We Nominate A Hero

Jack McCormick is 12 years old and goes to school. In one of his school books he read how one should act in event of an emergency. He remembered what he read. Keep these two points in mind—Jack read, and he remembered what he read.

Sunday afternoon a seven-year-old neighbor girl was playing with some companions in her home. She lighted a match while conducting a search for something in a closet. In a moment her clothing was in flames. She dashed from the house, the flames searing her body. Jack was playing in the yard at his home when the little girl came out of her home. In an instant he sized up the situation. In a flash there passed through his 12-year-old mind what he had read in the book. With the agility of his age, he sprang to the little girl's rescue. First he tore the burning clothing from her body. The book had said to do that. The book also said to smother flames. While he was tearing burning clothing from the little girl's body, another child carrying a towel he had been using came out of the house. Jack grabbed the towel and smothered out flames in the little girl's hair, and smoldering embers in her remaining clothing.

The little girl is in the hospital. She will live. She will live because 12-year-old Jack McCormick read—remembered—acted, in an emergency.

We hereby nominate Jack McCormick to receive the recognition due those who prove they can think and act intelligently when human life is at stake.—News Gazette.

The parents of the boy, Mr. and Mrs. Bert McCormick, were former Broadlands residents.

A heavy rain and windstorm visited this vicinity last Tuesday.

Flag Day, June 14

Among all the national emblems in the world, the American flag is generally conceded to be the most beautiful. It was officially adopted by the Continental Congress on June 14, 1777, in a resolution which provided that the flag be 13 stripes of alternating red and white, and that the 'union' be 13 white stars on a blue field.

Originally the 13 stars were arranged in a circle, and it was at first intended to add an additional star and additional stripe for each new state admitted into the Union.

But after increasing the number of stars and stripes after the admission of Vermont and Kentucky, it became evident that a further number of stripes would make the design of the flag less beautiful, so it was decided to return to the 13 stripes, representing the 13 original states and add a star for each new state. Thus we have our present flag, with 48 stars and 13 stripes.

In commemoration of the adoption of the flag in 1777, June 14 is celebrated throughout the nation as Flag Day, with appropriate ceremonies intended to impress all citizens with increased respect and reverence for the flag, and all for which it stands.

Cashing in on Vice

Somehow we never could quite follow the idea that a supposedly reformed crook was the ideal character for soul-saving activities, but many seem to think otherwise.

In an issue of a southern newspaper appeared an account of the former career of an evangelist, one Rev. Pereente, whose principal stock in trade seems to be his unsavory past record. The article doubtless inspired by the reverend gentleman himself, gives a rather boastful narrative of his former sins.

It declares that he has been a saloon keeper, a prize fighter, a bootlegger, and the operator of a gambling house. After completing a penitentiary sentence for violating the prohibition laws he got religion and entered the ministry.

Now if the gentleman's reformation is real and sincere, his past record should not be held against him. But why should he drag that record into print? The only reasonable answer is that he is trying to surround himself with a cheap glamour, in order to attract the attention of the moron element which delights in glorifying past and present criminals.

An Old Timer's Diary

A recent magazine article presents an interesting sidelight on the views and habits of an old-time Delaware legislator, Hon. E. Sutton, who is credited with being the father of that state's excellent school system.

Sutton was a member of the state assembly more than a century ago, in 1823 to be exact, and like many of his day and since, he kept a diary in which his acts and impressions were recorded. Some excerpts follow.

"Jan. 17, 1823—Attended state general assembly. Favor school bill. Paid three levies for oats for horse. Got some fine gin today. Took some home in my saddle bags. I believe in education." A few days later he wrote. "Roads muddy as hell. Broke home one-half gallon fine rye." On Jan. 25, 1823, he made this entry: "Roads worse than yesterday. General assembly killing time. Sammy Varden gave me a Qt. of prime brandy today. Planning to pass school bill tomorrow." The school bill was passed, and the rough and ready legislator who mixed liquor and learning was correspondingly happy.

Handicaps Overcome

An anonymous writer called attention to some of the handicaps which were overcome by those whom the world recognizes as geniuses and leaders of the first rank. Among those mentioned are the following:

Demosthenes, who became one of the world's greatest orators, stuttered in his youth.

Julius Caesar and Napoleon Bonaparte, two of the greatest generals and statesmen of all time, were epileptics. So was Mohammed, who founded a religion which now has more than 200 million adherents.

Alfred the Great, considered the wisest, best and greatest king, of England, had a lifelong internal disease.

Among authors and poets Carlyle was a dyspeptic, Byron had a club foot, Keats had tuberculosis, Milton was blind, and Pope was a hunch-back.

Darwin suffered from a nervous disease, and Beethoven composed some of his most majestic musical works after he had become totally deaf.

In our own generation, the great electrical wizard, Charles P. Steinmetz, was a deformed dwarf, and Helen Keller, one of America's most accomplished women, has been deaf and blind from childhood.

The list of world famous notables who have labored under serious physical handicaps might be extended almost indefinitely. Their example should be inspiring to any who are inclined to complain about minor afflictions or difficulties.

When Fighters Fought

Prize-fighting is not a particularly elevating sport, yet it has many devotees, even among persons of high official and social position.

Considering the unsatisfactory exhibitions which have been staged of late, even among fighters who have held or aspired to world championships, it is remarkable that the boxing game has been able to hold its customers so well. It is natural, therefore, that comparisons are being made between modern pugilists and old-timers.

Many have speculated, for example, on what would have happened if John L. Sullivan in his prime had met a fighter like Jack Dempsey or Tunney.

No one will ever know, but when it is remembered that Sullivan and Kilrain fought 75 rounds with bare knuckles in the last championship contest under London prize ring rules, the stamina of those old-timers can not be discounted. That was in 1889, since which time gloves have been used, and no championship battle has lasted more than 26 rounds under the new rules.

As Jack Dempsey has pointed out, while Sullivan in his decline was defeated by Jim Corbett in a glove contest, Sullivan went to his grave as the undefeated bare knuckle champion. In comparison with Sullivan, most of our modern fighters seem like molly-coddles.

Few are so deaf as to be unable to hear whispers of scandal.

A Yale professor says the weather costs the world a half billion dollars a year. But think of the raw material for conversation it gives us.

Sidelights

A New England youth, Robert Nobel, attempted suicide by gas. He turned it on and then decided to smoke a final cigarette. He was blown through the door by the explosion and landed safely in the yard.

The happiest man in the world is said to reside in one of the Ozark counties in Missouri. He has six fiddles, 10 children, 13 hounds, a deaf and dumb wife, and a moonshine still that has never been spotted.

When a robber tried to snatch Mrs. Alice Schiavon's purse on a Chicago street he ran into unforeseen difficulties. She tripped him, stamped in his face, kicked him in the ribs, hung on to him when he got to his feet, and bit his leg. He then dropped the purse and ran, she told police.

An American veterinarian called to treat a Honolulu dairyman's sick cow failed to inspire the confidence of the owner. Ignoring the veterinarian's prescription, the dairyman cut off part of the cow's tail and took it to a native priest, who invoked the pagan gods in the animal's behalf. The cow got well.

Another fellow who has fooled the doctors is William Haas of South Carolina, who as a young man was rejected because of a weak heart when he tried to enlist in the army. He has never been able to obtain life insurance for the same reason. Yet he is still alive at the age of 88, and his wife, who was a frail girl when he married her 64 years ago is still living.

Voice Around the World Will Open World's Fair

DALLAS, Texas—A voice around the world will open the gates of the $25,000,000 Texas Centennial Exposition here June 6.

Spoken into a microphone before the main entrance, the voice—possibly that of President or Mrs. Roosevelt—will travel over radio waves to New York, England, France, Japan, California and back to Dallas, where it will strike an electrical device inside the grounds and swing the gate open.

The words will require 9 seconds for their trip around the world.

Biggest Steer—3,100 Pounds of Beef

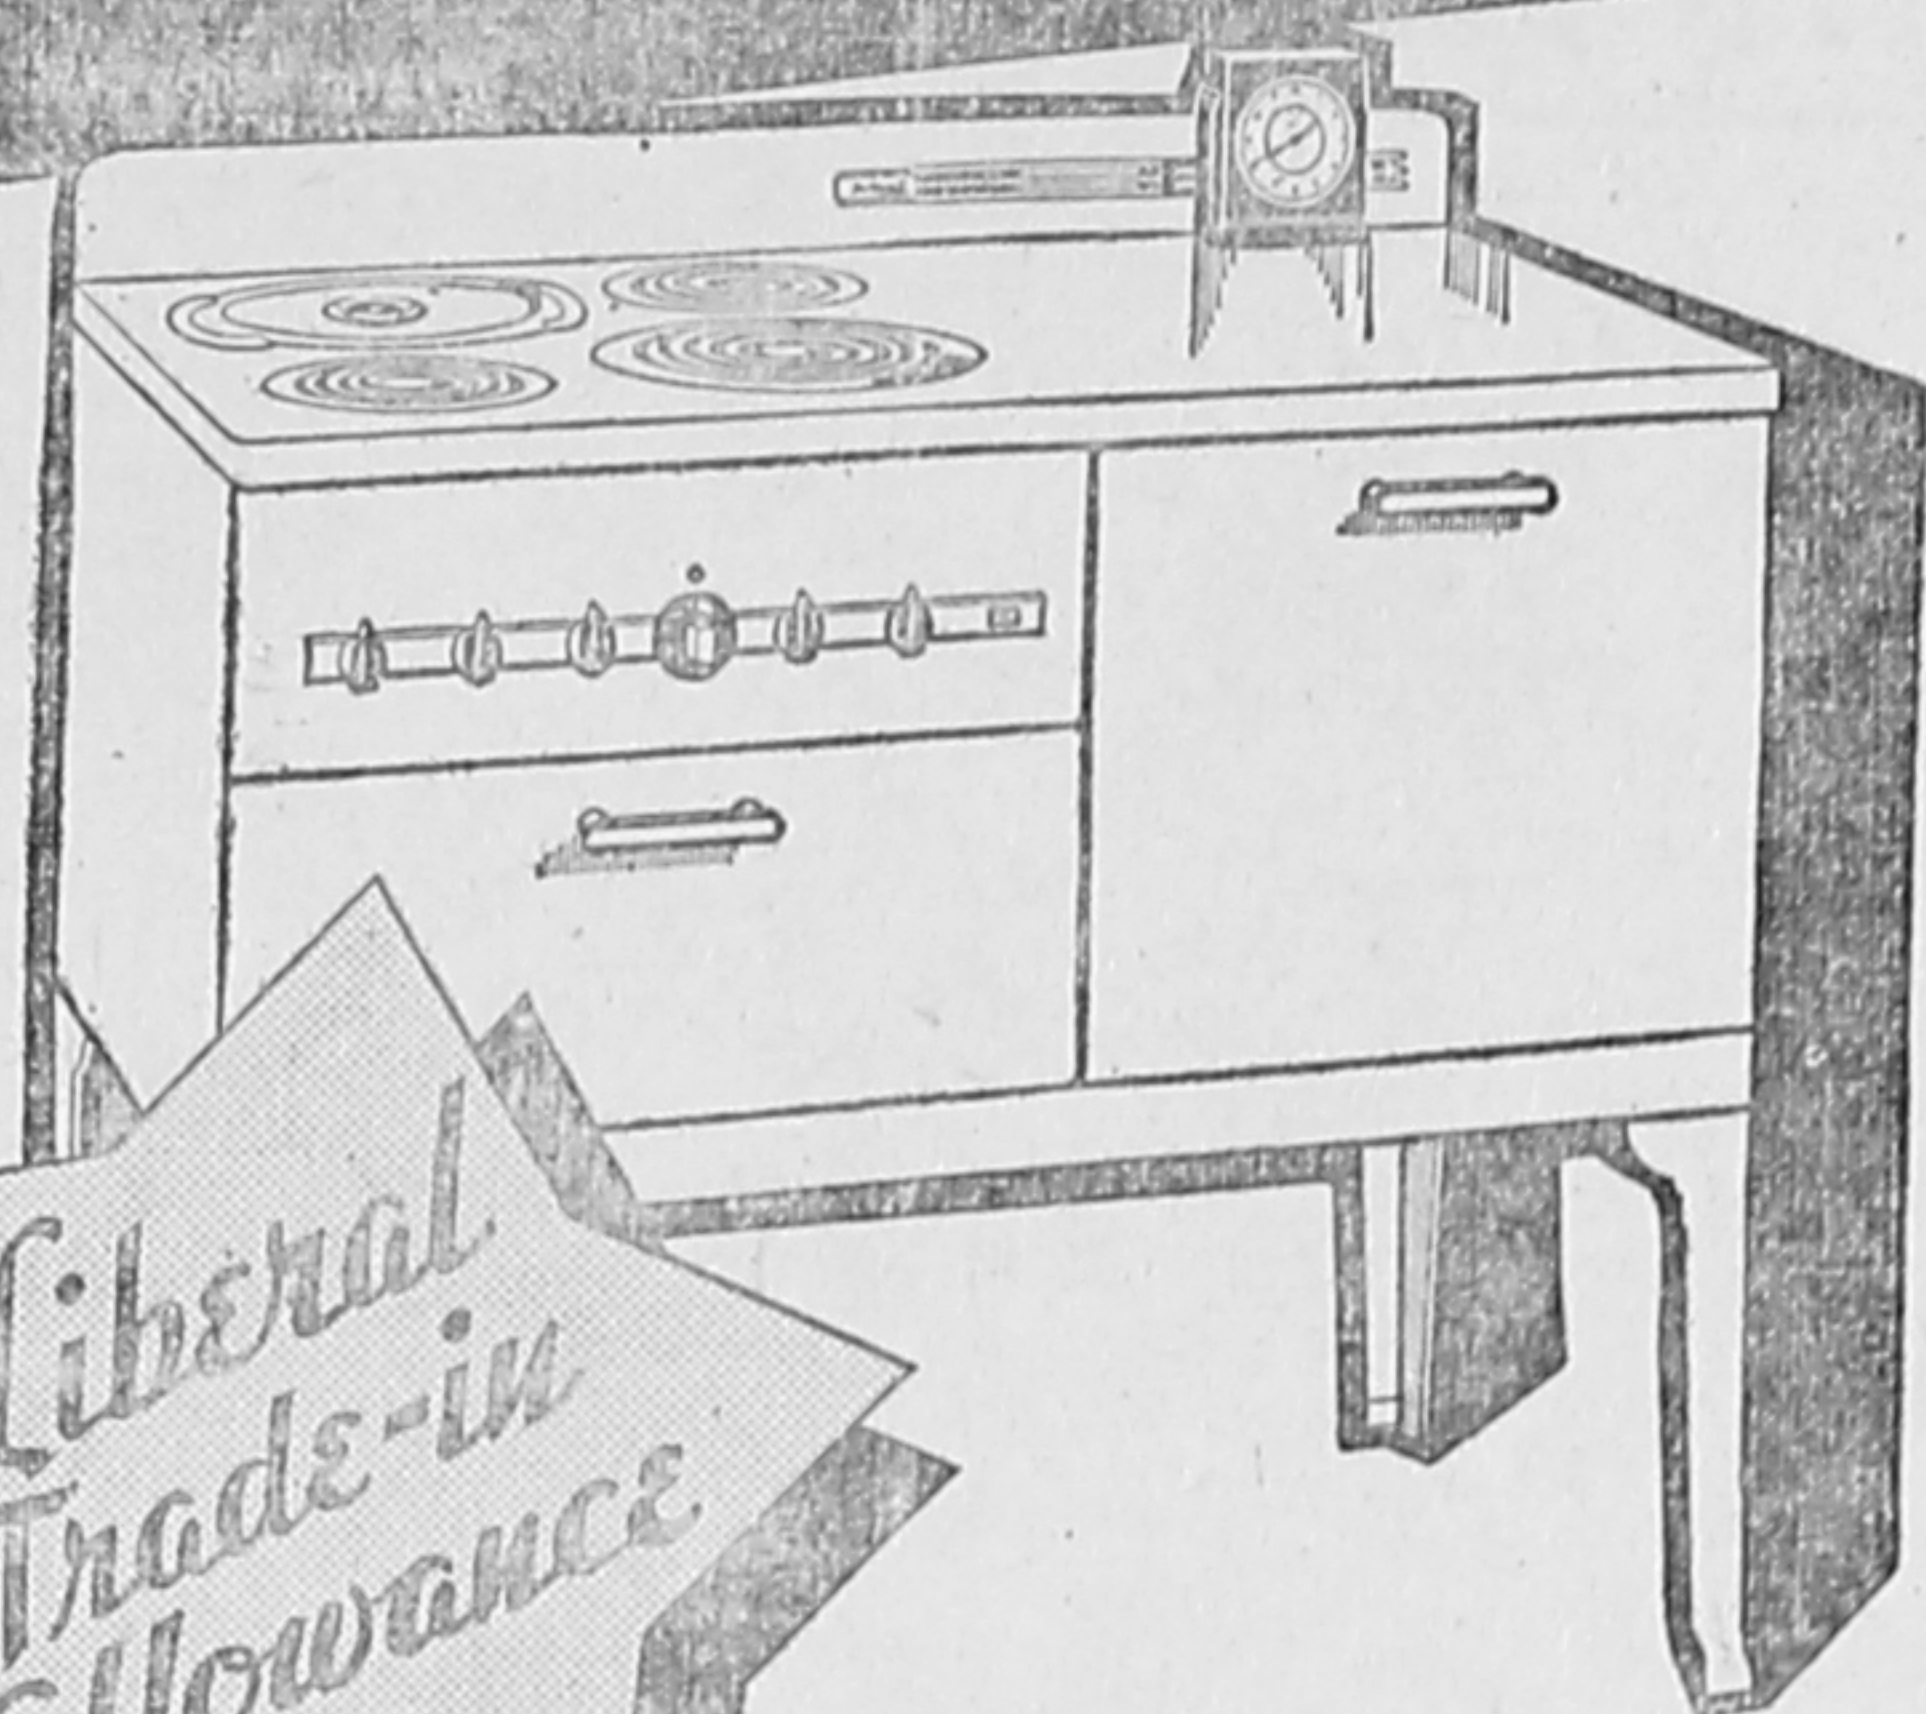

"Big Jim," once owned by the late Will Rogers, is the biggest steer in the world, weighing 3,100 pounds. Rogers raised Jim from a calf, then sold him and gave the proceeds to the Salvation Army. LITTLE LIGHTS ON LIVING

By MARIA LEONARD
Dean of Women, University of Illinois

THE SUN-LIT TOPAZ

ONCE when leaving France, I received as a gift a charming little necklace of silver and lapis lazuli. With the gift came to me the story of the maker of the necklace. A little Frenchman who owned a tiny shop in the Latin quarter of old Paris always informed his patrons, I am told, that he made his jewelry with gold, silver and love.

One day an American lady asked to see the most beautiful thing in the shop. Without hesitation he brought from a high shelf a tiny box, and showed his visitor a necklace containing a marvelous topaz, which he had bought after the war from a noble French family. "I wish I could buy it," the lady said. To her surprise he responded, "I am so happy that you cannot. Though I need money badly, I need its beauty more. Always when I am tired and disheartened," he said, "I hang my topaz in the window, the sunlight comes through it on my work bench, then can I make things more beautiful."

If that would sing in all hearts each day—"to make things more beautiful," what a different world we could make of this old planet. Wars would cease. Hearts of selfish greed would change and share with their neighbors.

We can make more beautiful the lives of those we meet each day, can glorify our work in office or home, no matter how humble it may be, can radiate from happy hearts the joy of living to even casual passers-by.

Early one morning sometime ago I was walking up the beautiful elm-bordered walk on the university campus. The day was glorious. There was still that untouchable freshness in air, trees and grass that only spring mornings have. It made one's spirit dance. I met a professor with his accustomed cane and brief case going to meet his eight o'clock class. One look at his frowning unhappy face, with mouth drooped and self-centered downward look, and my spirit halted, surprised that here was one, while walking under God's vaulted elms, constantly looking down. "No topaz in the window of his soul," thought I. A few steps further I met a freshman girl, whom I knew was having a hard financial struggle, working long hours after school, but, oh, what "a morning face" she had, radiant and lovely!

When the sunlight comes through the topaz of happiness, it will illumine not only our lives, but others as the sun-lit topaz made radiant the tired heart of the little shopkeeper.
