunger and thirst, sport of the sun flames of summer and the icy winds of winter, broken in spirit, worn with travail, imploring for the refuge of the grave and denied it, blast their hopes, blight their lives, protract their bitter pilgrimage, make heavy their steps, water their way with their tears, stain the white snow with the blood of their wounded feet!"

Sidelights

A Masonic clip-sheet gives the information that the late Will Rogers became a Mason in 1906 in Claremore Lodge No. 53, in Claremore, Okla.; received the 32nd degree at McAlester in 1908 and became a Shriner in Akdar Temple of Tulsa in 1914.

Miss Zena Brown of Binghamton, N. Y., paid a severe penalty for sporting pretty red painted toenails. While swimming a big fish or other water creature bit off her right toe, evidently having been lured by the flashy "bait."

Records recently filed at Drummondville, Canada, appear to show a longevity record for seven brothers and five sisters of the Manseau family, all living, whose ages are, respectively, 78, 76, 73, 72, 70, 68, 67, 65, 64, 61, 59, and 56.

Striking his head on an automobile mirror while working on the machine was lucky for Norman Miller of Arvada, Colo. A few days afterward he recovered the sight of his right eye, which had gone blind after a similar accident 19 years before.

It comes hard to pay for a dead horse, but Ohio will pay for six, all dead some 70 years. The legislature recently appropriated $668 to compensate the heirs of L. W. Burke for six horses stolen by Morgan's raiders near Washington Courthouse during the Civil War.

One of the enigmas of the depression is the fact that the average length of American lives has increased materially since 1929. Latest available figures show that the average life of white men is 60.86 years, while that of white women is 64.04 years.

Albert Carter has worked for Bill Dearmore, owner of a lunch stand in Van Alstyne, Tex., nine years without a fixed salary. When he began, Dearmore told him to take out of the cash register each night what he thought he had earned during the day, and evidently Carter has never exceeded a reasonable limit, as the arrangement still stands.

In every war more soldiers die from disease than from bullets. In the Mexican War disease claimed 7.3 for every one killed in action; in the Civil War about 2 to 1; in the Spanish American War 5.2 to 1, and in the World War 1.3 to 1. If Italy and Ethiopia go to war, the fatalities from disease may be expected to be enormous.

Crop Indications

In an interview with "Hank" Lloyd, Assistant Director of Agriculture, Mr. Lloyd informed us that the Soy Bean crop had proved to be the best resister of drouth of any crops, corn and other grain having suffered to some extent.

On account of the good hay crop some of the farmers of the state hesitate in changing from hay to soy beans, although there is little doubt that the beans are the surest crop.

Wheat made from 12 to 30 bushels to the acre this year, falling somewhat below the average. Corn, up to this time, is in good shape, and the yield and quality now depend upon how soon we are visited by a frost. All in all the crops in Illinois will fall below the average this year.

Henry Ford says a politician doesn't know enough to fix anything. Except another politician.

About the only qualification some United States senators seem to have for that office is that they are more than 30 years old.

Automobile Deaths in Illinois

Automobile accidents were responsible for 1169 deaths in Illinois during the first seven months of 1935, according to the records of the State Department of Health, as announced by Dr. J. Jirka. This figure represents an improvement of 154 over the record for the same period last year.

July, with a death rate of 194, was the worst since 1931, when there were 200 deaths from automobile accidents.

Accidents of all kinds were responsible for 3204 deaths, indicating that man is his worst enemy. Only two or three diseases—heart impairment, cancer and nephritis, caused more deaths than were caused by accidents.

Mortality from all causes was sharply lower, while the birth rate went up noticeably during the first seven months of this year, as compared with last. This indicates a marked improvement in the mental attitude of the people, generally, which is undoubtedly a good omen for better times ahead.

A rising birth rate indicates that the younger element in the population is willing to take on permanent responsibilities and that they are facing the future with increased confidence.

Nothing is certain except death and that taxes will be higher.

PEARS PAIR WELL WITH MANY FOODS

NOT pared pears but paired pears is what we have in mind in this story because pears, so sweet and juicy all by themselves, pair off wonderfully with other fruits and foods. You can make a marvelous fruit cocktail, for instance, by pairing them off with grapes. Here's the recipe for Grapes in Nests: Drain syrup from a can of Bartlett pears, tint a pale pink and bring to boiling. Scoop out the pear halves, making cases. Add to the syrup and simmer gently until a pale pink. Remove from the syrup and chill. Skin and seed some green grapes. Fill the pear halves with them, and squeeze over a little lemon juice. Tuck four or five salted almonds in each nest of grapes, and serve icy cold on small green glass plates.

Marvelous with Meats
Pears pair off with meats in an equally appetizing fashion. They will even go inside them deliciously in this

Roast Chicken with Fruit Stuffing: Mix three cups dry crumbs with three-fourths teaspoon sage, three-fourths teaspoon thyme, three-fourths teaspoon summer savory and salt and pepper. Add one-third cup melted butter. Then add one-third cup apple sauce and three halves of canned pears and three halves of canned apricots, mashed. If the mixture is not moist enough with this amount, more of any of the fruits may be added. Stuff a roasting chicken with this as usual, and roast as usual. This is enough for a three to three and a half pound chicken. When making the gravy, after the chicken is cooked, use half and half milk and the combined fruit juices.

Try pork chops with panned pears, and you'll serve it often.

"LISTEN, Janey; why make it so tough for me? You know we can't buy you a hat right now."

"But it's such a darling hat!" Janey looked at it now, head to one side, eyes full of longing. Mr. Ginsberg, standing in the door of his shop, smiled on them and rubbed his hands. "Good evenin', folks. That's a fine hat. And it's so cheap!"

Bill scowled at him and tugged at Janey's arm.

"It's only $4.98," she said.

"That's right, it's a bargain," Mr. Ginsberg said. "Just let the little lady try it on."

"Not tonight. Thanks," Bill growled, and firmly yanked Janey away. She had to run to keep up with his long stride.

"You're not angry, are you, Bill?" she asked.

"Of course not, but why make me look like a piker? You know everybody's expecting us to run home for money. And we decided to be independent, didn't we?"

"Yes, Bill," Janey answered in a small voice.

"All right. We've managed to save five dollars and we agreed to make it grow. Now you want to spend it for a hat?"

"I'm sorry, Bill," Janey's voice was woeful.

"I'll get you plenty of hats. Just give me time," Bill promised.

That was on Saturday night. Monday morning after Bill had gone to work Janey got out her blue beret. It was Bill's favorite. She had worn it on the eventful day when they'd slipped across the state line and been married. It was still a nice hat, Janey admitted to herself, but it didn't have the snap and style of the one in Ginsberg's shop window.

Idly she got down the milk pitcher in which they kept their expense money. There was $7.28 left with almost a week to go. In the pitcher there was also an envelope containing the five one dollar bills which constituted their nest egg. Bill had placed them in an envelope so that they would not get mixed up with the house money.

Janey smiled as she slipped the envelope back into the pitcher, and put the $7.28 in her purse. Good old Bill, lovable and obstinate!

Mr. Ginsberg was sweeping off his sidewalk when Janey, drawn as if by magnet, stopped to admire the hat.

"You would look so smart in that hat," he said at her elbow. "There's only two hats like it, and I got them both."

"I've decided not to buy a hat just yet," Janey told him firmly. But her eyes refused to leave the window.

"Oh, that's all right," he agreed. "Just try it on." His hand on her elbow he steered her into the shop.

Ten minutes later Janey came out wearing the hat. Still in a daze, she arrived home and took the five dollars out of the envelope. They would have to eat on that! She would have to hide the new hat from Bill and somehow make up the money she had spent.

Tuesday she began saving. The fifty cents that was to have gone for pressing Bill's other suit she saved by doing the pressing herself. She had never pressed a suit before, but she did that one somehow. That night she saved fifty cents more. Bill wanted to go to the movies but she pleaded a headache and they stayed home. That left her four dollars to go.

Wednesday she made a dollar twenty-five more. Bill had bragged that no wife of his would ever slave over a tub, and that was the amount which would have gone to the laundry man. She spent the day over the suds and ironing board and managed to greet Bill that night in a fresh frock despite her aching back and red knuckles.

By Thursday Bill began to look reproachfully at her when she served him his fourth dinner of hamburger steak; but she steeled herself. She was in a race against time, for on Saturday night Bill would open that envelope to add another dollar to its contents and she had to have the money back!

All Thursday night she tossed sleeplessly, defeat staring at her with the approach of Saturday. She needed two dollars desperately. Friday morning she applied at an agency, but all they could offer her was scrubbing. To the surprise of the employment manager, she took it and scrubbed floors and windows Friday afternoon and Saturday morning. When she staggered home Saturday noon the five dollars was back in the envelope.

Somehow she pulled herself together to greet Bill when he came bursting into the house. He was in a jubilant mood. He rushed into the bedroom and the next minute bounced out again.

"Look what I've got, Janey," he cried.

Janey gasped. He was holding her hat. She began to cry.

"Bill, have you been snooping?"

"Honey, it's a surprise. The company raised me five bucks. I had to celebrate so I bought you your hat."

He put it on her blond head and wiped her eyes with his handkerchief.

"That was the last one in the store," he said proudly. "Say, it sure looks great. Anyone would think it was at least a ten dollar hat."

"B-ill," Janey sniffed, "it's a ten dollar hat to us. I ought to know!"

Birthday Gift

JOHANNA laid the long white envelope upon her breakfast tray and sighed deeply.

"It's going to be a right nice birthday for you, Johanna," she remarked firmly. "With your divorce decree served right along with your toast and coffee!" She poured another cup of the potent dark liquid and lay back sipping it, staring meditatively at her calendar.

"Very appropriate," she decided, nodding her golden curls at the calendar. "An omen, most certainly. Off with the old love and on with the new! That's the idea!"

She slipped out of bed and into her bath.

"We'll forget about the old love," she told herself hastily. "It's a gloomy thought. It's the new love we shall celebrate today!" And just to prove that thoughts of the new love were indeed exciting and gay, she began to hum in her pleasant young voice. But the lovely violet eyes held a sober, stubborn little light.

Mark Amesbury, decided Johanna, changing the hum to a tomboyish whistle a little off key, was a man well worth any woman's thoughts. She could see the crisp dark head, with the touches of distinguished white at the temples, the crinkling gray eyes and the expressive twisting mouth! "I love you, Johanna," that mouth had said—how many times? Well, he could have her now. She would tell him so.

It would be fun to spend the day shopping, she decided. Nothing gave her spirits quite such a lift as buying something new and lovely and of course, she must be especially gay and festive for Mark tonight.

Johanna found a gown of gold net that was a dream. In it that night she felt gloriously gay. Just as she was putting on the finishing touch of lipstick a florist's box came with a little bouquet of old-fashioned flowers. Accompanying them was a card with only one word on it—Jerry. The flowers, it seemed, were perfect with the gold net gown. They were perfect for her. And it was so like Jerry to send them. Just to show there was no ill will.

Jerry, wedding tall, laughing, lovable Jerry, with the wavy brown hair and the very blue eyes, and the hungry, eager arms, and—well, inquired Johanna, wasn't that enough about Jerry? So, very firmly, she laid aside Jerry's corsage and wore the sophisticated shoulder spray from Mark.

Mark came for her then, and stood looking at her with a sort of possessive pride. "How can you be so beautiful, Johanna?" he asked.

She had intended telling him about the decree at dinner. But they ran into Neta Norwood who insisted they join her party. Mark looked sulky but Johanna smilingly accepted. After all, everyone knew how much of the trouble between Jerry and herself had been because of sophisticated, glamorous Neta, so she couldn't very well refuse.

It was during the dessert that she turned to Johanna and said, "I'd expected Jerry, you know, but he wouldn't come."

Johanna laughed lightly. "Jerry's like that," she replied looking straight into Neta's dark eyes. "He takes notions."

"And this last notion is the prize of them all!" snapped Neta clutching her fork tensely. She waited for Johanna to inquire but Johanna didn't. Johanna couldn't bear to ask Neta about Jerry. Not yet. So she merely smiled. An irritating bright little smile.

"Going off to some crazy God-forsaken country on an expedition to hunt snakes!" Neta flung at her. "Snakes—of all things! I think he's gone mad!"

Clearly, Jerry had disappointed her. Johanna never knew exactly how she got away from the party a little later. Nor how she managed to get Mark to leave her at the door.

It didn't take her very long to reach the telephone and call Jerry at that funny rooming house that no one else knew about.

"Jerry," she said very low into the phone. "Won't you come here? I want to talk to you."

"All right," agreed Jerry, in the manner of one granting a last request. And so he came. "But I can't stay very long," he warned her. "I'm off tomorrow—"

"To hunt snakes," nodded Johanna. "Jerry, why?"

"Jerry's blue eyes flashed defiantly. "I'm going," he snapped "because I've finished with things here. You have your divorce. A birthday present! That's a laugh! Because it is a present, Johanna. I gave it to you because I love you! To make you happy, Johanna!"

"Jerry!" cried Johanna, speaking very, very fast, "do you mean you weren't in love with Neta?"

Jerry only looked at her. Then he said, "You can marry Mark Amesbury, you know—"

"Jerry," wailed Johanna, grasping his lapels and tugging bravely, "would you stay home if I asked you to? If I told you I didn't love Mark a bit more than you do Neta? Would you?"

"You know I would," said Jerry, holding her close.

"Why couldn't we have talked this over before?" demanded Johanna, wonderingly.

"I don't know," muttered Jerry into her hair, "unless we were too darn proud!"

PUBLIC CONFIDENCE CONTINUES TO GAIN

Bankers Report Nation-Wide Improvement in Attitude Toward Banks—Educational Campaigns Play a Part

NEW YORK.—Ninety-six per cent of over 300 reporting clearinghouses throughout the United States find concrete evidence of favorable turns in public opinion regarding banks, it is shown in the results of a survey made by "Banking," the monthly publication of the American Bankers Association. City and country districts in every state are represented, it is pointed out.

"The outstanding conclusion is that there has been a genuine nation-wide improvement the last few months in the attitude of the public toward its banking institutions," the publication says. Statistical evidence on which the bankers base their conclusions which warrant this statement is as follows:

The Evidence
"How do bankers know there has been an improvement in the public attitude? They have certain statistical evidence. They have seen their deposits increase substantially in nearly all the cases reported, and tremendously in some cases. Many letters tell of increases of 100 to 300 per cent from the low point of the panic.

"For another thing, they know that fewer people are using safe deposit boxes as a repository for their savings, and that, in many instances at least, postal savings are declining.

"However, many express the view that they could throw out the statistical evidence and still realize that the public is in a better mood where the banks are concerned than before. The best evidence offered on this point, numerous bankers say, is to be found in the acceptance by the public of the newly instituted service charges and the reduced deposit interest rates."

A Summary of the Returns
The statement presents the following summary of the survey:

"We find on breaking up the general classifications of replies to the poll that the 65 per cent of those answering with an unqualified 'yes' represent only a partial measure of the optimistic feeling. Adding the favorable replies included in other groups, (i. e. 'yes' with qualifications, 'no change,' and 'mixed') we find that the vote shows a definitely healthy situation in 84 per cent of the localities reporting; at least some signs of improvement in another 12 per cent; a continuance of unfavorable conditions in 2 per cent, and a change for the worse in another 2 per cent. It is not too much to say that this is substantially 96 per cent favorable."

Reasons for Changed Public Opinion
As to reasons for the changes in public opinion regarding banks reported by the clearinghouses "more than one organization has a word to say about the American Bankers Association advertising and educational material," the magazine says.

It mentions in addition the benefits of the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation in the emergency, improvement in the general business situation, the weeding out of weak banks and the banking moratorium.

"The response to the survey can be put down as encouraging and informative," the magazine concludes. "It holds out the definite hope that with a continuance of a cooperative, educational attitude on the part of the bankers the rest of the journey back to normal may well be completed in the not too distant future."

BANKERS ACTIVE IN SOIL SAVING MOVE

Issue Book Describing Causes, Ravages and Means of Prevention of Erosion

MADISON, Wisc.—Under the title "Protecting Investment Values in Land," the American Bankers Association Agricultural Commission has published a booklet dealing with the conservation of soil resources as a pressing national problem.

"Careful estimates indicate that 750,000,000 tons of soil, suspended and dissolved, are carried off to the sea each year by running water," the commission's book declares. "An equal amount removed from its source is left en route. This means a total of 1,500,000,000 tons, equal to approximately one ton for each acre of land in this country. The Soil Conservation Service estimates that 35,000,000 acres have been ruined. There are 125,000,000 more acres that have lost the valuable topsoil, and it is estimated that still another 100 million acres are being converted into marginal or sub-marginal land, bringing disaster to those trying to eke out a living from erosion enfeebled soil, and threatening ruin to the next generation, since these destructive forces are going on at an increasing rate."

In a chapter devoted to control and preventive measures for soil losses it describes terracing, strip cropping, wind erosion control, gully control and the control of losses from leaching.

Other chapters are devoted to soil resources, the toll exacted by soil erosion, methods for keeping soils productive, state and national uses for non-agricultural land, forestry in a soil conservation program and wild life in a land use program. The booklet describes in detail the marshalling of many forces which is being brought about under the leadership of the Soil Erosion Service to meet this national problem.

Local and Personal

WHEN WORK IS TOIL

AN AMERICAN traveler was walking down a dusty road in France when he came upon workmen breaking rock. Stopping the first he asked, "My good man, what are you doing?" "Breaking rock," doggedly answered the workman, without looking up. A second workman near by, he pried the same question. "Earning $3 a day," came the second indifferent response. Approaching a third, he tried again to gain information. This time the workman stopped, raising up with difficulty. He placed his hand on his tired back. When his eyes met those of the stranger, a light broke over his face. Pointing across the road to a building in construction, he said proudly, "I am helping to build that cathedral."

We have often heard this story, but I am wondering if we have ever thought what made the difference in the spirit of the workmen. The first two men were laboring hard at toll. Life to them was drudgery. No light higher than the rock pile or the pay roll came to their vision. Work becomes toll when the love light for our work grows dim, whether our work be chopping wood or writing verse, "Enthusiasm is the best hill climber" in this old world. It has carried many sailors through storms into port, has brought convalescents to health, has kept la joie de vivre in the hearts of many through long lean years of poverty and depression.

What is it that brings such power? Nothing more nor less than love—the greatest life-giving force on the planet. Just as the love for a new life takes the mother through travail, so was it love that made the third workman, through the fatigue of breaking rock, see the vision of the completed cathedral with its service to God and man.

There is a spiritual comeback, a buoyancy to work well done. Failure to do one's best is a depressant. Success is something of a habit.

When the builder of a fireplace sees for the first time the draught pull firmly up the chimney—there is spiritual satisfaction that does something to him that even his pay check fails to do. This, I say, is the real profit of good work. It brings to one a sense of having achieved, it is a spirit of success in one's soul, as it were.

A college lad came into my office one morning with the query, "How much do you think one should love his work to make a success of it?" Immediately I answered, "As well as six at night as at nine o'clock in the morning!" "When we love our work, we do not know that we are working."

The past week the cooking girls have canned tomatoes and peaches and made grape jelly.

Nearly 30 boys and girls, with their parents in several cases, met at the Town Hall in Sidney, Tuesday night, for the purpose of ascertaining and stimulating 4-H work in this community. J. E. Harris, Farm Advisor of Champaign County, was in charge.

Interest shown in 4-H beef calves was the strongest. Dairy calves and gilt project also ranked high. Several of the boys showed interest in Oxford sheep.

Other boys and girls in this community interested in becoming a member of a live 4-H club should see Luther Bickers of Sidney and attend the meeting held the second Tuesday evening of each month.

Club calves may be obtained locally or through the cooperation of the County Farm Bureau.

Mr. Ash and six boys from Long View attended.
