Bad Luck Again Strikes Allerton Family

Old Lady Luck has just about emptied her bag of ill-fortune at the home of Ora C. Hays at Allerton.

Climax of this family's recent run of bad luck came late Saturday night when the banker's 13-year-old son Junior was badly burned after he had dashed a can of kerosene into the furnace in the basement of his home. Believing the fire had gone out the youth used the oil to restart it. Flames shooting from the furnace firebox door burned him about the head, arms and hands, almost completely destroying a sweater and hat he was wearing. Junior is twin brother and singing partner of June Hays, Allerton radio and stage singer and imitator. He was the third member of his family to suffer ill fortune in the last few weeks.

The lad was acting as family fireman because both his parents were the other two victims of Old Lady Luck's ill will. Last December Mrs. Hays underwent a serious surgical operation from which she has not yet recovered. Four weeks ago Mr. Hays broke his right arm while attempting to crank the family car.

This Friday (the 13th) the Hays family is planning to lock all doors, cross fingers and stay at home.—Commercial News.

J. N. McElwee Announces Circuit Clerk Candidacy

Elsewhere in this issue will be found the political advertisement of John N. McElwee of Champaign, Illinois, who is announcing his candidacy for the office of Circuit Clerk of Champaign County.

Mr. McElwee was born in Vermilion County in 1893 on a farm just north of the city of Danville. He was educated in the public schools of that county and trained for business in Business College. Since 1910 he has resided in the city of Champaign. Was married in 1912 and at present with his wife occupies his home at 1103 West Church Street.

Upon coming to Champaign he was employed with the Johnson Piano Company, manufacturers of musical instruments. He remained with this company until 1913 when he accepted a position with the American Piano Player Company, of Champaign and Chicago. He remained with this company until 1915 when he entered into the business of retailing musical instruments for himself, continuing in this business until 1927.

Mr. McElwee served in the Illinois National Guard during years 1918 to 1921, retiring as a commissioned officer, first lieutenant.

Politically, Mr. McElwee has served his party as precinct committeeman for four years, from 1926 to 1930. Was appointed to the office of City Collector of Champaign and served in that position from 1927 to 1931. At present he is serving as Deputy County Treasurer.

He is a member of the Methodist Church, and fraternally is affiliated with the Masons and Elks. Mr. McElwee says he is making the race for Circuit Clerk on his own merits and is asking the support of the Republican party as a whole.

WDZ Dedicates New Improvements With Special Programs

Sunday, March 15, radio station WDZ, Tuscola, dedicates its new 250 Watt RCA transmitter and 250 foot vertical antennae, which just last Friday went on the air. Both the tower and transmitter house are located two miles north of Tuscola.

Special programs, featuring artists, civic and business leaders from the various cities and towns throughout the WDZ broadcast area, will be heard throughout the week. The groups to be heard will be the Champaign High School band, the Danville Consistory band, the Decatur Glee Club, as well as many others who have signified their intention to appear before WDZ microphones.

WDZ is owned and operated by the WDZ Broadcast Company Incorporated. Mrs. James L. Bush is station manager, Mark Spies, chief engineer, Dee Coe, sales manager, and Clair Hull, program manager.

Mail receipts of the first few days of broadcasting on the new power and frequency show that WDZ has great reception 250 miles from point of transmission. A cordial invitation is extended to everyone to visit WDZ's improved studios.

Owner of 1913 Chevrolet to be Presented New Car

Hiram H. Dohner, 70, of Quentin, Lebanon County, Pa., was found to be the owner of the oldest Chevrolet licensed and in daily use in the United States in a contest conducted by Chevrolet Motor Company recently. Mr. Dohner will be presented with the one millionth car built in 1935, a 1936 model.

Mr. Dohner owns and drives Chevrolet No. 470, a 1913 Royal Mail roadster, which he purchased from a Chevrolet dealer in Lebanon, Pa. He has already received official notification from Chevrolet officials, and will soon drive his present 22-year old car to Detroit, where he will inspect Chevrolet factories and take delivery of his 1936 model.

Mr. Dohner is a carpenter in Quentin, a hamlet in the valley of the Susquehanna, with a population of about 500 people. He has been a carpenter all his life but like the versatile and ingenious people who live in small towns, he can do many things. He can take care of an automobile in a way that would prove surprising to the modern motor car owner. The fact that his present car has served him and served him well for 22 years, piling up a total of more than a quarter million miles, proves the value of motor car care.

Bill to Punish Drivers Who Won't Use Mufflers

Little Meanie Makes Good in "Ginger"

Jane Withers, the kid who imitated a machine gun, told tales on Shirley Temple, tried to run her down with a doll carriage and proved herself a complete annoyance in Bright Eyes, has the title role in Fox Film's latest comedy, "Ginger," which comes to the Broadlands Theater this Friday and Saturday nights.

Little Miss Withers sets a new style in comedy entertainment in "Ginger," which kept Hollywood and New York preview audiences in continual laughter and caused the prediction that the film is a great beginning for what looks like a great career.

Little Jane registers a million dollars worth of personality and talent in her new picture and Broadlands Theater audiences are assured that they will love her as much in this story as they hated her in Bright Eyes.

When Jane, the little, independent, self-reliant product of Ninth Avenue, is taken into the Park Avenue home of the pampered Jackie Searl, there's a swelch clash with a world of comedy. O. P. Heggie gives an outstanding performance as the foster-uncle, and Katherine Alexander and Walter King provide an unusual romance as Jackie Searl's parents.

Mrs. Mary Fitzgerald Entertains F.T.F. Class

The F. T. F. class of the M. E. Church met at the home of Mrs. Mary Fitzgerald on Thursday afternoon of last week.

The meeting was led by Mrs. Emma Jackson. Scripture reading by Mrs. Cora Chafin, roll call by Mrs. Anna Seeds, and the lesson topic was "Vision and Service," conducted by the teacher.

The entertainment consisted of St. Patrick's contests and jokes, in charge of Mrs. Eva Brewer.

Refreshments consisted of shamrock ice cream, apple sauce fruit cake, meat sandwiches, coffee and mints.

Visitors present were Mrs. Nora Griffin, Mrs. Bessie Loomis, Mrs. Mild Walker and Mrs. Edna Dicks.

Members present were Mesdames Emma Jackson, Anna Seeds, Mary Fitzgerald, Anna Neal, Cora Chafin, Mildred Neal, Frances Smith, Eva Brewer and Rosa Smith.

Y. W. O. Class Meets at Rev. Turner Home

The Y. W. O. class of the U. B. Sunday School met Wednesday night at the home of Rev. and Mrs. J. F. Turner.

A pot-luck supper was enjoyed. The program, consisting of songs, scripture, prayer and a reading, was in charge of Mrs. Leona Bergfield.

After the meeting the Sunshine Friends were revealed and all present received a gift.

Those present were Mr. and Mrs. John Nohren, Mr. and Mrs. T. W. Bergfield, Mr. and Mrs. H. S. Clem, Mr. and Mrs. Oscar Witt, Mr. and Mrs. Arch Campbell, Rev. and Mrs. Turner.

The next meeting will be held at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Howard Clem.

Kids Are Just Kids

In this age of researches, surveys and investigations, it is sometimes encouraging to note that in most cases things are just about as sensible folks suspected before we had so much research.

For example, after an elaborate study of many school pupils by experts of Wittenberg College, it was discovered that students from large families were as bright as those from small families. Also that there was a fair degree of uniformity among students who happened to be the oldest, middle or youngest in their respective families.

Again, it didn't seem to make much difference in the intelligence of the offspring whether either or both of the parents were college graduates or not.

All of which indicates that the average pupil is just about average, no matter what happened to his folks beforehand.

Which, again and also, is what most of us knew all the time.

Headline English

In their search for short words which will fit in the limited space available to them, writers of newspaper headlines have developed a peculiarly effective, tho sometimes inelegant, form of expression.

In the headlines, an investigation, of which there are many, is called a "probe" because five letters are easier to handle than 13. Similarly, a collision is a "crash," an agreement is a "pact," to denounce is to "flay," an explosion is a "blast," an athletic contest is a "tilt," and so on.

Deploing what he considers the evil effects of newspaper English, Dr. Hopkins of the University of Kansas said that teachers were duty bound to take a stand against it, but significantly added: "In theory that is our stand, but it does us little good to take any stand. We might as well quit and let the language go its way. It will anyway."

And that probably covers all that is to be said on the subject.

St. Patrick's Day

On March 17 St. Patrick's day is celebrated as the national festival of Ireland and its observance is more or less general among Irishmen and their descendants throughout the world. The date is said to be that of St. Patrick's death, but even the year is not known, although it is thought to have been about 469 A. D.

Three noted Patricks are said to have flourished in Ireland during this period, and accounts concerning them are so obscure and confusing as to cause some doubts as to whether St. Patrick was a real or only a legendary personage.

According to tradition, however, St. Patrick was born in Britain and played an important part in introducing Christianity into Ireland, after six years in slavery into which he was sold by hostile Scots, who abducted him at the age of 16.

Finally making his escape, he decided to devote his life to the conversion of the Irish. His mission as a priest began about the year 425, and he became a bishop about 441. His ministry is said to have been attended with much success, hence his designation as Ireland's patron saint, although not an Irishman himself.

Whatever the truth about these matters, the living fact is that the name of St. Patrick is revered by Irishmen the world over, who commemorate him by "the wearing of the green" on each 17th day of March.

Sidelights

A most convincing guarantee is given by Abe Wisbrod of Chicago, who sells bullet proof vests to policemen and others who have need of them. He allows a prospective customer to shoot him while he wears one of the protective garments.

John Williams, an attendant at a garage in Newburyport, Mass., answered a call from Boston when a voice asked if a bag of money had been found. Williams took a look and found the bag containing $762, which he returned to the anxious truck driver who had lost it.

By means of a photo-electric cell, light from a century old candle in London switched on the lights in the new Museum of Science and Industry in New York a few nights ago. The candle rested on a desk once used by Michael Faraday, the great pioneer in electrical development.

A Washington correspondent says the idea that all United States Senators talk a lot is wrong. He says that of the 96 senators there are 25 who never speak on the floor of the senate; another 25 seldom talk, and 30 who talk occasionally. The remaining 16 do most of the talking—in other words act like senators are supposed to act.

Although her neck was broken in a railroad accident in 1913, Miss Jean Arnett of Red Bank, N. J., still lives and collects $700 a week damages from the New Haven road, in addition to $10,000 granted her shortly after the accident. Recently officials of the railroad asked the courts to relieve it of further payments to Miss Arnett, who has already received $193,000 as a result of her injury.

August Susskraut, a farmer of Trevnitz, Germany, has trained a team of goldfish to come rushing to their meals whenever he fires a revolver.

L. M. Price, 22-year-old farm hand, of Johnson City, Tenn., advertised for a wife in the city newspaper and has received 35 answers so far.

Charles Rachen of Chicago offered his wife three-fourths of his income when summoned for non-support. Then it developed he was out of work.

Bogus Time Brings Confusion in Chicago

Chicagoans are angered as they have not been in years over Mayor Kelly's arbitrary action in forcing his city council to put the city on Eastern Standard Time March 1, moving all clocks up an hour, without a referendum.

Offices of the Cook county recorder, clerk and treasurer are now operating in violation of the state law which provides that they shall be open from 9 a. m. to 5 p. m., central time. They are open from 7:30 a. m. to 4 p. m., central time.

The Marriage Problem

By WARNER FABIAN
Unknown Author of "Flaming Youth,"
"Sailors' Wives," etc.

Marriage Going Out of Favor but Not Out of Fashion

MUCH depends upon whether this is to be prophecy or a guessing contest. If it is prophecy I should prefer that some one else should do it. I have yet to meet the married pair daring enough (after the first rapturous certainties of the honeymoon) to forecast what their own individual case of marriage will become twenty years from now. Multiply the twenty by five, and the single instance by several billions, and the problem presents what might conservatively be called prophetic difficulties.

But any one may enter a guessing bee, and my best guess on the future, based upon considerations of the past and present, is that the world will be so profoundly different in 2035 A. D. that unless marriage alters to suit the new conditions it will find itself as anachronistic as a velocipede on Broadway.

Already matrimony is going out of favor. By this I do not for a moment mean that it is going out of fashion, which would be much more serious and alarming. But nobody seems to think well of it as practiced at present.

It is the most discussed topic wherever the socially elect are gathered together and wherever a topic is widely and heatedly discussed it is because people are discontented with the present status. The general opinion is that marriage is not as advertised and that something ought to be done about it. I have not yet heard what.

In seeking alleviation for an uncomfortable condition (even a hundred years hence) the essential preliminary is to find out what is wrong. As women are the factors most vitally interested, and, incidentally, doing the most objecting, it seemed reasonable to consult them. Accordingly, I put a query to three of the most intelligent ones in my acquaintance, representing three separate and distinct generations (an emergent flapper of twenty; a married beauty of thirty; and a disillusioned skeptic of forty); what, in their view, was wrong, if anything, with marriage as an institution.

"Too risky," said Twenty.
"Too permanent," pronounced Thirty.
"Too uneven," opined Forty.

That forwarded my inquiry a little, but not much. It did not seem likely that the chances of matrimony would become less hazardous, except, perhaps, as the condition itself became less permanent. And would not that mean merely exchanging old risks for new? As for Forty's indictment, there, indeed, conditions seemed to be modifying the force of it, and the woman to be steadily consolidating her strategic position.

"What will it be like a hundred years from now?"

I should have foreseen the answer, which was unanimous: "We'll all be dead by then." (Meaning, of course, "What does it matter, since I won't be here to see it?" Women are like that—well, some women).

"But, anyway," I insisted.

"A hundred years from now there won't be any such thing as marriage," said the emergent flapper, which was interesting as coming from the youngest generation.

"And I suppose there won't be any such thing as sex, either?" retorted the young married woman scornfully.

"If there is, it won't be in chains."
"Or in swaddling clothes, either—maybe," put in the disillusioned skeptic thoughtfully.

This sounded hopeful. "Now I wonder what you mean by that?" I said. But she would not tell me.

"Anyway," offered Thirty, "it's the most stable partnership yet invented."
"What do you mean, stable?" demanded Twenty.

"How many business partnerships do you suppose last?"

"I dunno. Most of 'em, don't they?"
"My husband says that 90 per cent of 'em flop. Well, even in our set, a good half of the marriages stick."

"They educate men for business. I wonder how it would work if they educated them for marriages as a partnership?"

It seemed that there might almost be something in that theory of educating people up to marriage. Not merely the physiological or the domestic science phases of it; those are elementary; but its underlying psychology.

In that case, might not the marriage of the future, based on an intelligent understanding, be a more promising experiment than the present haphazard and often painful affair is?

At the outset I said that I was not going to prophesy. Now I must retract. I am. To this extent:

A hundred years hence marriage will be different from what it is now in one important respect, that we shall know more about it both before and after taking than we do now. We could not well know less!

Quality of Hogs Same at Direct and Central Markets

As the percentage of hogs sold direct to interior market has increased, a belief has arisen that the direct markets are receiving a preponderance of the good quality hogs, which in turn is believed to have increased the proportion of low-grade hogs received at central markets.

In order to ascertain the facts, the United States Bureau of Agricultural Economics sent a group of investigators to 132 markets in 15 leading hog-producing States in 1933. Working in all types of markets, these investigators classified nearly 200,000 hogs as to quality and weight.

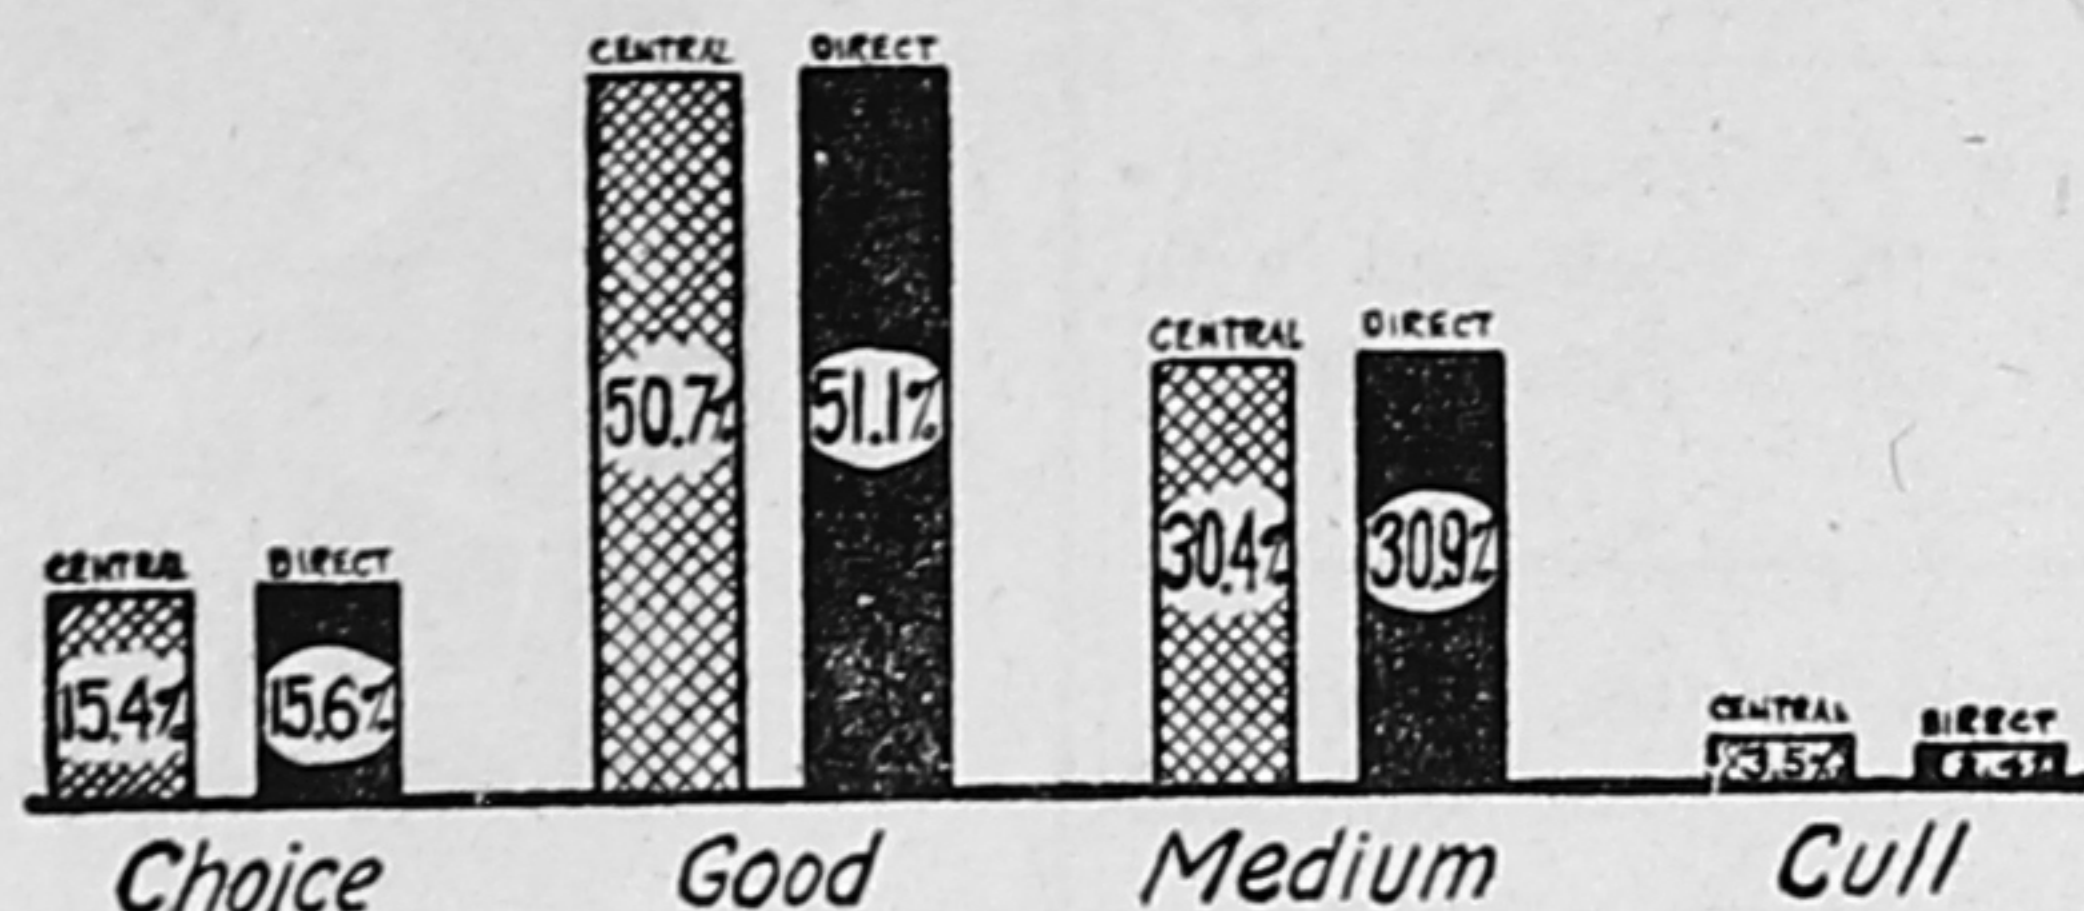

They found that, in general, all types of markets, whether direct or central, receive what is called "mine-run" of hogs. The direct markets received 15.6% of choice hogs as compared to 15.4% for central markets, 51.1% of good hogs as compared to 50.7% for central markets, 30.9% of medium hogs as compared to 30.4%, and 2.4% of cull hogs as compared to 3.5%. (See chart below.)

As a result, the government men concluded that if all hogs were sold through the central markets, the proportion of each grade would be substantially the same, as it is now when part are sold direct. They further concluded that direct selling has not deprived central markets of supplies of the various qualities of hogs sufficient for registerin; prices for the different grades.

Proportion of Each Grade of Hogs Received at:

Central Markets (Cross-hatched) Direct Markets (Solid Black)

100,278 hogs graded at central markets Source: U.S. Dept. of Agriculture
86,104 hogs graded at direct markets

Federal investigators, after classifying nearly 200,000 hogs, found that the quality of hogs received at the average central livestock market is practically identical with the quality received at the average country or direct market. Cross-hatched columns represent hog receipts at central markets and solid black columns show receipts at direct markets.

LITTLE LIGHTS ON LIVING

GETTING BY

AN OWNER of an estate one day noticed part of the rock fence, which bounded his large estate, breaking down. He called a workman to repair it. "Do just one day's work on this fence as I do not wish to pay more than four dollars for it," he told the man. "All right," said the workman, and set to work. At the end of the second day the owner was surprised to find the man still working, about to finish an excellent piece of work. "What, you still here?" he inquired, somewhat angrily of the man, thinking he was trying to augment his pay bargain. "Yes," the man answered, "because I never leave any job half done. The pay I expect is four dollars, the amount we bargained for, the time I put on it is my own." The owner looked at the man surprised, then said suddenly, "I have been looking for a man like you. I need you in my factory. Report there tomorrow at seven."

This fence builder reminded me of my great grandfather's favorite maxim oft repeated to us children when we could scarcely grasp its meaning. It became so much a part of me that decades later I am writing on that very subject—"what is worth doing at all, is worth doing well."

Thoroughness is one of the neglected virtues in this age. Youth is taught today from the examples of middle age to be clever enough to get by. Stupidity comes through being caught. This is a get-by age whose momentum has been gathering speed during the last half decade when much of the high finance of speculation in our country has been done on paper, as unearned money, instead of work of head, hand and heart.

To get by is not cleverness, but simply broken faith. Traffic laws are made to protect man, not to prohibit him. The misuse of millions by some of the so-called guardians of funds was not cleverness, under cover of the dark; it was broken faith. The treacherous, insidious teachings of the movies one can only comprehend when one hears the applause by the front row of future young citizens when the policeman, the defender of right and the law, is outwitted by some chattering churl of the silver screen.

College students, too, defeat their own goals oftentimes in class and examinations by cheating. Let us build up faith in thoroughness, for honesty comes this way.

5,619 Signs Required to "Air Mark" U. S.

To "air mark" the United States so that airmen need never be lost for more than a few minutes during clear weather would require only 5,619 air markers or an average of 117 per state, according to R. G. Parker, chief of the Illinois Aeronautics Commission.

Aviators everywhere will thank Mr. Parker for designing what he calls "Sky-Hiway Trail Markers," for they are composed of enormous words and the name of the town stretches out for a city block in length. Letters are twenty feet wide by twenty-six feet high and spaced eight feet apart. The average length of an air marker of this type is 275 feet, but the names of cities can be seen clearly by airmen flying 5,000 feet and higher. They are constructed of broken paving block, brickbats and other waste material and painted white to make it visible.

The Illinois air marking director is seeking to line up other states in a concerted airmarking drive. He says that the labor cost is only $125 per marker when relief labor is used and that the whole national program would cost about $702,000. The Works Progress funds would be used.

Illinois launched its program

two years ago and has most of its communities well marked.
