Will Rogers Coming in "Life Begins at 40"

Two hundred grunting, galloping pigs stampede in Will Rogers' picture "Life Begins at 40," which will be featured this Friday and Saturday night at the Broadlands Theater.

During the production of this Fox Film picture, which shows America's favorite humorist in a comedy of errors as a small-town editor, the pigs seemed to enjoy the experience of acting. They frolicked about and refused to be recaptured, to the intense disgust of the property man.

Will Rogers, in one scene of the picture described as a search after the 'fun-tain of youth,' creates pandemonium in a hog show with his hog-calls. As the porkers were released Will Rogers, Slim Summerville, Roger Imhof and Hank Bell let fly their best siren calls. The pigs surged forward, knocking the quartette off their feet, and tearing down a platform from which George Barbier was speaking.

After the scene was taken, Rogers viewed the wreckage. Beaming with pride, he exclaimed: "Boys that's what I call a job of first class hog-calling."

Many other hilarious situations occur in this Sol M. Wurtzel production.

In the supporting cast are Richard Cromwell and Rochelle Hudson in the romantic leads.

She was united in marriage to Samuel Gurnea Dec. 30, 1884, at Urbana, Ill.

She was a devoted wife and a loving, kind mother. Altho she has left us, we cannot say she is gone; she is just asleep.

She leaves to mourn their loss, two sons, Ralph and Frank, at home; and four daughters, Mrs. May Harper, Brookfield, Mo.; Mrs. Mary Martin, Villa Grove, Ill.; Mrs. Daisy Slade, Vermillion, Ill.; Mrs. Bernice Dodd of Homer, Ill.

She is also survived by two sisters, Mrs. Anna Cook, Brookfield, Mo.; and Mrs. Amanda Bergfield, Longview, Ill.; fifteen grandchildren and a host of other relatives and friends.

GOD'S GARDEN OF ROSES
God has a garden of roses
In heaven blooming each day;
Each rose he plucks from our earth
And plants them in the sweetest way.
He often plucks red for the infants,
The middle aged are the blue;
Often he chooses a white one
To add its purest hue.
One day God was walking in his garden,
He longed for a flower of white;
So he sent down to earth for a blossom,
And Grandmother was plucked from our sight.
Today there is growing in heaven
An ever-blooming flower;
It is blown by the breezes of nature,
Along with the others it towers.
So our Grandmother is there in God's garden,
Happy with those who have gone;
She'll be waiting there to greet us
When our work on earth is done.

Will The Sun Cool?

For many years astronomers have speculated regarding the possibility that some day the sun will have exhausted its heat and become cold.

Dr. E. L. Tervine, president of the Mexican Astronomical Society, is one who holds this view, and points out that hundreds of now extinct suns were known to have existed in the dim past. In lectures at the University of Edinburgh, Prof. A. Eddington also expressed the belief that the universe is slowly running down, although he admits the possibility that the heat thrown off by the sun and other stars may be gathered again in some manner and form new suns.

In any event, Old Sol appears to be good for a billion years or more, so his ultimate end has little practical interest for us. But it is fascinating to contemplate what may be the final fate of mankind, when, if ever, our solar system begins to undergo a marked change, such as these astronomers predict.

From an Old Letter

During the Civil War a good lady of Georgia wrote a letter to the Columbus Enquirer, expressing her horror at the customs being introduced by the modern women of that day. Extracts from the letter will give its general trend:

"I am a country woman. Have been in your city. I was shocked. I saw—you'll scarcely believe it. I saw—can hardly tell it. I saw women in the streets with their dresses held so high that you could see their underskirts all around. My countrywomen surely will refrain when they are informed that it is a Yankee fashion. Yankee ladies care no more about showing their knees than they do their faces, and if you indulge in this fashion, in ten years more you will be walking the streets with your faces painted as theirs are now. Oh! be warned in time."

Had the writer of that letter lived until the present day she would have had much to inspire her pen. And possibly would have wound up by bobbing her hair and donning short skirts herself.

Legislative Rubbish

One of the crying needs of the present day is the "searching out and repealing of the useless, unenforceable and unnecessary legislative rubbish," according to the secretary of the National Industrial Council.

At a conference held in New York the Council pledged itself to labor for the simplification and codification of really useful and necessary laws, which are now buried or obscured throughout our law books by a mass of obsolete or unnecessary enactments.

It is declared that there are now about 2,500,000 separately enacted laws and ordinances on the books of the various states.

Too many of our lawmakers believe it to be their duty to make misdemeanors out of trivial actions, putting absurd restrictions on freedom, burdening innocent people with undeserved punishments and otherwise loading the statute books with unnecessary laws.

Most of these useless laws not only harass the public but cost the taxpayers enormous sums.

Real Accidents

What are generally classed as accidents are in most cases not accidents at all, but merely the results of pure carelessness or recklessness, according to a noted surgeon who declares that really unpreventable accidents are very few.

The greater number of accidents are caused by failure to keep in mind the consequences of a slight mistake in judgment, or in taking a chance even when the danger is realized.

Of 35,000 deaths in the United States through automobile accidents each year, it is safe to say that 90 per cent of them are due to someone's disregard of ordinary safety precautions. The worst feature of this is that a reckless driver not only endangers himself but also trifles with the lives of others.

In accidents due to fire the same principle holds good. Everyone knows how easily the careless throwing of a lighted match may start a disastrous fire yet millions of lighted matches, cigar and cigarette stubs are cast aside with little or no caution. Practically every fire that occurs is caused by stupid carelessness.

Accidents do happen of course under circumstances wherein no one appears to be at fault, but these are in the minority. Generally accidents are caused by ignorance, carelessness or wanton disregard of consequences.

Failings of the Great

It has become quite common of late for authors and critics to dig into the private lives of great men, with a view to exposing their human frailties. There can be no particular objection to this, so long as it is not attempted to belittle the service these men have rendered to mankind.

Every man and woman have certain defects of character, and this has always been so. It is a further fact that some of those who have contributed most to civilization have been guilty of moral offenses which would be sternly condemned today.

As a matter of history, many of the world's greatest leaders have led reprehensive private lives, as measured by commonly accepted standards. It even may be asserted that in the case of the very highest types of genius this has been the rule rather than the exception.

But in estimating the permanent place which should be accorded these men in the esteem of the world, only the service which they rendered to humanity should be considered. A recent writer well expresses this idea thus:

"Every leader must be tested; not by his private conduct, but by his public behavior. Did he serve well his day and generation? If he did, all else will be forgiven and forgotten."

An optimist is one who believes radio programs will be better some day.

Ignorance of the law excuses no one, unless he happens to be a lawyer.

Most folks want things to be different, no matter how different they are already.

Conscientious folk object to tainted money especially if 'taint theirs.

Medical quacks are in disfavor but political quacks are as popular as ever.

Sidelights

Some folks are touchy. An Alabama newspaper tells of an editor who published the Ten Commandments, and about half of his subscribers thought he was hitting at their morals and stopped their subscriptions.

Rev. William E. Webb of Oklahoma City, Okla., has organized a kissing club among the married men in his congregation. They pledge to kiss their wives once daily, tell them they love them, and compliment them on their cooking.

Alert Pittsburgh police trailed James McLaughlin, seen driving with one hand and holding a handkerchief over a child's mouth with the other. Thinking they had caught a bold kidnaper, they were preparing to take him to jail when he explained that the child was his 4-year-old daughter who had just had a tooth pulled.

The late C. E. Titman of Philadelphia lived for years in comparative poverty because he took a doctor's opinion too seriously. Fifteen years before his death Titman received a legacy of $250,000. About the same time a physician told him he had less than a year to live, so he squandered his fortune in a few months. But he got well and worked for small wages the rest of his life.

Water Tower Big Attraction

Los Remedios, which is less than an easy automobile run from Mexico City, is not only famous as an historic shrine, and a spot where the Indians require a week of fiesta every September to properly honor the patron madonna, but before the warm beauty of its colonial water tower every amateur photographer bends a willing knee. In the days of the Conquest some of the most substantial building of the period went into water systems. Mexico City, for instance, is served by a colonial aqueduct which pipes the water in from the ridges high above the valley, on the road southward to Cuernavaca.

Where Gypsies Originated

Scientific men have come to the conclusion that gypsies are neither of European nor of African origin, but are a remnant of some obscure Indian tribe. This ethnological conclusion is borne out by the fact that their language is undoubtedly derived from the Sanskrit, although intermingled with Oriental terms and inflections appear words of Greek, Slavic, Rumanian, Magyar, German, French and English origin.

India's Tigers Desperate

India's large man-eating tigers often seriously disrupt the economic life of great areas. Not infrequently they have caused road building and mail service to be suspended for weeks at a time. A few years ago one beast alone so terrorized a district that 13 villages were evacuated and 250 square miles of farm land thrown out of cultivation.—Collier's Weekly.

Forwarding Mail

The postal regulations say that unlimited requests for the forwarding of mail to other post offices shall be observed for a period of two years, unless revoked, except that such requests affecting general delivery mail at city delivery post offices shall expire at the end of 30 days unless renewed.

Canadian Naturalization Law

The Canadian naturalization law, so far as it applies to Americans, is not much different from ours. A person of American birth may petition for Canadian citizenship on proof of five years' legal residence in the Dominion. No previous declaration of intention—or "first papers"—is necessary.

"The Commoner"

The sobriquet "the Commoner" was applied to William Jennings Bryan early in his political days because of his championing of the cause of the common people. After the election of 1900 he established at Lincoln, Neb., a political magazine of wide circulation which he named the Commoner.

Ohio State Nearly Square

With a land surface of 40,740 square miles, the state of Ohio is nearly square; the longest east-and-west line that can be drawn within its limits is 210 miles, while the longest north-and-south line is 225 miles—only a difference of 15 miles.

Pharaoh Zozer

The resting place of Pharaoh Zozer, who once really ruled Egypt, is said by scientists to be the oldest known building of dressed stone in the world, and consequently is of the highest historical, architectural and archeological importance.

The Three Fates

The Latin names for the three fates are Clotho, who presided over birth and drew from her distaff the thread of life; Lachesis, who determines its length, and Atropos, who presided over death and cut the thread of life.

Iron in Oysters

Oysters come almost as high on the list of iron foods as meat. So do prunes and raisins. Dates, too, and potatoes, dried beans, whole cereals and bread made from the entire grain.

Japan's Train Service Accurate

Train service in Japan is so accurate that nothing short of an earthquake or some great national disaster will delay a train for more than a fraction of a minute.

The process of vulcanizing rubber was discovered in 1839 when a rubber and sulphur mixture was dropped accidentally on a hot stove.

Largest Member of Deer Family

The giant Irish elk, now extinct, was the largest member of the deer family that ever lived, with antlers that sometimes spread 11 feet.

London's Rotten Row

The derivation of London's famous Rotten Row is from the French phrase route du roi, which means the king's drive.

Esquimos Store Seal Blubber

Esquimos of Greenland store seal blubber in vats, and after the sun melts it they ship it to other countries.

In the thirty years' war, Germany's population was said to have dropped from 20,000,000 to 4,000,000.

Exaltation of Cruelty

The exaltation of cruelty is one of the most noxious of by-products in dictatorship countries.

Meaning of Bellicose

The meaning of bellicose is pugnacious, warlike.

Three Kings of Kings at Times Rule in Abyssinia

Abyssinia is a loose conglomeration of provinces under native princes, who until in recent years were usually at war with each other. They are ruled by an overlord who assumes the resounding title of Emperor, King of Kings, Elect of God and Conquering Lion of the Tribe of Judah. The claim to the title of Emperor is based on alleged lineal descent from King Solomon and the Queen of Sheba. Often in the past, however, writes a correspondent in the New York Herald-Tribune, the succession has been settled by force of arms, and at times there have been as many as three kings of kings reigning in different parts of the land. The whole history of the country is one of confusion of rulers, internecine warfare, barbaric deeds, unstable governments, usurpers, raids and pillage.

It was on the death of a usurping chieftain, Kassa, in 1889, at the hands of rebellious dervishes, that Menelik, King of Shoa and an alleged descendant of the Queen of Sheba, proclaimed himself king of kings; and with the help of Italian allies succeeded in bringing about some sort of peaceful order in the country. This friendship was sort-lived, however, and in 1896 the Italians were driven from the country. Menelik turned out to be a strong and wise ruler and successfully curbed these turbulent chieftains until his death in 1913.

Black, White and Fire Damp in the Coal Mines

Black damp is the term used by miners to describe the condition of the mine air when it contains sufficient carbon dioxide to extinguish or dim a light. Carbon dioxide is one and one-half times the weight of air, and settles at the lower points of the working places in the mines. It is colorless, with a slight acid taste and smell. It will not burn or support combustion and is not poisonous, but has a suffocating effect. White damp is mine air when it contains carbon monoxide. It is colorless, odorless, has about the same weight as air, and will explode when mixed with the proper amount of air; it is not found in mines in sufficient quantities to cause an explosion. It is extremely poisonous. When the air contains as much as one-half of 1 per cent of carbon monoxide, death results in a short time. The blood absorbs this gas faster than it absorbs oxygen. This is the poison in automobile engine exhaust gas.

Fire damp is the most commonly known coal mine gas. It is an explosive mixture, of methane (carbureted hydrogen) and air. Methane is composed of one volume of carbon united with four volumes of hydrogen. The explosive range is 5 to 15 per cent in air, and most explosive at 9 per cent.—Indianapolis News.

Tree Rings Record Life

Science Service says that "duplicating details of tree rings can belong to only one piece of wood and to only one place in that one piece, because the tree rings record the whole life story of the tree. No tree ever produces a set of rings exactly like those of another tree, not even its nearest neighbor of the same species. There will be tiny differences in width here and there, according to the tubes laid down in response to slight variations in water supply, light and other life-experiences of the tree. It is these slight variations in width and shape of rings that makes them as sure as a means of identification of the particular piece of wood as are the ridges and grooves on our fingertips.

Origin of "Jerk-Water"

The origin of "jerk-water" as applied to small towns is obscure. It is supposed that the original jerk-water was a place where trains stopped to take on water. In the early days of railroads the engine was often stopped at wayside streams to replenish the water supply. This was called jerking water because the water was carried to the locomotive in leather buckets. In time "jerk-water" came to be applied to small towns noted for nothing in particular except that trains stopped there to take on water.

Town Populated by Jews

Tel Aviv, Palestine, was founded in 1909 as a suburb of Jaffa, with a population of less than 500. The population has grown to more than 46,000. It is the first town in the world since the Dispersion to be built and populated wholly by Jews. It has excellent schools, many public institutions, hospitals and a constantly increasing list of prosperous industries. It supports daily newspapers and banks.

The Lee Mansion

The Lee mansion in Arlington was not confiscated as many believe, says Pathfinder Magazine. Federal troops seized it during the Civil war, and afterwards the government bought it at a tax sale for $23,000. Some years later G. W. Custis Lee, the Lee heir, successfully contested in the Supreme court the legality of the sale but transferred it back to the government in 1884 for $150,000.

Famed for Festivals

Japan's classical city is Kyoto, once capital of the country. It was here that culture and art flourished, and in and around the city are hundreds of temples and historical sites. Although the effects of fire and massacres have marked Kyoto, still it is here that Japan's emperors are crowned.
