FALLING OF LEAVES TRACES TO WORK OF ANTHRACNOSE

Spotting, withering and falling of leaves from sycamore, oak and ample trees that is now causing so much comment is the work of the anthracnose disease, says Dr. L. R. Tehon, botanist of the Illinois State Natural History Survey, cooperating with the College of Agriculture, U. of I.

Almost complete prevention of anthracnose can be obtained by spraying susceptible kinds of trees with bordeaux mixture. The first spray should be applied while the leaves are unfolding. If wet weather continues, the spray must be repeated at intervals of 5 to 10 days in order to prevent the occurrence of new infections. Even if the first spray is omitted, much of the infection can be prevented and the beauty of shade trees largely preserved by beginning to spray as soon as anthracnose infection is observed. Trees that have suffered severely can often be induced to make good growth if they are supplied with a nitrogenous fertilizer.

An epidemic of the disease is always to be expected in wet cool springs. Sycamores suffer most, but oaks are also badly attacked. Maples are not so greatly affected unless weather conditions are extraordinarily favorable, as they have been this spring.

As a rule trees suffer very little permanent damage from the anthracnose attack. Diseased trees are usually able to put out a second crop of leaves which though small, is sufficient to carry them thru the summer. The year's growth, however, is apt to be small.

The disease is caused by a minute fungous parasite which attacks chiefly the leaf veins and tissues immediately adjacent, thus cutting off the water supply to the remainder of the leaf which quickly withers and dies.

TOWN BOARD MEETS

The July meeting of the village board was held Monday night. The state has accepted the rocked improved streets. The matter of continuing street lights was up for consideration and it is said the light company was instructed to discontinue lighting the streets or accept the amount the board had offered. This was rejected but up to last night the lights were still burning.

Some new hose for the fire engine was also purchased and the usual amount of bills ordered paid.

GEORGE WHITE'S 1935 SCANDALS AT PASTIME JULY 4, 5, 6

Comparisons being inevitable this picture retains and embellishes all the lavish eye and ear glamour of the first George White's "Scandals." The motivating story is entirely new and different. Hand somely and artistically mounted, elaborately costumed, it's a stage and backstage show. It features many musical and dance numbers several of which are thematic to the story, others specialties. Colorful, moving at a moderate pace so that the full value of each sequence may be realized, it improves on the previous effort.

While the more spectacular features are the central point of interest, there is also interest in the story, its motive, the manner in which it runs its course and the happy ending. As a musical it comprises practically all the values that have made this character of entertainment successful. As a light dramatic romance it makes good use of all the necessary ingredients.

Opening with the concluding scene of the first show, White takes a trip south. At a hick town stop, Manya, who has tagged along, calls his attention to a billing "White's Scandals—entire production conceived, produced and directed by Elmer White." Dropping in on the hick show being presented, he sees a diamond in the rough, Honey Walters, performing with Eddie Taylor. Wanting her for his show, after appreciating Elmer's gag, Aunt Jane persuades him to take Eddie, Elmer and Dude along with Honey. Honey and Eddie, in love, are an instantaneous success. Then as Eddie falls for tap dancer Marilyn and to pay him back, Honey picks up with Daniels, the inevitable happens. Both get big-headed and White fires them.

Weeks of walking the streets finally get Eddie a part in a show booked for tanktown presentation where he finds Honey playing the rehearsing lead. In the meantime Aunt Jane, who still thinks her children are the stars of White's show, lands in town. That she may not be disappointed, White turns the town inside out searching for them. Found just as they are about to board a train for Altoona, they return to become the hits of the show and thrill Aunt Jane and White when they announce they are married.

Lavish on stage musical comedy with the expected class of singing and dancing being the principal selling qualities, the comedy provided by Ned Sparks, the tap dancing of Eleanor Powell, the singing and dancing of Alice Faye and James Dunn, Lyda Roberti's characteristic contributions and Cliff Edwards' fantastic dream sequence are assets that should not be overlooked.

"According to the Moonlight" is the theme song, along with "Old Southern Custom." Most spectacular chorus group feature is "Hunkadola." The fantastic dream song feature is "I Was Born Too Late."

FOURTH IS TODAY

Today is the Fourth of July! Touch off your crackers, make all the noise you want too, let the eagle scream. Have a good time and celebrate your country's natal day.

Many in Homer will remain at home, others will depart for various places as an outing and perhaps some will see the fair at Danville but if it rains, it's just too bad for celebrating.

The Enterprise is cutting things short this week so that a little recreation may be enjoyed.

Dealers Endorse Newspaper Advertising

74 of Chevrolet's leading dealers who together accounted for the sales of 39,116 new cars and trucks last year, attending a 2-day conference at Detroit on sales and advertising plans for the remainder of 1935, went on record as unanimously endorsing the Chevrolet Motor Company's decision, announced at the closing session, to retain the newspaper as the backbone of the company's advertising media.

The announcement that Chevrolet intended to adhere to this time tried policy was made by C. P. Finken, advertising manager, who spoke in enthusiastic terms of the results the company has obtained thru newspaper advertising, in which it has long been a conspicuous leader.

"We are constantly on the lookout for any means of making our appeal to the public more effective," said Mr. Finken, "but up to date we have found nothing to compare with the newspaper as a 'main highway' for our advertising expenditure."

NO NEWS ON SCHOOL

There seems to be no new developments on the school matter. However it is understood that the county superintendent called by telephone to a certain party Friday evening and unable to contact the party called to him Saturday morning and was advised to remain home as the superintendents report was not ready. Up to Tuesday night it is said no report had yet been received.

It is said that the superintendent was in Homer Monday trying to get members of the board to settle difficulties without his interference but it seems such was futile. Hence the board is still deadlocked and many patrons it is said are already worrying about losing the railroad taxes next year unless something is speedily affected.

According to some section 16, article 7, of the Illinois school laws states that the county superintendent of school has the power to eliminate from a school board any and all members who fail to do their duty.

Raymond Rogers and family of Rockford are visiting his parents, David Rogers and family.

George Heppe and Max Robertson are visiting the latter's sister, Elizabeth, in Washington D. C. They left via motor Friday.

MRS. J. T. FREEMAN PASSED AWAY LAST SUNDAY AFTERNOON

Mrs. J. T. Freeman passed away Sunday afternoon at 4:30 in Carle hospital, Urbana. She had been in poor health several years and lately was removed to the hospital.

Mrs. Freeman was born in Newcomersville, Ohio, August 14, 1858 a daughter of John P. and Mary Silkey. She came to Illinois with her parents when a child, living on a farm near Sidney and later north of Homer. She was united in marriage October 23, 1873 to John T. Freeman and for many years they lived on the farm north of Homer until about 20 years ago when they built a new home on South Main when they moved to Homer. To this union was born one son, Roy C.

Besides the husband and son, she is survived by two brothers, J. B. Silkey of Ogden and C. M. Silkey of Decatur and one sister, Mrs. J. H. Freeman of Ogden.

Mrs. Freeman was much of a home woman but for years was a regular attendant at the M. E. church, of which she was a member.

Funeral services were held on Tuesday at 2 p. m. from the M. E. church, with the pastor, Rev. J. C. Brown, officiating and interment was in G. A. R. cemetery.

LEGION AUXILIARY HOLDS MEETING

The American Legion auxiliary held their regular June meeting last Thursday afternoon at Legion hall. Mrs. Catherine Ekbor of Champaign, district director was the guest of honor and gave some interesting information on auxiliary work. Plans were also discussed for the convention to be in Homer, July 8. A social hour followed the business. Mrs. Marie O'Neil and Mrs. Pauline Smith were hostesses.

New officers of the local unit recently elected are:

President—Eva Ghere.

1st vice—Marie O'Neil.

2nd vice—Janet Hess.

Chaplain—Rena Peyton.

Treasurer—Gladys Loyd.

Serg. at arms—Jennie Kizer.

Secretary—Mary Brayshaw.

Historian—Leona Tracey.

SALES TAX PERPLEXES

The new sales tax went into effect Monday. So far as known no tokens are to be used in Homer. Various ways and methods are employed locally to collect the tax. Some are absorbing the tax. The Homer Babery is issuing cards to the amount of $1.00 the customer paying 3 cents for the card and as a small purchase is made or any amount under or too $1.00 the purchase amount is punched. This is a very unique way of handling the affair.

Mrs. Morris Rothenberger and son, Jr., Mrs. Myrtle Martin; Miss Lois and Shirley Ann Lynch, all of Danville and Jr. Lynch of Homer were dinner guests Wednesday at the M. E. Lynch home west of town.

Peace in the World

THE question of peace has never more insistently occupied men's attention than it does today. And yet, in spite of all the thought that is being given to this question, peace seems still afar off.

We have advanced to the point of looking for a world peace—a comprehensive peace—but mankind generally does not understand the idea of peace in its essence. Apart from the multiplicity of problems to be resolved into harmony, there is a complexity of beliefs regarding what constitutes peace. Men believe there are many phases of peace—the peace of the individual, of the home, of industry, of the nation. . . .

Peace is not primarily the absence of sickness, the elimination of strife in the home or society, nor the absence of war among the nations. The absence of these things is assured as peace is gained, but is not peace in itself, for peace is the realization of the omnipresence of God, good. All strife is strife within the human so-called mind, strife as between the highest good realizable and something lower than the best.

Even when two or more individuals seem to be engaged in strife the problem is reducible to the conflict between good and evil within the consciousness of those concerned. If good predominates in one's consciousness the strife will in that measure diminish; for whilst hate cannot cure hate, nor selfishness eliminate selfishness, the substitution of love for hate, and unselfishness for selfishness, must finally bring about a complete cessation of clamor for all. Mary Baker Eddy says in her Message to The Mother Church for 1900 (p. 8), "When a man begins to quarrel with himself he stops quarrelling with others." The quarrel with himself is the strife of good with evil, the strife of the higher with the lower; and it is a strife which can have but one end, namely, peace, for the divine Mind consciously expressed dissipates and destroys that which is unreal and false.

Just as strife touches only the so-called human mind, so peace is realized only as the presence of God, divine Mind, is understood. There is one infinite peace, the peace of God, and men today must find that peace before they can find its effects, either individually, in the home, in business, in social circles, or in international questions.

Today men say that peace depends upon the turn of events in the world's affairs—events such as partial or total disarmament, or upon other international questions of the moment. Peace, however, does not depend upon these events: these events depend upon humanity's realization of peace. The world is where it is today because peace as the result of knowing God is not generally realized. Mankind is not yet awake to the real meaning of peace, and no fully satisfactory result can possibly be reached until the peoples of the world realize that peace does not depend upon single or contingent events, but on the presence of God in the heart.

Every man who turns away from contention and strife in the human field and holds his thought unreservedly to God, will find peace from all the strife which seems to rage about him. He will find his feet on the rock which cannot be moved, for he will be supported and sustained by the infinite God. This assuredly is the meaning of Christ Jesus' statement: "Peace I leave with you, my peace I give unto you; not as the world giveth, give I unto you. Let not your heart be troubled, neither let it be afraid" (John 14:27). The issues of the nations can be resolved only as this peace is understood; and each man who seeks, finds, and holds fast to the presence of the infinite is doing much to promote world peace.

The question arises, If the other man does not cease to oppose, is he to have the advantage of his contention? . . . The wrong qualities which lead to strife are the opposites of the attributes of God, and they fall powerless before the demonstration of God's presence as Love. Seeing through the mist of evil and beholding only God, good, in his neighbor, one will find indeed that only God is there, and that man is undisturbed by any evil force. This is the demonstration of Christian Science, the realization of God as ever present and all-powerful. It is the demonstration of peace in the individual heart; and because nations are composed of individuals it is by right thinking about God and about peace that peace will come to a troubled world.—The Christian Science Monitor.

While riding a cultivator the metal strap that holds the seats up broke letting him fall to the ground. The lines were wrapped about his waist and he was pulled under the horses. ## CHURCH NOTES

Methodist Church

Union services for Sunday evening are being arranged. The evening service at 7:30 next Sunday will take place in the Christian church. If it is a warm evening the service will likely be held in the cool down stairs room. The Methodist minister will occupy the pulpit.

It is suggested that each of the three churches bring in two outside preachers or speakers during the two months. It is hoped that a great Sunday night service will be the regular experience every Sunday evening of the summer.

Keep in mind the fact that the new and popular morning service at this church begins at 9:45 and closes at 11:05.

The young people will go to the Epworth League institute next Sunday and Monday which is the annual occurrence at Old Salem chautauqua grounds at Petersburg Ill. The pastor and his wife will be with them. They still need a little more money to finance the group. If you can bring something in Sunday or sooner it will be appreciated.

Rev. J. C. Brown, Pastor.

Banks Rapidly Reduce Debt

Although the sum of $1,860,000,000 has been advanced to banks and trust companies by the Reconstruction Finance Corporation since it began operations in February, 1932, down to April 30, 1935, these institutions have repaid no less than $1,340,000,000, or more than 72%. This rate of repayment is reported as being considerably in excess of that made by any other type of borrower.

Loans were authorized by the Reconstruction Finance Corporation to 7,396 banks and trust companies in an aggregate amount of $2,350,000,000, but of this sum $345,000,000 was withdrawn or cancelled and $140,000,000 has not yet been taken out by the borrowers.

ODD OCCUPATIONS— IF YOU CAN'T GET A JOB, MAKE ONE!

It has long been said that no people on the face of the earth excelled Americans ingenuity. Most people from other countries are willing to admit that there is little chance in getting the better of an individual American altho other nations sometimes trim Uncle Sam in some of their deals. This shrewdness existed even in the early days of the nation as is evidenced by the fact that the Dutch whose descendants are now the best of Americans bought New York from the Indians for $24 — and in trade. This proved a good investment for the Statue of Liberty and Brooklyn Bridge have since been sold many times to curious visitors for many times that amount.

Almost everyone remembers the "Apple Marys" and "Johnnies" who swarmed the city streets with their never-empty baskets of fruit during the early days of the depression and everyone bought an "unemployed apple."

R. B. Bilkorsky, who lives in the sunny state of California did not go to the ant as we are advised to do in the Bible, but taking his cue from that famous verse he turned to the worm and the worm turned to money. Yes sir! He converted a few acres of ground into an earthworm farm. We all know that fishermen and anglers would be good customers but Bilkorsky went out and found some more purchasers among the poultrymen whose chickens like the idea of such fine food without scratching for it. He also made sales to fruit growers who "planted" the worms in their orchard to keep the ground stirred up around the tree roots. And now, enterprising scientists have discovered how to extract a "worm oil" which when used as an ointment, has penetrating qualities like "snake oil."

A Washington family named Warner decided to capitalize on their fondness for animals and opened up a dog "catering" service. That is, they prepare meats and other dog food in an appetizing way, place it neatly on nice clean paper plates and deliver it to the homes of blue ribbon winners and to other families which desire such service for their pets.

Quite a few years ago Bertram L. Keyes, a draftsman, made cardboard models of buildings for his own amusement and that of his children. Then he realized how difficult it was for an architect to get a complete idea of how a build (Continued on Opposite Page) ing would look from a set of blue prints or plans on paper. But he reasoned, with an exact cardboard model built to an accurate scale from the drawings it would be possible to spot unattractive features and eliminate them before beginning the actual construction thus affecting a great saving since plans on paper are easily changed while completed buildings are expensive to alter. His work has now become well known to Washington, Baltimore and government architects.

One young man, John Willis, realized that rural inhabitants liked to read as well as their city cousins but sometimes lacked the ready cash so he makes use of his trading ability. To make his subscription offer appear more attractive he offers a small but useful premium with each magazine subscription in exchange for chickens. These he places in a trailer attached to his auto and disposes of in the city, usually netting a tidy profit on the poultry in addition to his subscription commission.

William Masterson wanders about towns and cities selecting houses which are not numbered plainly. He installs on the lawn a concrete marker with the correct house number on it and leaves a courteous note calling attention to his completed work. A few days later he returns to take back his marker or get his pay. Usually the home owner is so well pleased not only with the marker but the polite way of doing business that he pays for it and keeps it.

About four or five years ago Chester Landon was advised by his doctor that he must spend much of his time in the open. With his auto and trailer, a few tools but little money he and his wife began a tour of the country. He found that most "tin can" tourists acked good stoves and being handy with tools began making small sheet-iron stoves to sell at a price the tourists could afford yet at a profit to himself. Now his health has returned and he is ready to return to his job again.

THE SAME COUNTRY

By ROBERT V. FLEMING

Vice President, American Bankers Association

There is a growing appreciation, both on the part of the people and the Government, of the earnest and sincere efforts being made by bankers to aid in recovery. It is desirable that we miss no opportunity to foster public understanding of the bankers' problems. We are living in an age of complex and upset economic conditions. Our affairs are closely inter-related not only within the confines of our own borders but extend to other countries throughout the world.

R. V. FLEMING

The Greatest Difficulty

I think the greatest difficulty we have to overcome in America today is due to our impatience with the progress we are making towards recovery. We must realize that while the Government can help by directing some measures for relief and recovery, we must help ourselves by doing our share to give impetus to the Government's efforts. We have the same country and basically the same businesses, factories and people we had prior to the depression, and business initiative must step forward if real recovery is to be achieved.

The theory we often hear expressed that banks create business activity is wrong. Banking can only make a supplementary contribution to business activity. Bankers have the facilities and the desire to extend credit, but business must initiate activity by seeking the credit which is readily available to all worthy borrowers.

Let it be said for business, however, that business men are as eager as bankers to contribute towards recovery. I think some of the trouble lies in the fact that too many legislative measures have been proposed for reform which leave an uncertainty in the minds of business leaders as to their eventual outcome and effect. Consequently, they hesitate to expand until the probable effects of such legislation are known.

HEH! HEH!

"How about hay?" shouted a heckler.

"I'm talking about food for man kind just now," said the candidate "but I'll get around to your case in a minute."

No poorer music than singing your own praise.

ANENT CHAIN LETTERS

Just Try It

All these superstitions
Leave me high and dry,
For I walk under ladders
And never bat an eye.
I see pins lying
And make no passes;
I spend all my spare time
Smashing looking glasses;
I've shot alley cats and
Left 'em where they laid;
I step over brooms
And say: "Who's afraid?"
Flaunting superstition
Is what I do with glee
And do I break chain letters?
Just send one to me!

THE CLERK'S LAMENT

I'm growing old and stiff
From lack of exercise;
You know I work in a store
That doesn't advertise.

DROUTH GONE BUT BUGS STILL COST THE GROWERS FORTUNE

While Illinois gardens are not being ruined by drouth this year, gardeners and vegetable growers still stand to lose between four and five million dollars from insects if the season is average. This is pointed out in a new circular—Saving Garden Crops From Insect Injury—which has just been published by the College of Agriculture, University of Illinois.

Insecticides are essential in the control of injurious insects but cultural practices are also of great benefit in reducing the damage according to the circular, which was prepared by L. H. Schropshire, the field entomologist and C. C. Comton, associate entomologist, Illinois State Natural History Survey who are cooperating with the college.

Some 54 insects which commonly attack garden plants are listed in the circular. A description of each insect, its habits, method of injury, life history and the best means of control is given. Illustrations are included to help gardeners recognize the various kinds of injurious bugs.

Insects attacking each of the major vegetable and truck crops are grouped separately and control measures outlined for each of them. There are separate sections for insects attacking cabbage and related crops, potatoes, tomatoes, sweet potatoes, etc.

With insecticides playing an important part in the control of garden insects, the circular explains the composition, the kinds of insects against which each type of poison is effective and the precautions which must be observed in handling the insecticides. Arsenate of lead and the fluosilicates are not recommended for plants where the treated portions will serve for food, since there is slight damage of poisoning.

The two general types of insecticides, stomach and contact poisons, are described in the circular and directions given for mixing, applying and handling them.
