Modernize The Illinois Theatre at Newman

During the past few months Chas. L. Reed has converted the Illinois Theatre of Newman into a most beautiful and cozy show house.

In addition to the splendid equipment that has been installed for the perfect projection of the pictures, new reseatting has been completed. New, roomy, comfortable, deep cushioned chairs have been provided for theatre goers of Newman and neighboring towns.

Patrons of the Illinois Theatre are awed by the interior beauty of the new double curtain and the many color lighting effect produced in presenting the subjects on the screen.

New Elaine Rainbe lighting fixtures add additional beauty to the walls and ceiling which have been treated with Nu Wood, used especially for theatre interior decorations and which greatly improves the sound.

Mr. Reed always presents a good feature at the Illinois with an outstanding program of short subjects with each show.

George O'Brien Stars In New Type Picture

Blazing a path as a pioneer of a new-type action picture, George O'Brien's new starring picture, "The Cowboy Millionaire" comes to the Broadlands Theater this Friday and Saturday.

Action ranges over six thousand miles from London's spires to Arizona's deserts. Audiences are promised an engrossing lot of thrills.

In "The Cowboy Millionaire" the settings donate wealth, and bespeak refinement and culture. The women wear clothes befitting wealthy society. No cowboy shoots up the dust of the village street. No chases predominate the picture, yet this fast-moving film is packed to the hilt with action.

Evalyn Bostock, talented English film actress, plays the leading role opposite George O'Brien. Edgar Kennedy, Alden Chase and Maude Allen make up the supporting cast.

Six Patrons Want to be Postmaster at Sidell

Sidell—Six patrons of the Sidell postoffice were certified in Washington by the Civil Service Commission recently, as eligible to take the examination for the postmastership of the Sidell office. At the same time, a list of applicants for other postal jobs in this vicinity was made public.

The six who applied for the Sidell job are as follows: Jos. R. Atkinson, postmaster; Marie Lucas, teacher; Claude Pyle, merchant; Clayton Weaver, clerk; Gilbert L. Stunkard, farmer; Earl C. Roller, farmer.

Scripture was read by Mrs. Cora Chafin, and prayer was offered by Rev. W. Earl Ballew. Mrs. Leanna Miller gave the closing thought, from Luke. At the close of the meeting the annual Christmas exchange was held.

Barn and 2500 Bushels Corn Burn Near Newman

Wednesday morning the large barn and shed on the Ward Maris farm, north of Newman caught on fire from sparks of burning grass and weeds. The blaze completely destroyed the building and thousands of dollars worth of implements, grain and hay. The loss was only partially covered by insurance. Mr. Maris had over 2500 bushels of new corn in the building, as well as other grains. The Newman Fire Department was called to the scene, but could do nothing to even slacken the blaze which was like a roaring furnace.—Newman Independent.

More than 60 per cent of all farm families now own one or more motor vehicles, whereas only 35 percent have telephones, 20 per cent have radio, 15 per cent have the use of electricity, and only about 12 per cent have running water in their homes, according to Charles M. Hayes, president of the Chicago Motor Club.

Ideas Change

It is characteristic of most persons who have decided opinions on any subject that they endeavor to bring everyone else to their way of thinking.

In cases where the issue is a clear-cut one, involving right and wrong, it may be that an uncompromising attitude is justified. But who shall say what is right and what is wrong? Ideas concerning the right and wrong change with the times.

Not so many decades ago some of the most cultured and enlightened people of this country believed that human slavery was legitimate and proper. George Washington was one of them; at least he was a large slave-owner as long as he lived. We think it wrong today.

The Puritans thought it wrong for a man to kiss his wife on Sunday, and they passed a law prohibiting him from doing so. We now laugh at the idea of such a law.

If everyone had agreed with such old ideas and no one had ever mustered up the courage to combat them, we should have made little progress. We would still be hanging witches.

What is needed in the world is not that we should all think alike, but that we should have a greater feeling of tolerance and respect for the opinions of others, when honestly held, no matter how much they may differ from our own.

The average normal person is really seeking for the truth—but the truth is often elusive, and each must find it in his own way.

About Insanity

In a bulletin of the National Committee for Mental Hygiene some enlightening information concerning insanity is given, which is not only interesting but valuable. It mentions a great many false notions held by the public regarding mental disorders, and gives instead of these the results of scientific research.

Some of the things science teaches today concerning insanity are these:

Insanity develops gradually; it is no more to be ashamed of than pneumonia or a broken leg; it is a disease and should have medical treatment; between 25 and 40 per cent of those treated are discharged recovered or improved. Shock of misfortune or grief may precipitate insanity, but does not cause it unless mental disorder already exists; there are usually symptoms which if recognized early may enable physicians to check the malady; there are many kinds of mental disorder, just as there are many kinds of physical ailments; "nervous breakdown" is really a mental condition in which there is rarely anything organically wrong with the nervous system.

In olden times an insane person was supposed to be possessed of a devil, and the poor wretch was often tortured to exercise the evil spirit. Now we know that a crazy person is simply sick mentally and needs intelligent and humane treatment.

Furthermore, insanity is more or less comparative. Most of us are a little off at times.

The Good Old Days

An interesting document was brought to light during the celebration of the eightieth anniversary of the founding of the Carson Pirie Scott & Co. store in Chicago. Someone in that organization had preserved the rules for employees of their first store which read as follows:

"Store must be opened from 6 a. m. to 9 p. m. the year around. Store must be swept; counters, base shelves and showcases dusted. Lamps trimmed, filled and chimneys cleaned; pens made; doors and windows opened; a pail of water, also a bucket of coal brought in before breakfast (if there is time to do so) and attend to customers who call.

Store must not be opened on the Sabbath unless necessary, and then only for a few minutes.

The employee who is in the habit of smoking Spanish cigars, being shaved at the barber's, going to dances and other places of amusement, will surely give his employer reason to be suspicious of his integrity and honesty.

Each employee must pay not less than $5 per year to the church and must attend Sunday School regularly.

Man employees are given one evening a week for courting and two if they go to prayer meeting.

After 14 hours of work in the store, leisure hours should be spent most in reading."

Who was it heard sighing for "the good old days?"

Flirting With Death

It is an amazing fact that the appalling number of deaths resulting from sheer carelessness make no greater impression upon the average person. This is especially true with respect to drivers of automobiles.

Persons who are ordinarily careful in protecting their health and property often throw discretion to the winds the moment they grasp the wheel of a motor car and flirt with death through failing to observe the most elementary principles of safety.

They will take a chance at a grade crossing, speed while rounding a blind curve, pass other cars under dangerous conditions, and do other foolish things which menace life and limb—seemingly oblivious to the fact that one slight mistake of judgment may prove fatal to them or to those who happen to be passengers in their cars.

The jaywalker is equally reckless, taking the chance of being run down for the sake of saving a few steps or a moment's time. In fact, many pedestrians are even more careless than the average motorist.

Safety education has been the means of reducing accidents to some extent, but the lamentable fact remains that no amount of warning has any appreciable effect upon the majority of people.

The result is that 36,000 or more persons are killed and about a million are injured in automobile accidents in the United States every year, while at least 90 per cent of these casualties might be averted by the use of ordinary common sense.

The Marriage Problem

By LEROY SCOTT

Author of "A Daughter of Two Worlds," "Children of the Whirlwind," "Cordelia the Magnificent," etc.

Economic Independence of Women Will End the Parasite Wife

MANY hundreds of heavy volumes have been written upon the Materialistic Interpretation of History. In a very few words I am going to attempt a far more important subject—the Materialistic Interpretation of Marriage.

It is especially marriage of a hundred years from now of which I write. The entire character of our present-day life and civilization has been dominated and shaped by material discoveries and inventions.

The chief and compelling factor in bringing about the change in woman's place in her own home and out in the world is the materialistic revolution in which we are all inextricably involved.

The materialistic revolution, with its discoveries and inventions, has in two important ways already enormously altered the status of woman. In the first place, it has absorbed millions of women into positions that pay downward from a living wage upward to a splendid competency. In the second place, the revolution has altered every phase of woman's married life that touches the domestic economy of her household; to mention a few items, canned and preserved foods, kitchen household appliances, and the inevitable delicatessen store.

Out of this combination of moderately paid husband and of the well-paid and invention-supplied wife we have already evolved the so-called 50-50 marriage of today—those marriages in which the wife continues with her work and claims complete economic and personal equality.

Now I do not seek to underrate our splendid idealists of the past or undervalue the force of a great ideal that has been shaped into a conscious purpose.

I make no pretense of prophesying what these miraculous new inventions of 2035 are going to be. But I believe I can see the broad tendency of these inventions, these discoveries, this widening of materialism into a greater humanism, these amazingly further developments on the side of the feminine sex, which will combine to affect the new marriage.

Briefly stated, these most important consequences of the materialistic revolution (invention, material discovery, industrial development, etc.), as I see them, and in so far as they affect the entirely new marriage relation of the future, are as follows:

First. The disappearance of the material home as we at present know it, viz, a certain number of rooms requiring daily personal care. Whatever the future substitute for the home may be, all this labor will be either eliminated or be performed by invention.

Second. The practical, if not complete, elimination of all household labor in the preparation and service of food.

Third. Woman accepted by the traditions of a century proceeding as a co-worker with, and rival of, man out in the affairs of the world.

Fourth. Equal opportunities with men in all occupations at which women are physically equipped to compete on equal terms. Equal pay for equal work.

Stated in a most general way, the foregoing is the basis of concrete fact upon which marriage of a hundred years hence will be founded. Upon this basis a long book could be written describing conditions of 2035. The book's outstanding points about the new marriage of that period are, of course, the points at which this present little article is directed.

In substance, the outstanding points of this book would be as follows:

First. That the thoroughly independent woman of this new era will not marry a man unless she feels for him something she believes to be love.

Second. That each sex will continuously be raising the standards required in the other for mating, which, of course, means raising the standards of and for the entire human race.

Third. That marriage will last only so long as love lasts—or while there exists some strong common interest, such as children.

Fourth. That divorce will be simple and easy—perhaps will result automatically when a couple separate.

Fifth. Alimony will be abolished, save where real disability or liability has been incurred through marriage.

Sixth. A great decrease in the number of that class of women who now seek marriage as a means to parasitic contentment. The parasite wife will be no longer favored.

In this summary of the marriage of the future I have omitted any discussion of the place of children in this new scheme—have purposely done so for the reason that children, in any such symposium, deserve a separate discussion.

Sidelights

When Cecil Hummel's property was sold at public sale in Brazil, Ind., the family horse was put up and when the bid amounted to $55 the horse kicked the auctioneer in the leg.

An Alabama newspaper prints this wail from a former reliever: "These relief people have sure ruined me. They told me they would give me a set of false teeth. They had my teeth pulled out and then the relief was cut off. Now I can eat nothing but soup."

Taking his first shower after new bathroom fixtures were installed, a Michigan man was furious when he found hot water coming from the cold water pipe. His rage against the plumber subsided when he found that his house was on fire downstairs.

Another new use for cotton is seen in the building of a runway at the airport in Newark, N. J. The runway will be 700 feet long and 200 feet wide, and more than 15,000 square yards of cotton fabric will be used as a reinforcing underlayer. A stretch of highway similarly reinforced was recently built in Mississippi.

Mayor E. J. Kelley of Chicago suggests a national law to restrict the speed of pleasure cars to 50 miles an hour. The only way to really restrict speed would be to make cars incapable of going more than the prescribed limit. And with a fool at the steering wheel a car going 25 miles an hour is a menace.
