'Chute Jumper Plunges 5,000 Feet To Death at Tuscola Sunday

Tuscola, May 18 — Sherman Henderson, 32, a Terre Haute auto mechanic and parachute jumper fell 5,000 feet to his death, when his chute failed to open in a leap from a plane shortly before 5 o'clock Sunday afternoon. Henderson's fatal leap came as a climax to an air show staged on the L. C. Smith farm near the intersection of routes 36 and 45, by the Pierson Flying Circus.

More than 1,000 horror stricken spectators of the tragedy saw the doomed man struggle frantically to open the chute as his body shot earthward. Only the small pilot parachute, which is supposed to pull out the main umbrella section, was released.

His body landed in a field on the Wilbur Goodspeed farm and was found buried in the ground, every bone crushed. The body was removed to the Waddington funeral home where an inquest was conducted Monday by Dr. Myron Boylson, coroner.

Several theories were advanced by airmen as the cause of the accident. One pilot said he thought it possible Henderson pulled the ropes of both chutes at once causing them to jam. Another was that Henderson pulled the ropes of his emergency chute first.

The parachute jumper is survived by his wife and a son, the latter at present in a Terre Haute hospital.

Four See Arcola Boy Killed By I. C. Train

Apparently intent on catching up with a truck which he had helped load and which was preceding him, Clifford Grant, 17, of Arcola, walked in front of an Illinois Central freight train at the Main Street crossing in that city at about 2 p. m. Saturday and was instantly killed.

A coroner's jury which heard the testimony of eye witnesses at the inquest which was conducted by Dr. Myron Boylson returned a verdict which said "Clifford Grant died of a basal skull fracture after being struck by an I. C. train."

Wm. Murphy, Arcola, told the jurors of having seen Grant come running down the street and then slowing up. Murphy expected the boy to stop but he evidently did not hear the approaching train from the south for with head turned to the northwest he walked into its path.

His body was carried about 30 yards and according to Dr. Barnes who was called immediately, Grant had one leg severed, the other badly broken and his chest crushed in addition to the skull fracture.—Tuscola Review.

Appendicitis and Age

The age at which most people develop appendicitis is in their twenties, with a preponderance of cases occurring about the age of 25, according to Dr. Roland M. Harper, who has studied 267 cases treated in a hospital with which he has been in close touch.

While the ages of patients ranged from 6 to 65 years, the average was 25, for either males or females, in city or country.

Dr. Harper points out that this finding closely agrees with the statistics of hospitals in various parts of the country, and may be taken as a fair average for the entire population.

Appendicitis, he says, is evidently a disease which generally attacks persons in the prime of life, like tuberculosis and typhoid fever. Except in a relatively small percentage of cases, it rarely attacks the very young or those past middle age.

Eat and Reduce

It isn't necessary to starve one's self in order to reduce weight, declares Dr. Kenyon, a leading woman specialist in New York, who prescribes a liberal diet for her too heavy patients. This is her recommendation for the day's meals:

For breakfast, a serving of fruit, one egg, plus the white of another egg, coffee or tea without sugar. For lunch a large serving of lean meat, fish or fowl may be taken, or a small helping of either with a glass of buttermilk or skimmed milk; also one vegetable that grows above the ground. For dinner a liberal portion of lean meat again may be taken with vegetables and fruit, but no bread, using a bread substitute if desired. Before retiring a half cup of orange juice is permissible.

On such a diet Dr. Kenyon asserts that 13 of her women patients reduced about 30 pounds in 13 weeks, while one lost 72 and another lost 74 pounds in nine months.

Real Aid For Boys

Boys everywhere in the United States are being given work and set on the path to self-respect and self-support through a nationwide program that just has been put into operation by Edward N. Hurley, Jr., of Chicago, president of the Electrical Household Utilities Corporation.

All the unemployed boy, who must be 18 or over, needs to do to qualify for employment is to write to Mr. Hurley for an enrollment application in a free practical instruction course. It is designed to make any youth at least partly self-supporting almost from the time he qualifies. Its effectiveness in putting young men on a self-supporting basis has been revealed by tests throughout the country within the past ninety days.

Shocked by the fact that 4,700,000 youths are not in school, and are unemployed and seeking work, Mr. Hurley has issued a call to fellow manufacturers to join him in furnishing employment for them and thus safeguarding them from becoming a drag on the nation for many years to come.

"The way to help ourselves is to help others, and the most serious phase of the great unemployment problem, the fact that boys everywhere need work and cannot get it, can be corrected by our co-operating to train them, employ them, and help them become workers and producers," says Mr. Hurley, who is one of the country's largest manufacturers of household washers and ironers.

What of Health Fads

The subject of how to live long is always of interest, which perhaps accounts for the eagerness of the average mortal to seize upon various methods recommended for promoting health and longevity, such as doing daily exercise to radio music and the like.

However, there are many who are skeptical regarding the real benefits of strenuous physical activity. One of these wrote a letter to the Cleveland Press, pointing out that Walter Camp, famed athlete and originator of the "daily dozen" died at 65, while he, the writer, had never taken any kind of exercise to speak of and was still in excellent health, although a great-grandfather. He added that "the longest-lived people are the physically lazy, but mentally alert."

Commenting on the letter, William Feather a well-known editor, declares that several years ago he adopted a vigorous health program, including vegetarianism, cold baths and the daily dozen, with this result:

"Acute indigestion led to the abandonment of vegetarianism on doctor's orders. Another doctor recommended discontinuance of cold baths. The daily dozen are still pursued, but faith in them has been shaken by the untimely death of their inventor."

Still, we may find many who swear by the health fads and feel that their lives have been saved thereby. As the proverb has it, "What is food for some is black poison to others."

A Prehistoric Monster

After being buried for ages in the fossil beds of northeastern Utah, the largest skeleton ever discovered on land now stands in Carnegie Museum at Pittsburgh, a striking example of the monsters which roamed the earth during the Age of Reptiles many millions of years ago.

This skeleton is that of a Brontosaurus, of the dinosaur order of reptiles, 100 feet long and 20 feet high. In life the animal weighed perhaps 20 tons. Alongside of it an elephant would seem as small relatively as a dog beside a horse.

The fossil bed from which it was taken is the most extensive deposit of dinosaurian and other reptilian remains ever discovered. It was found in 1919, and the site is under the protection of the National Park Service. More than 200 tons of bones and other remains of scientific value have been removed for study and exhibition, with very little duplication of specimens.

According to a statement by the Park Service, it is the belief of scientists that these prehistoric animals were originally imbedded in a sand bar in some ancient river. This sand turned to sandstone and was covered by thousands of feet of other strata of rocks, the whole later having been forced into an upright position by a great volcanic upheaval, which left the fossil bed exposed on a mountain top.

Through the patient labors of scientists who are continually exploring through such records preserved in the rocks, as well as among the ruins of ancient civilization, salient facts in the world's history which were totally unknown a few years ago are being brought to light.

Garden Note

The Chinese, in developing their gardens, often deliberately add a bit of ugliness for purposes of contrast. A dead tree may be left standing with glowing flowers and shrubs grouped about it. They argue that beauty will thus appear more beautiful.

Louis Meyer Decides to Change Places in Follow the Leader Game on May 30

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind.—Follow the leader! That's the game the leading race drivers of the country will play on the historic Indianapolis Motor Speedway May 30.

Just who the leader will be this year remains problematical. In the above illustration, Louis Meyer, winner in 1928 and 1933, car No. 36 seems to be doing an excellent job of following Kelly Petillo, car No. 5. And Petillo, grim-faced California Italian, proved himself a leader indeed. At the end of five hundred miles he was safely in front, and had hung up a new speed record for the distance of 106.24 miles an hour. Meyer vows he'll be leader this time!

Louis Meyer Seeking 3rd Letter in Classic

Professor Louis Meyer of the higher mathematics of speed will be looking for his third letter when the 500-mile race comes around at the Indianapolis Motor Speedway on May 30. The only active two-time winner, who shares the honor with Tommy Milton, Meyer is challenging again with a car of his own design. He finds the remodeled track to his liking and contemplates repeating the victories which brought him fame and money in 1928 and 1933.

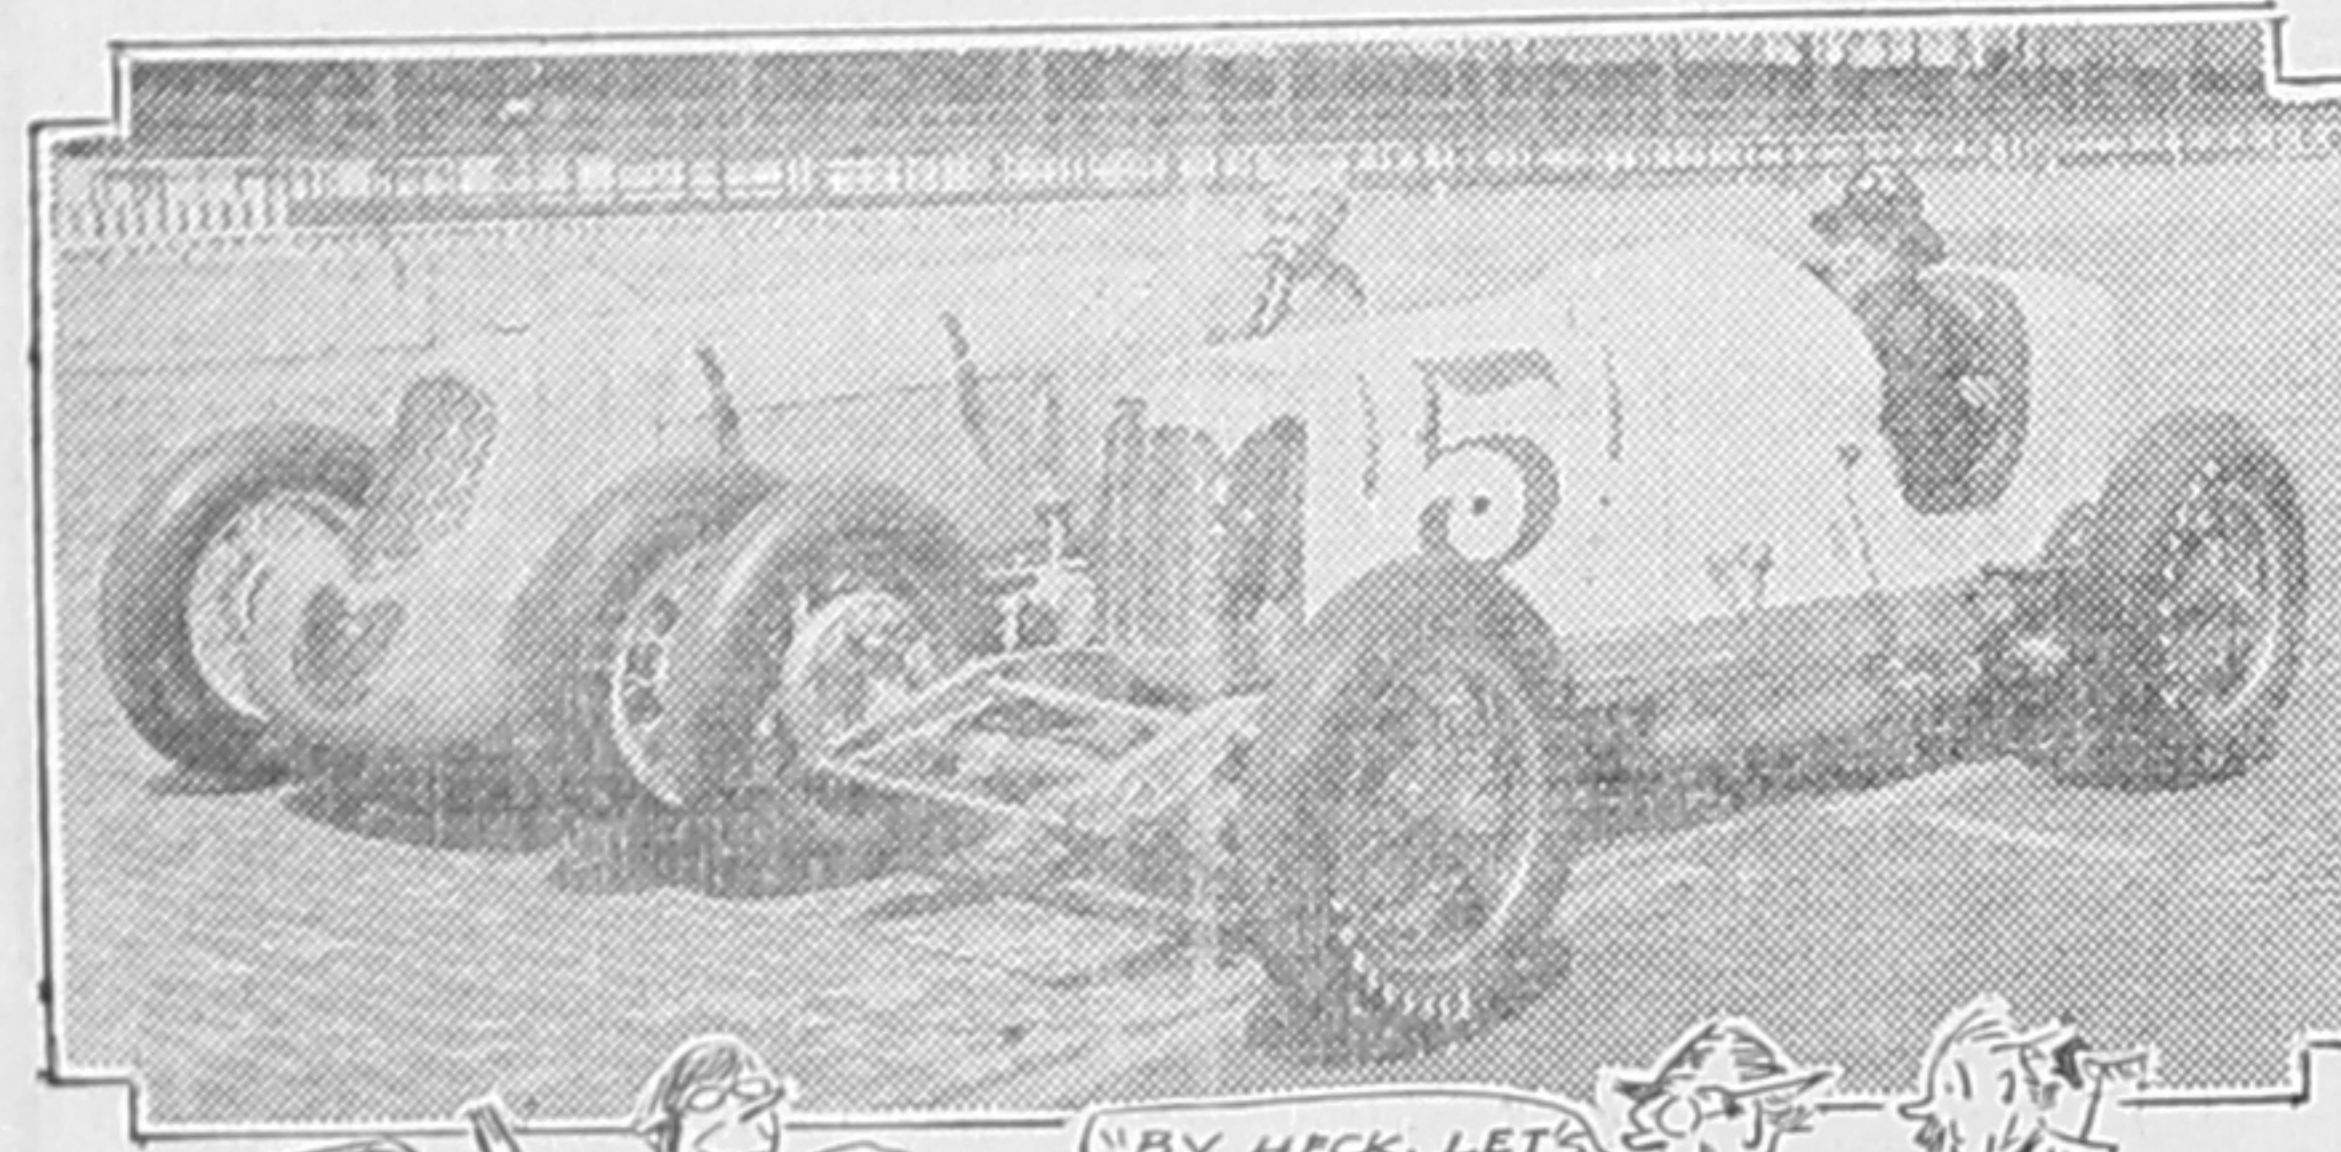

Exciting "Brushes" in 500-Mile Classic Keep Spectators on Edge of Seats

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind.—"O'mon Rex, pass him, pass him!" The huge crowd in the grandstands at Indianapolis Motor Speedway on the day of the big 500-mile race goes wild with ecstasy when one of their favorites pushes his throttle down to the floor and tears down the home stretch after another competitor.

dashing Rex Mays, coast wonder driver, car No. 33, is about to overtake Herb Ardinger, No. 43. This thrilling action picture was snapped during the speed classic last May 30. Similar "brushes" will bring the crowds to their feet again on this May 30th. Closer competition is promised on the re-surfaced turns and smoother straightaways of the famous Hoosier speedway.

Lum and Abner Can't Resist Urge To Ride Race Cars at Indianapolis

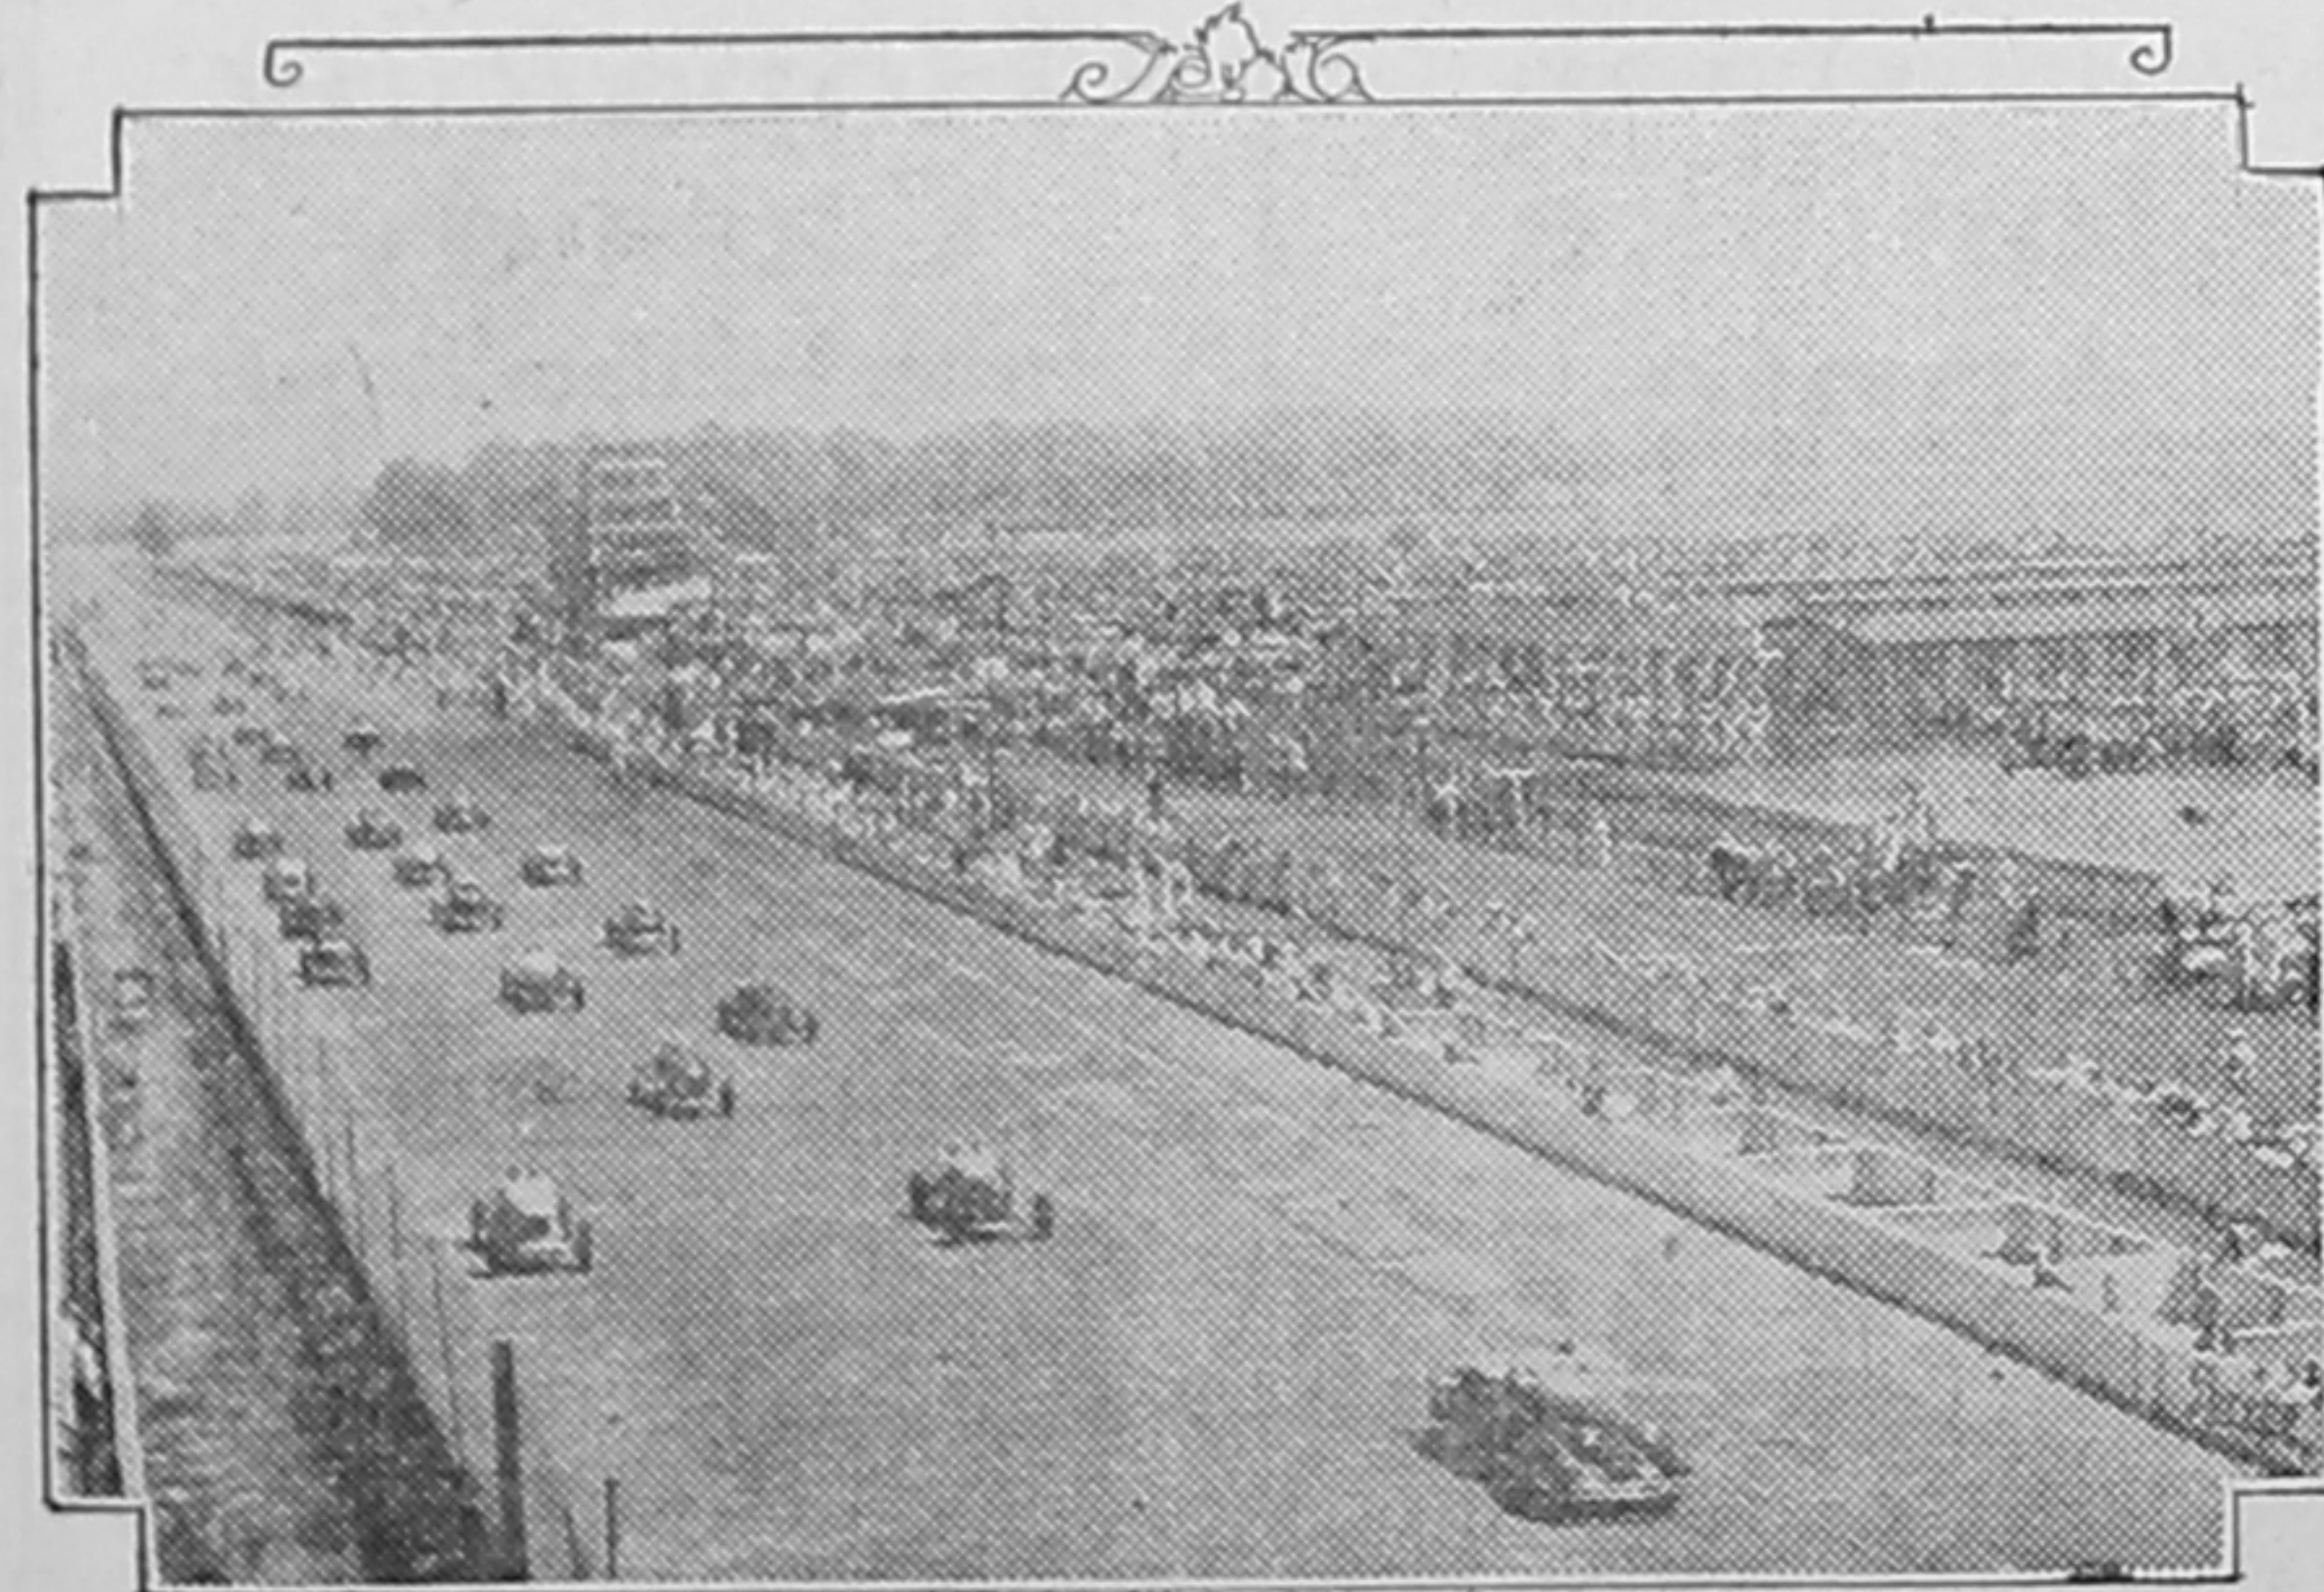

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind.—The urge to sit behind the wheel of a racing car has at some time come to everyone who has ever seen, or read, or heard about the 500-mile race at Indianapolis Motor Speedway.

Pugilists, baseball players, stage and screen stars, all have climbed into the tiny driver's compartment and, even if the car didn't run, gripped the wheel with fervor and in their imagination piloted it at a terrific rate of speed around the Indianapolis course.

up, were no exception to the rule when they paid a visit to the speedway to witness preparations for the 500-mile race May 30th. A pair of racing cars were provided for them, and they dutifully climbed in. They didn't drive the speedway at 115 miles an hour—but they rode it. Babe Stapp and Billy Winn, well-known drivers entered in the big race, took the wheels and sped the radio comedians around for several laps.

"By heck, think we'll buy a race car ourselves," said Abner when they stepped out.

Start of Indianapolis Race Provides Thrill Even for Hardboiled Scribes

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind.—They're off at Indianapolis.

That's a flash that sets the newspaper world into a hubbub of excitement on May 30.

For the thousands and thousands of fans packed inside the famous Indianapolis Motor Speedway it's just the start of a series of thrills that continue for more than four hours.

The accompanying picture shows the field actually getting under way with the official pace car leading the pack. As soon as it crosses the starting line, the pace car pulls to the side, and the 33 cars entered roar past on the long dash to fame and fortune.

For 500 miles, there are tense brushes between rival cars, mishaps that send some into the pits better, sensational spurts that bring crowds to their feet screaming encouragement to their favorites.

But the start is a never-to-be-forgotten scene.

J. F. The Marriage Problem

By F. ARNOLD KUMMER
Playwright and Author of "The Earth's Story," "The Road to Fortune," etc.

Divorce Will Decrease as Marriage Becomes Freed of Commercialism

THE last decade has seen such prodigious changes in our social structure that many persons are beginning to believe that marriage as we now know it is an outworn institution, soon to be tossed on the universal scrap heap, along with such anachronisms as hoopskirts, maidenly modesty and Spencerian handwriting. Certainly the rising tide of divorce would seem to support this belief.

But before we turn our thumbs down on the ancient rite, let us inquire somewhat into its purpose. Why do people marry? Not to gratify desire; there are simpler and less expensive methods of accomplishing this result. Not even to produce children; in spite of a theory to the contrary, most children are apt to be deplored until their actual presence causes them to be loved.

What, then, is marriage's real reason for existence—the maintenance of the wife, or the care and education of the children?

We might as well admit the truth. The latter should be the purpose of marriage—the former too often is its real raison d'être.

Marriage in the past has been a game of match-making, in which the mother, with her native shrewdness, and the daughter, with her little bag of parlor tricks, have angled openly for the man who could supply the maximum of material luxuries. It is becoming clearer every day that the marriages of the future will not be made on any such basis.

There are many women, unfortunately not deep thinkers, who argue that nurseries and schools maintained by the state can successfully supplant the mother. They may be right in the case of such mothers as they themselves would make.

But those who would do away with the home as a place in which to bring up children forget completely the imperious factors which play such a tremendous part in existence. Most intelligent men and women today agree that the whole future of civilization depends on the training given our coming children in the home. For thousands of years the family has been the unit of our social structure, and in the writer's opinion it will continue to remain so.

But marriage must be freed of commercialism. It cannot, in the future, be a matter of revenue only. Women in increasing numbers are entering the paid occupations—becoming self-supporting. Such women, not brought up to regard marriage as their only means of livelihood, will not marry the first man who comes along, ready to provide them with a "nice little home." They will select their life-mates more intelligently, more critically. And because they do, the writer believes that divorce, while easier of accomplishment, will become far less frequent.

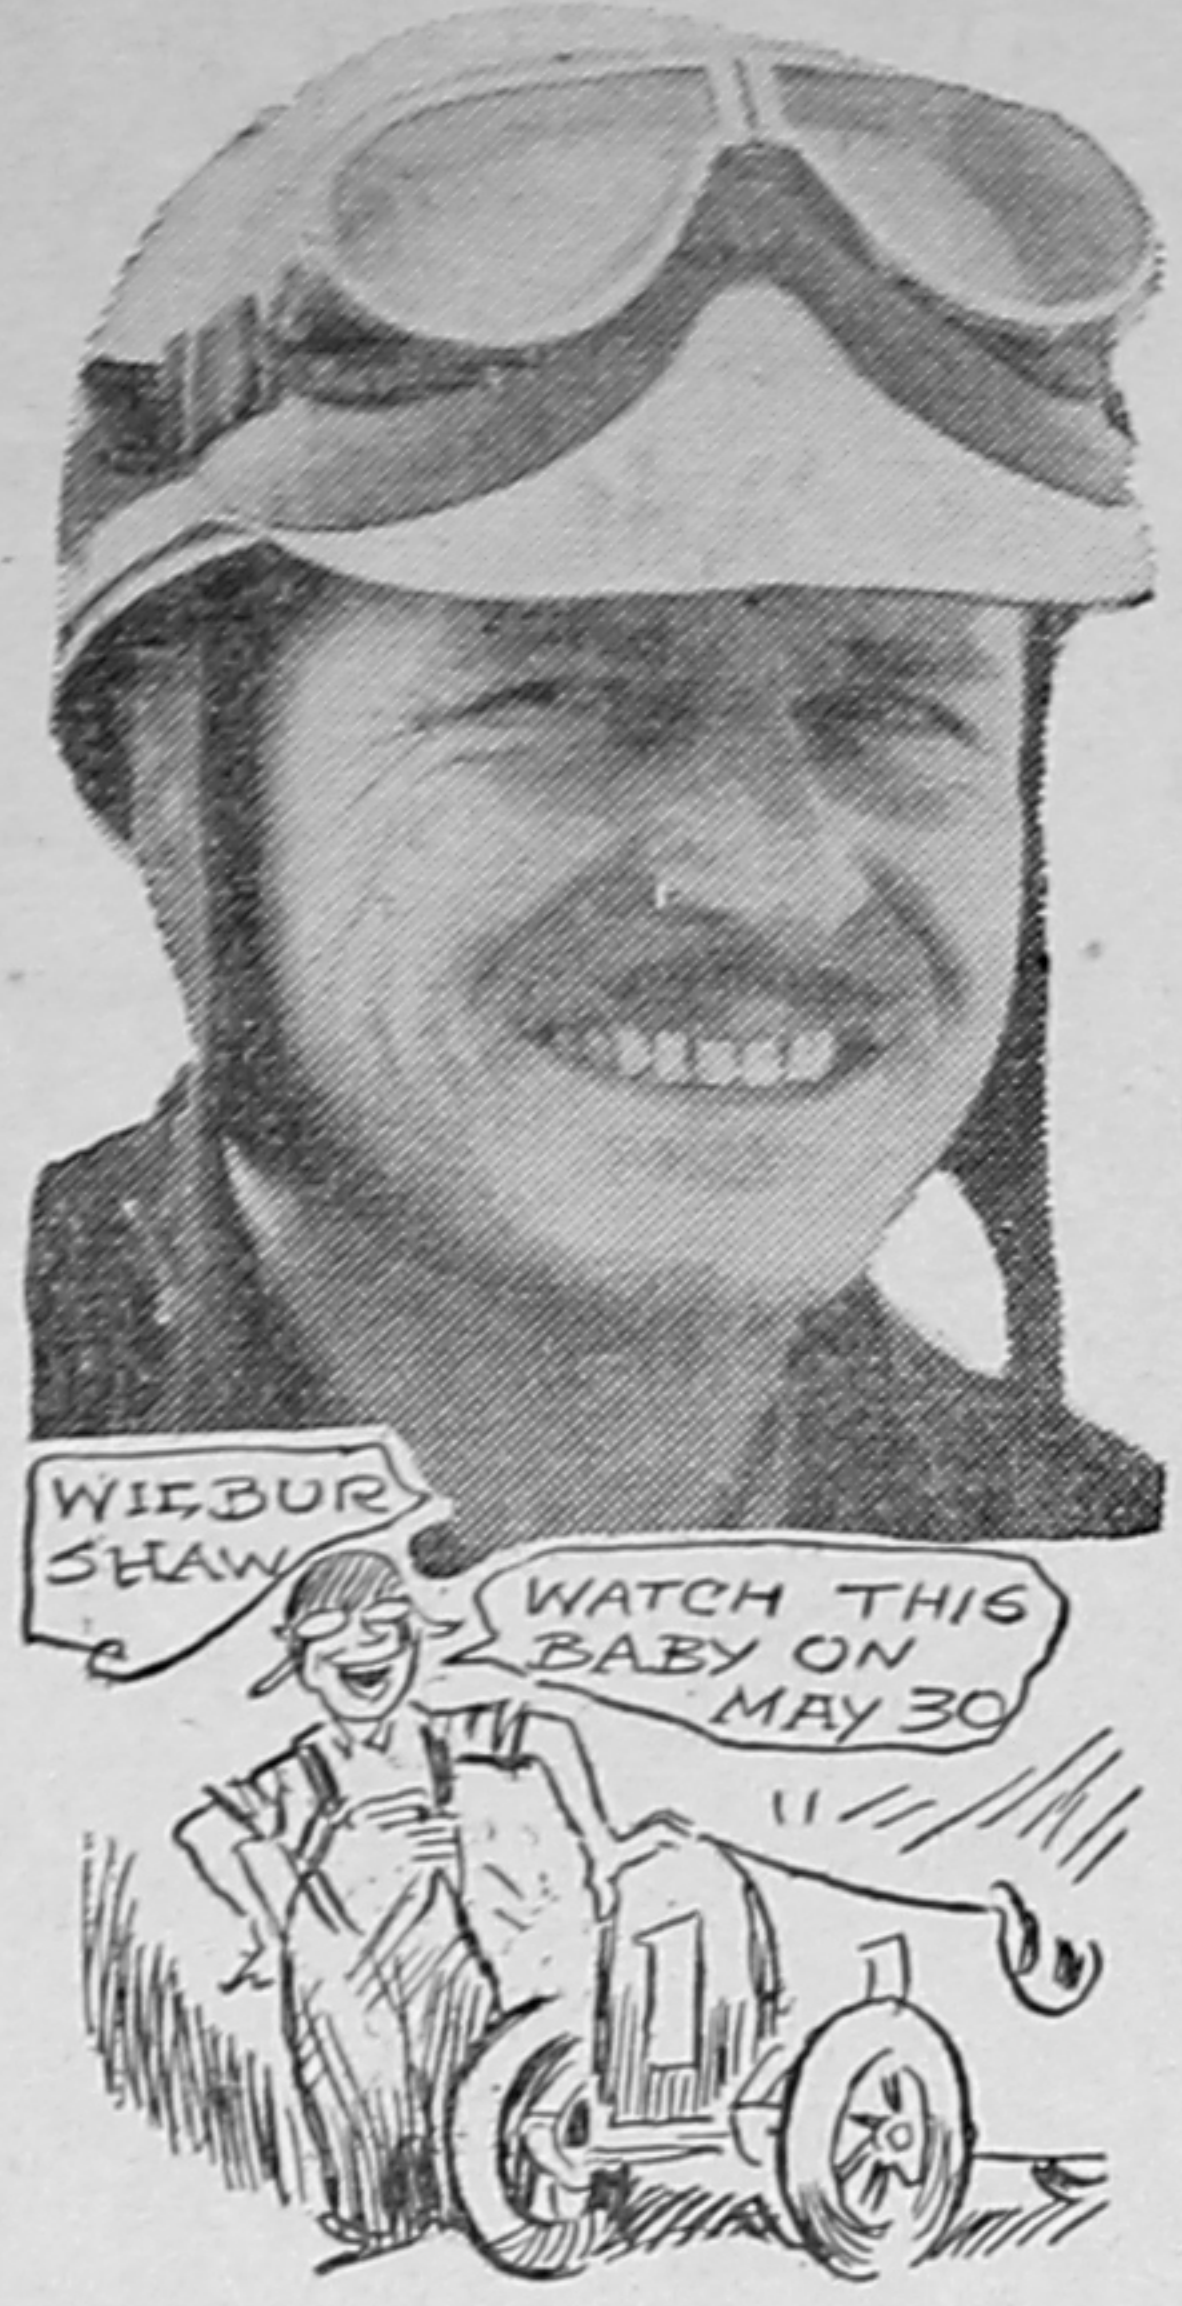

The reason for this is not far to seek. When marriages are more intelligently entered into, when the basis is no longer a purely commercial one, fewer of them will turn out to be failures. The professional alimony collectors who now clog our divorce mills will go out of business. Men and women seeking mental and physical companionship, will pick their mates with less regard for financial qualifications, more for those which make good fathers and mothers, good husbands and wives.

Women of today, thank God, are human beings, possessing brains as well as ankles. The silly mystery of sex, used for so long as an enticing veil, has been torn away. The would-be husband no longer pretends on bended knee that his inamorata is an angel out of heaven, immeasurably too good for him—to be turned in a year into a household drudge. Nor does the blushing bride pretend that she has never been kissed, and faint away if somebody mentions the possibility of children.

Instead, thoroughly sophisticated men and women, in the days to come, recognizing each other's weaknesses, will mate with very little thought of money matters, and very much of others that really count. Women will offer more than a technical virtue—men more than a ready check book. Children will be anticipated, expected, provided for. Both parents will share in the task of their proper upbringing. That is what marriage should be—will be, in the future.

New Car Gives Shaw High Hopes to Win

Wilbur Shaw has built a new car to give him that extra reach that he has needed so long and will aim it at the checkered flag of victory in the annual 500-mile race at the Indianapolis Motor Speedway on May 30. Twice Shaw has followed in the winner, placing second in 1933 and second last year to Kelly Petillo. He also registered a fourth place victory in 1927. This year he comes as the owner of a new car with high hopes of realizing a deserved victory.

Ranger Trophy

This Apache war dane loin cloth, displayed by Rangerette Mabel Rooks, will be part of the historical collection in the Texas Rangers' Headquarters at the Texas Centennial Exposition, $25,000,000 World's Fair opening in Dallas June 6. The cloth was taken from an Apache war party by Rangers in 1860.

Texas Beauty

This is Georgia Carroll, 17-year-old Dallas high school girl, who won second place in the contest to select the Texas Centennial Exposition's "Bluebonnet Girl." She will have an important part in the June 6 ceremonies, when President Roosevelt visits Dallas to open the big World's Fair.

'Doc' MacKenzie May Lose Goatee in Race

A would-be king will sit in a hot, fast-moving throne when the 500-mile race starts at the Indianapolis Motor Speedway on May 30. For Kelly Petillo, last year's sensational winner, has willed his seat to George "Doc" MacKenzie and has put the matter strictly up to the be-whiskered youth from Pennsylvania who has sworn never to remove his goatee until he gets the checkered flag on the famous Hoosier oval. His title as Eastern racing champion keeps the barbers in high hope.

Veteran Won Over By Dirt Track Imp

A smiling dirt track imp startled the old-timers by qualifying a smart little semi-stock car on his first trip about the Indianapolis Motor Speedway last year and won the admiration of a veteran who will back his efforts in the annual 500-mile race this May 30. Harry Hartz, veteran pilot and now car owner, has selected Ted Horn to handle his car during the gruelling grind this Decoration Day.

There are twice as many widows as widowers, according to statistics compiled by a large life insurance company. This is not due so much to the longer life of women, but is accounted for by the fact that most men marry women consider a bly younger than themselves. Old and middle-aged men, especially have this peculiar habit—strange as it may seem.
