Do You Know Illinois?

By Edward J. Hughes
Secretary of State

Q. Which is the largest Supreme Court district in Illinois?

A. The first Supreme Court District is the largest. This district is made up of 24 southern counties.

Q. How many Circuit Courts in Illinois?

A. There are 18 judicial circuits. Cook County comprises one entire circuit and has 20 judges. The other 17 are numbered and have three judges for each circuit. Circuit judges serve a term of six years. The circuit courts have both original and appellate jurisdiction in either civil or criminal cases.

Q. What is the distinction between civil and criminal cases?

A. A civil case is a controversy between private parties over private matters. A criminal case is a controversy to which the State is a party, where society as represented by the State's Attorney seeks to enforce its laws regulating the conduct of individuals. A quasi-criminal case partakes of the nature of both the other cases.

Q. How many counties are in the seventh Supreme Court District of Illinois?

A. The seventh Supreme Court District is the smallest in the State having but five counties; Lake, Cook, Dupage, Will and Kankakee.

Q. For whom was Livingston County named?

A. For Edward Livingston, a lawyer and statesman, mayor of New York City and representative in Congress.

Q. How many Appellate Court Districts are there in Illinois?

A. There are four Appellate Court Districts to which circuit judges are assigned by the Supreme Court.

Q. How many college and university libraries are there in Illinois?

A. There are 52 such libraries in the State, the University of Chicago being the largest with 1,077,633 volumes.

Q. When do the Illinois State Conventions meet?

A. The Illinois State Conventions are held on the first Friday after the first Monday following the April Primary. Each State Convention nominates candidates for the electors of President and Vice President of the United States and for trustees of the University of Illinois. Each adopts a party platform and selects delegates and alternates to the respective national nominating conventions.

Illinois Peach Crop Short Says IAA Market Man

Severe cold winter killed most of the peach buds in Illinois, says H. W. Day, director of fruit and vegetable marketing, for the Illinois Agricultural Association.

All peach buds are dead north of the line extending thru Carbondale and Harrisburg, Day reported while in Chicago, April 17, for the IAA board of directors meeting. South of this line a substantial number of buds are alive although freezing and continued low temperatures during late March and early April further reduced the number. At that time the temperature ranged as low as 22 degrees. Ordinarily this temperature in blooming period would have killed all buds. This cold spell, however, was preceded by a few days of cool weather and this undoubtedly, had a beneficial influence. Had the cold spell been preceded by warm weather all buds no doubt would have been killed.

The cold spell in early April also damaged apple buds. Some damage was done to strawberries in the south end of the state.

RELAXING

CAN you relax? To relax means to slacken, and relaxation does just that to human beings, it slackens them. Some individuals grow more tense as the day grows, rushing hither and yon, tremendously busy with tremendous trifles. Seven days a week is this program enacted until haste becomes a habit.

Tension is a foe to modern living. Business folk often start the day tensely by trying to do two things at once—reading the morning paper while eating breakfast. The whole goal of American living seems to be to save time. We eat faster, we drive faster, we work faster, which means we really live faster, all to save time, and what do we do with it after it is saved?

Much of the work of the world becomes an endurance test in seeing how long we can hold on, because of tenseness and rigidity that comes of gaining it, and the arch enemy of the human race appears on our horizon, horns, hoof and tail, in the shape of FATIGUE. Normal fatigue is nature's way of calling one's attention to the speed limit as a protective measure from driving too fast. She takes this way to assert her own rights. If this sign is unheeded she sends a danger signal which one cannot ignore, in the shape of OVER FATIGUE.

Over fatigue claims a tremendous toll from the human race in the form of health efficiency and joy, and leaves in their places strained nerves, poor or half-done work, worry and irritability.

Physicians tell us that ten minutes daily, complete relaxation, mind blank, body limp, on couch, with or without sleep, preferably after lunch, recreates body and soul with renewed energy and outlook on life for the other half of the day. It is an art, however, and how to do it successfully must be learned like learning to play a violin. Relaxation of this sort should be planned in a day's regular schedule like meals are planned, for it is of equal importance to mind and body.

If ignored, accumulative fatigue cones sneaking up behind us and insidiously undermines us at our daily tasks. Unaware of its harmful influence we keep on, keeping on until some day, we fall to appear at our accustomed place and the physician says sadly, "Too bad, too late, this is a nervous breakdown." Think this over in time, and daily for ten minutes rest, repose, renew, revivify and rejoice, through relaxation.

U. of I. Good Example of State School Movement

Idea First Proposed and Developed by Native Sons.

Youthful, as educational institutions go, yet vigorous and substantial, the University of Illinois today is one of the outstanding examples of what a state university should be.

The establishment of this institution in 1867, along with the Land Grant schools in other states, came about as the result of a proposal originally made by Jonathan B. Turner in 1852. He proposed the setting aside of public lands to support industrial universities in each state, and particularly a system of universities or agricultural and mechanical colleges. This sound idea developed into the largest group of higher educational institutions in the world with a common origin.

Jonathan B. Turner was a product of Illinois. Other Illinois men aided in the fight for the development of this idea. By 1862 the proposal was made the basis of an Act known as the Land Grant Act, signed by an Illinois president, Abraham Lincoln.

Dr. H. S. Pritchett, former President of the Carnegie Foundation for the Advancement of Teaching, once said: "The rise of these great universities is the most epoch-making feature of our American civilization, and they are to become more and more the leaders and makers of our civilization. They are of the best. When a state university has gained solid ground, it means that the people of a whole state have turned their faces toward the light."

The University of Illinois has reached solid ground. When the University of Illinois opened in 1868 there was an original registration of fifty students and the faculty numbered three persons. During the present year more than 11,000 students are enrolled. The instructional staff, on a full-time basis, is equivalent to approximately 800 persons; clerical and administrative staff, laborers and others, bring the total to almost 1,700 persons.

Faculty Outstanding.

Many of the University's faculty are world renowned for their teachings and for their contributions to mankind. At their service have been a great physical plant and equipment which have made their scientific work possible. The people of the state, through their representatives in the State Legislature, have always ably supported the institution.

From a single building in 1868, the University now has 89 principal buildings, and 2,225 acres of land, all of which, with equipment, are valued at approximately $30,000,000. The main campus of the University is located in Urbana-Champaign, although its colleges of Medicine, Dentistry, and Pharmacy are located in Chicago.

The governing body of the University under the laws of the State is the Board of Trustees, a body of eleven members serving without salary, elected by the people of the State at general elections and therefore responsible directly to the people. The Governor and Superintendent of Public Instruction are ex officio members.

The president of the University is Dr. Arthur Cutts Willard, who assumed office in July, 1934, after having served on the faculty since 1913.

Although teaching is its most important function, as a public service institution the University is called on by many different organizations in the State to give advice and help in problems of widely different character. Its staff imparts information to individuals and bodies interested in agricultural, engineering, business, social welfare, educational and other fields. The calls for these services run into the hundreds every year.

While investigations and studies to find new facts are carried on by almost every department of the University, the primary function of two large divisions is research. These are the Engineering Experiment Station and the Agricultural Experiment Station, both of which have long lists of notable findings to their credit. The Bureau of Business Research, Educational Research, Community Planning, and Institutional Research, are other important non-teaching divisions. Also located on the Urbana-Champaign campus are three State research and scientific agencies—the Natural History Survey, the Geological Survey, and the Water Survey.

The Teaching Divisions.

The University comprises ten colleges and four schools, as follows:

Graduate School (for advanced work).
College of Liberal Arts and Sciences, including courses in the humanities and sciences, specialized curricula in Chemistry and Chemical Engineering, and preparation for the professional schools.

College of Commerce and Business Administration, including curricula in General Business, Accountancy, Commercial Teaching, Foreign Commerce, Trade and Civic Secretarial Service, Banking and Finance, Insurance, Public Utilities, Industrial Administration, Commerce and Law, and Transportation.

College of Agriculture, including curricula in Agriculture, Floriculture, Home Economics, and Nutrition and Dietetics.

College of Law.

College of Fine and Applied Arts, including curricula in Art, Architecture, Landscape Architecture, Music, Library School.

They Can't Spell

It is reported that among 298 young men and women who took a civil service examination in New York recently all but three failed in spelling.

This is not surprising to those who have had occasion to observe the spelling of the average high school graduate, or even that of some college men and women.

Why our schools do not give more attention to spelling is an unsolved mystery. Hundreds of hours are devoted to subjects which a pupil never thinks of after leaving school, yet the art of spelling, which must be practiced every day of his life, is given scanty consideration.

Perhaps it is thought that everyone should be permitted to develop originality. If so, the plan works well. Few show greater originality in any respect than in spelling.

Century Newspapers

According to a compilation by the American Press, 208 newspapers in the United States now claim more than a century of existence, of which 90 are at present dailies and 118 are weeklies.

A good many of the newspapers which were founded more than 100 years ago and are now in existence have had periods during which publication was temporarily suspended for various reasons. This is true of the oldest of all, the Maryland Gazette, published at Annapolis, which was established in 1727, or 208 years ago.

The oldest daily newspaper is the Hartford Courant, established as a weekly in 1764. The oldest daily which was started as a daily is the New York Post which dates from 1801.

Only two newspapers published west of the Mississippi river are as much as 100 years old, the Arkansas Gazette at Little Rock, and the Herald - Statesman at Columbia, Mo.

Two newspapers founded in 1835 were added to the century club this year, the daily New York Herald - Tribune and the weekly Advertiser at Edgefield, S. C.

HOW TO TRAIN CHILDREN FOR LEISURE

TO BE successful in anything these days one needs training because competition is so keen. If one had five centuries to live one might be content to progress by the trial and error method. We should build on the experiences of the past, though history proves that man moves slowly along this line. Our present-day status regarding war would be enough to prove this statement.

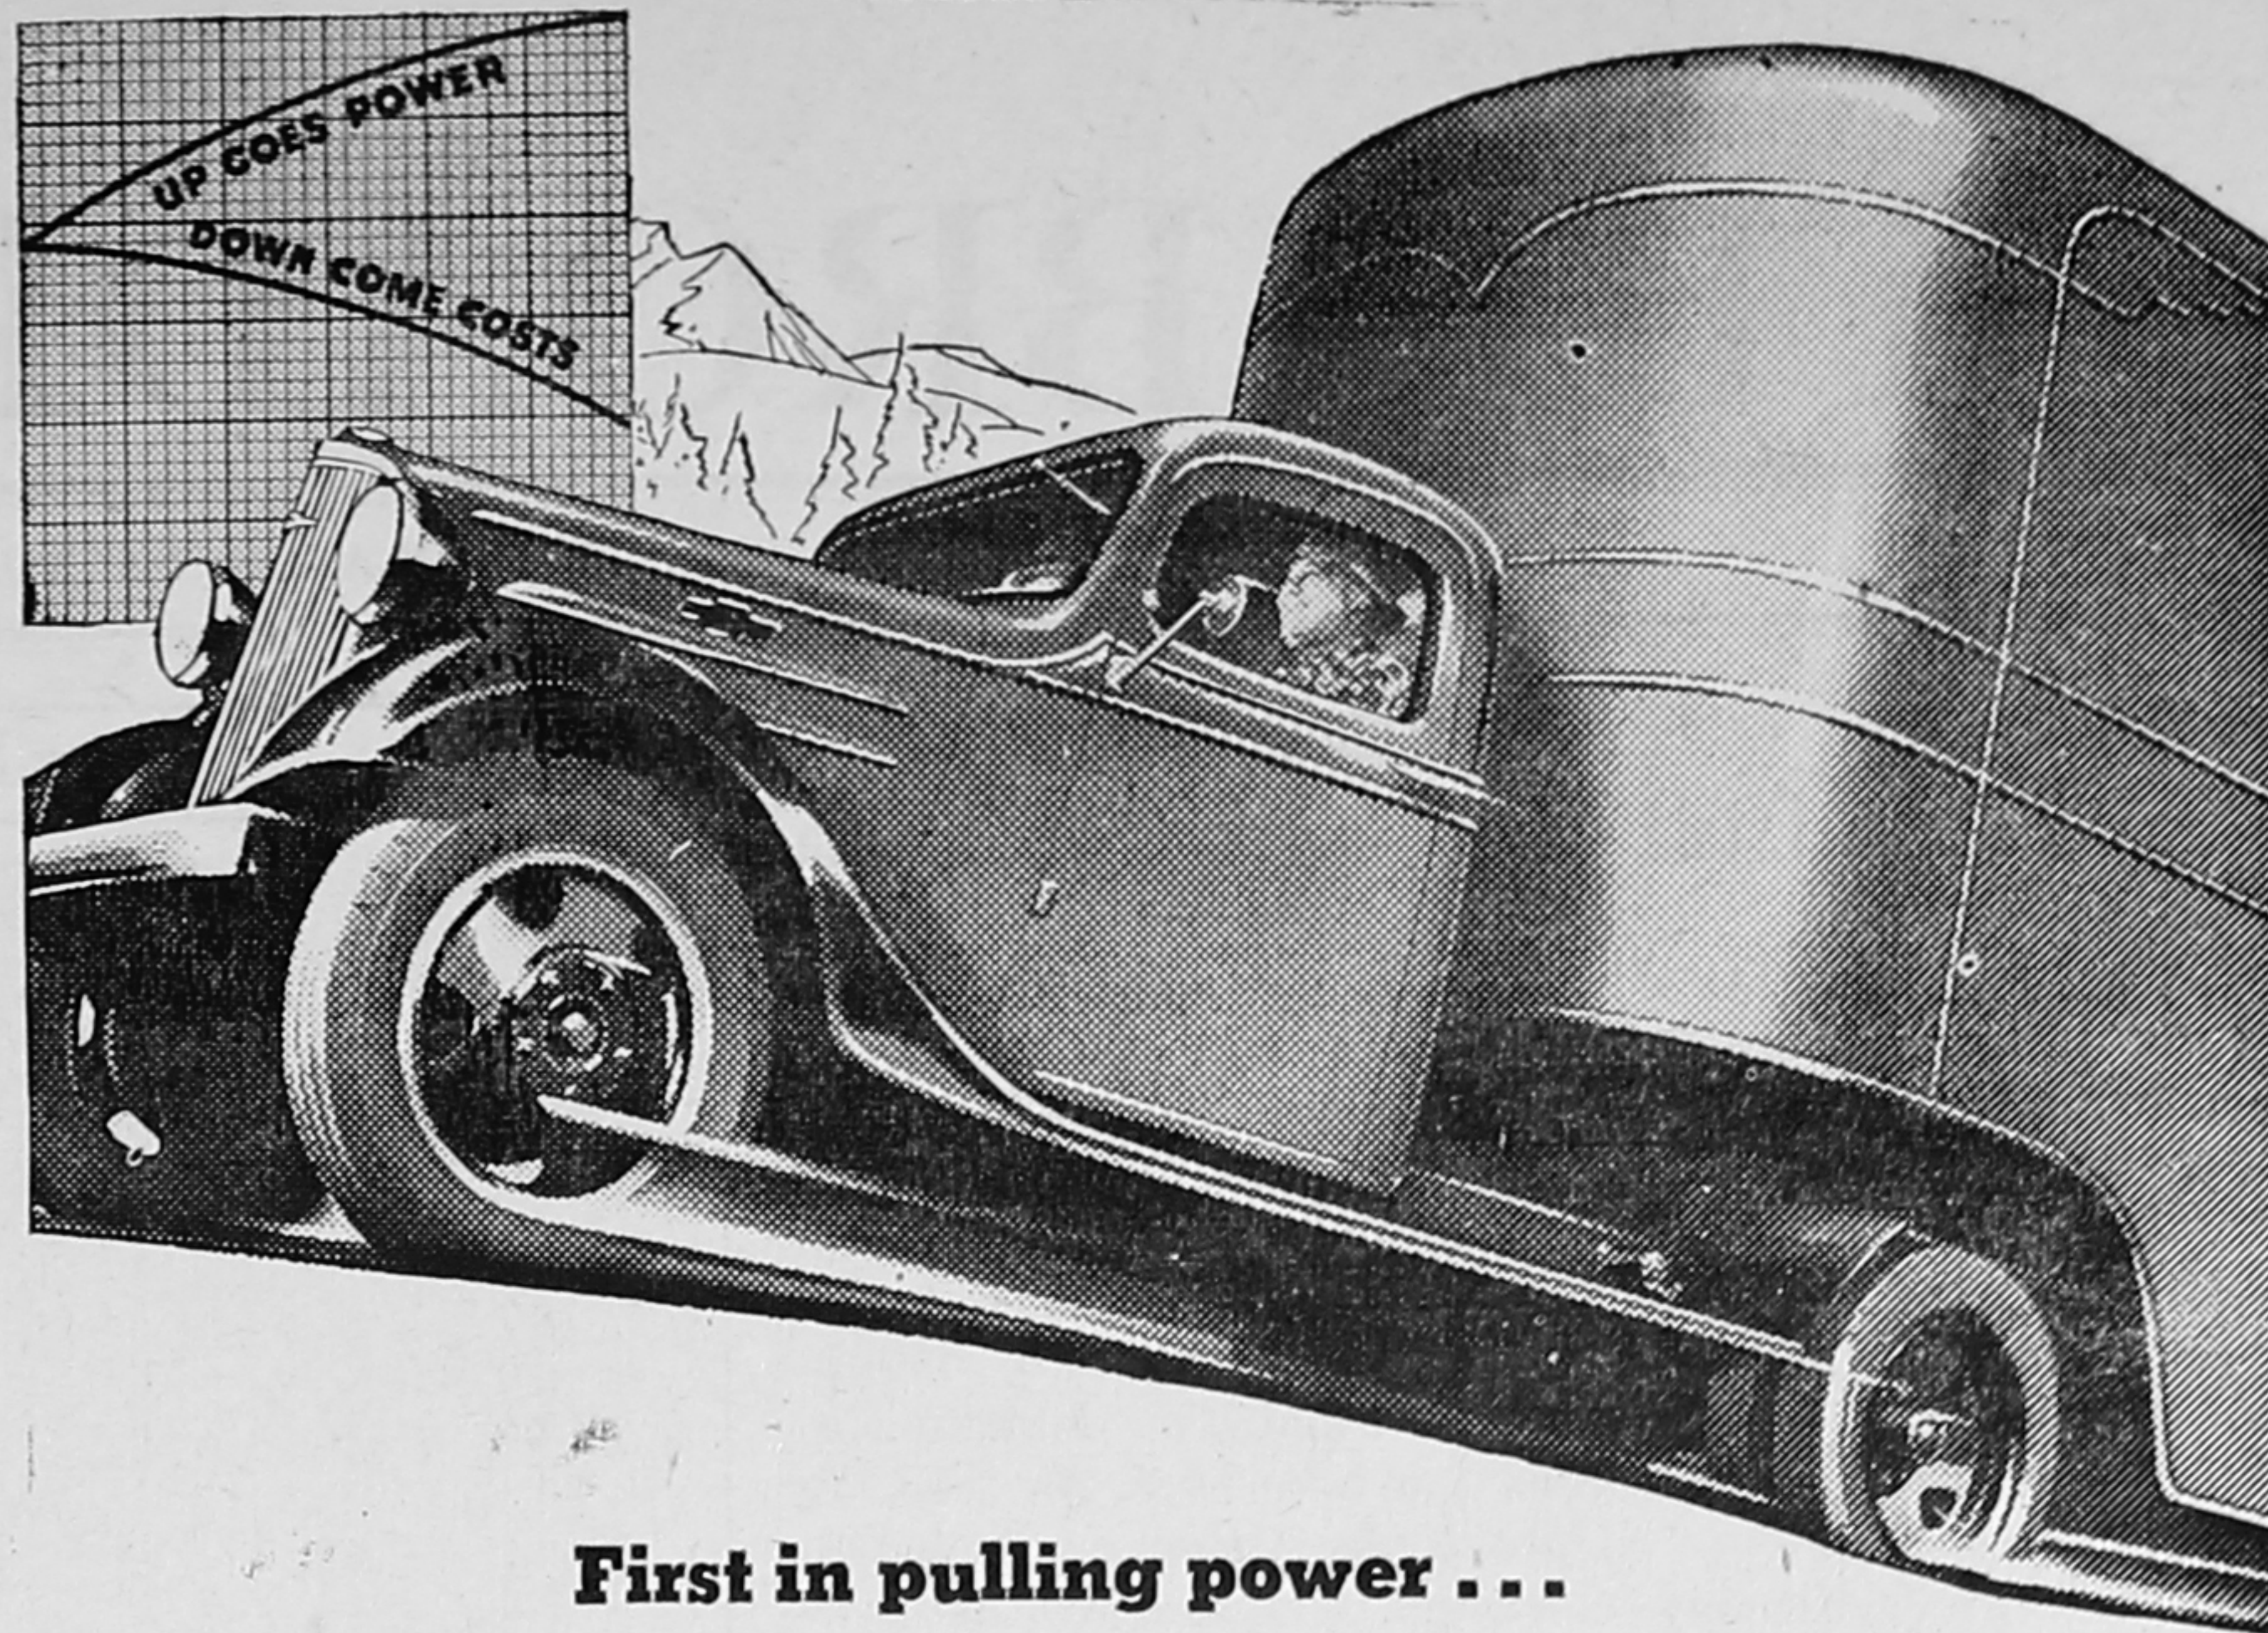

Learning comes through two avenues to the child, namely, precept and practice from the small home duties up through the professions. Today a certain part of child life is neglected from precept and practice, which needs as much direction and guidance as their schooling. This is their play time.

Play is an important and necessary part of every one's life. It is not idleness nor is it unoccupied time, for it recreates physically and mentally. If it fails to do this it "wreck-creates" and breaks, rather than re-creates and builds. For this reason it is necessary to train children in part of their play time, making it as educational as the other hours of their day. Planned play by parents, rich or poor, is a powerful force in character building.

A friend of mine who has three sons, seventeen, fourteen and ten, wondered what to do with them when school closed. I suggested to her to let them use the basement to build book shelves for their den. It may cost a little, but it saves more in character, by keeping them busily happy and happily busy.

Children should be taught in part of their playtime to be industrious and inventive—for loving and knowing how to work is a blessed heritage. They should be given tools and materials to play and work with instead of finished, painted toys, soon laid aside when the thrill is gone. This learning how to do things and how to make things trains head, hand and heart, at the same time it gives the child a sense of achievement.

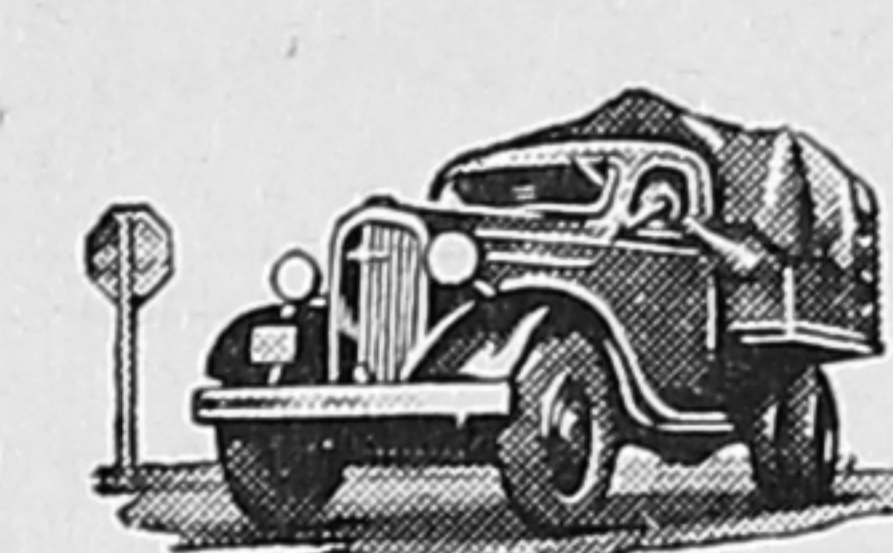

Much in modern life today tends to make our children lazy and base as they sit idly and listlessly, listening to the radio, auto riding, or watching a movie. Training for leisure enables them to grow stronger intellectually as well as physically in their playtime. Are we directing this creative energy of our children for their coming leisure so that they may enjoy the things that will enrich them throughout their lives?
