The door of every childless home in America should be thrown open to one or more of these unfortunate tots. It will mean happiness to the foster parents and a real chance for the youngsters upon whom fate has not smiled."

If our Christian faith be well founded, the adoption of a homeless child must be pleasing to Him who said "Suffer little children to come unto Me."

The Alabama's Quilt

In the Alabama department of archives and history in Montgomery is one of the most famous quilts in the world, which finds there its permanent resting place after many wanderings.

It is the quilt made by confederate women during the Civil War to be auctioned for the benefit of the fund for the building of the warship Alabama, which caused the Federals a lot of trouble before she was finally sunk on June 19, 1864, by the Kearsarge, off Cherbourg, France.

After the quilt was made it was put up at auction, and time and again the lucky bidder would donate it back to be auctioned again. Thus it passed through many hands, and from it was realized much of the money for purchase of the ship. It finally came into the possession of the family of Mrs. Mary Hutchinson Owens, who presented it to the state as a memento of the Lost Cause.

The Alabama was commanded by the intrepid Rafael Semmes, and during her eventful career of two years captured one Federal steamer and no less than 67 sailing vessels, besides causing the transfer of 348 Federal ships to the British flag. Her destruction by the Kearsarge, commanded by Captain Winslow, was a great relief to the Federals.

The Alabama went to the bottom of the sea, the Kearsarge was destroyed long after by being wrecked on a Carribean reef in 1894, but the Alabama's quilt wrought by loving hands in what they considered a sacred cause, is preserved for posterity in the cradle of the Confederacy.

OAN FARNELL, fidgeting with her handbag, waited before the Lamb and Lion inn in New York's Greenwich village, and anxiously scanned every passing face. Clearly she was on edge. When a hand touched her elbow, she jumped.

"Heavens, what nerves!" Amy Easton greeted her. "What's all the commotion? On the phone this morning you got all excited about something and then wouldn't tell me about it. Do you know it made me so jittery all day that I messed up three permaments at the shop? Well, then?"

"Oh-let's go inside," Joan faltered. "We can't talk out here."

They entered the inn and crossed the room, dimly lit, darkly panelled, decorated to resemble the main room of an old English tavern, and took their regular table. Their practice of once a week lunching together at this quaint place kept them as intimate as when they were schoolmates, though now they lived and worked in different parts of Manhattan.

"Well, what's it all about?" pursued Amy after the waiter had left with their order.

"It's Bill," said Jean, her hands twisting on the table. "I'm losing him."

Amy relaxed with a sigh of relief. "What, in a week?" she smiled. "You're all upset over nothing. Why, only last Thursday you were telling me how near he was to proposing. It It's just another girl, he'll be over that in a week."

"It's not just another girl. It's hibit to explain, in dramatic fashion, the Georgia Maxwell."

Amy's smile dissolved into wide-eyed gravity.

Joan nodded. "That makes it pretty serious, doesn't it? Georgia Maxwell, star of 'The Charming Fraud' and a very charming fraud herself. Her gowns, her smile, her figure, are big enough attractions, but there is her hair, that 'cascade of golden floss' that even the critics are raving about. And Bill . . ." Her voice broke and there was a moment's silence as the waiter arrived with their soup.

When he had left, Amy said quietly:

"Bill, too?" "Yes," nodded Joan miserably. "He saw her at a party the drama critic of his paper took him to, and he's seen me every night since then to rave about that hair of hers. He's even written poems to 'her tresses, threads of golden dawn.' Quiet, serious Bill! It's the most terrific crush I've ever seen anyone have, and when Bill gets an idea-" she choked and looked down at her soup, then pushed it aside and clasped her hands. "What I dread terribly is that she will notice him and he will amuse her. Oh, I'm nearly frantic!" "There, there!" soothed Amy. be dredged and made into beautiful "Don't you worry. We'll work out some way to bring Bill back to his senses."

"That's just what I wanted to talk to you about," said Joan brightening. "Working in a beauty shop you may be able to do this-"

They talked for ten minutes and two courses and finally Amy nodded vigorously. "We'll try it!" she said. "I'll try to do it and have it here for you next week." Two weeks later Joan and Amy again sat down at their table in the Lamb and Lion. Joan was now covered with smiles nd plainly thrilled with happiness. This time Amy was on edge. She chased the waiter away with their order and leaned forward excitedly. 'Will you tell me before I burst?" she implored. "I know that what we suspected was true, and I can see it's all fixed up between you and Bill, but what happened? After trying to help bring you two together I ought to know something of what's going on.' "Well, here's what went on," smiled Joan. She pulled off her left glove and extended her hand across the table. Amy stared at the bit of platinum and diamond that glistened on her finger. Her face expressed amazement, then dawning comprehension, then joy.

"Joan, darling, she cried. "This is just marvelous! Our plan worked perfectly, then."

"I'll say!" beamed Joan, "I took the lock of hair you managed to get a week ago from Georgia Maxwell's beauty shop to test at yours, and when we found our guess was correct showed it to Bill that night and told him whose it was."

"And was he surprised?" "That, and lots of things. It isn't much fun to have your castle of dreams come crashing about your ears. He looked away from me a moment, but then turned back with that little grin of his. 'I guess this sort of puts me off the gold standard,' he said. The rest of the week he was so attentive and-oh, so lovable-and last night he gave me this."

Amy gazed at the ring and gave a sigh of pleasure. Then she said: "Let's have another look at what did all this for you, if you have it with

"Here it is," said Joan, reaching into her bag. "I think I'll always keep it." She put on the table a small loop of hair. "I can't blame Bill a buildings, have been submitted to the bit for forgetting about a girl when he saw that, especially when it was her hair that attracted him in the first place."

Together they looked at the hank of hair between them. Its golden dye removed, it was the color of a rusty the see and about as glamorous.

NEW YORK ADOPTS "WELFARE OF MAN" AS THEME OF FAIR

$125,000,000 Exposition to Depict Building the World of Tomorrow

New York.—The New York World's Fair of 1939, which, according to Grover Whalen, President of the Fair, will be a $125,000,000 show, will have a theme-

"Building the World of Tomorrow." This was announced for the first time by Mr. Whalen, following the adoption of the theme and the design by the Board of Directors.

"The Theme," said Mr. Whalen, "encompasses the well-being of man, the betterment of life. It will be carried out in our exhibit zones, in our amusements, and in a beautiful 'Theme Tower.' We will display to the visitors all the goods, all the materials, all the resources and powers man has amassed, to the end that by studying them, one may learn how to plan and to attain a more admirable future."

The design, a simple and practical one that is motivated by consideration for the hundreds of thousands of people expected every day, divides the main section into ten zones. These zones will display exhibits of clothing, shelter, the arts, the basic industries, health, sustenance, recreation, government and cooperation, education, and public and social services. Each exhibit will be allocated to its proper zone. There will be no haphazard or scattered display. For the first time, visitors need not walk all over a fair grounds to see what they want to see, and only what they want

Focal Exhibits In each zone there will be a focal ex-nature of the sector, its history, and its potential future. The zones will be laid out around the "Theme Tower," in the heart of the main section, a 250 foot structure that will dominate the park. In this tower will be a panorama to show what strides America has made in the 150 years that have passed since George Washington strode into New York's old Federal Hall and took the oath of office as our first president.

The opening of the Fair, April 30, 1939, commemorates the 150th anniversary of that day.

This panorama will also show the interdependence of the 48 states born of the 13 original Colonies, and the interrelation of the big cities and the country districts of the United States.

The site of the Fair, Flushing Meadow Park, will be a permanent park after the Fair is done. It comprises 1216 acres -twice the space ever before given over to a Fair.

The work of converting the site into a Fair Grounds and a park requires engineering and artistic skill of the highest, the employment of hundreds of men, and the expenditure of millions of dollars.

Great mounds of debris must be shifted. Great depressions must be filled in. A river must be canalized and its tidal inlet dammed. Two great swamps must lakes. Six thousand trees or more must be planted, tens of thousands of shrubs, millions of flowers. Roads must be built -and bridges must be built to span them. Sewers must be installed.

Cost to Run $125,000,000

The Fair officials estimate that $125,-000,000 will have been spent before the first visitor is admitted to the grounds. The city and the state of New York and the Federal government are spending millions, and the buildings they erect will be permanent. The Fair Corporation will spend $30,000,000. Exhibitors, concessionaires, commercial groups, and other governmental agencies will spend at least $50,000,000. The city, state and Federal governments will expend about $35,000,000 for buildings, exhibits and collateral improvements.

Mr. Whalen believes that at least 50,000,000 people will visit the Fair in 1939, and arrangements are being made to handle them all in comfort. Eight hundred thousand people can be well cared for on any one day.

Three subway lines, the Long Island Railroad, buses and autos will be able to bring 160,000 people to the Fair Grounds every hour when arrangements are completed; though, in order to do this, it will be necessary to extend one subway system a distance of two miles.

Roads are being built, extended, or widened, for the streams of cars that will pour into the park from the Triborough and Queensborough bridges. There will be a huge bus terminal, parking spaces for 30,000 autos and facilities for trailers.

A boat basin is being prepared in Flushing Bay; and plans are under way to dredge a channel in the harbor for the use of deep-draft ships that will bring Fair visitors from all parts of the world. There is also some discussion as to the advisability of developing an airport for those coming to the Fair by

Comfort the Keynote

There will be buses inside the Fair Grounds as well as outside so that those who do not wish to walk may have cheap transportation to any part of the grounds they desire to visit. There will be thousands of tree-shaded benches for those who are weary. There will be restaurants and amusements of various kinds all over the 1216 acres. Beside this there will be a mile-long stretch of amusements east of the main lagoonamusements that will not imitate Coney Island or Broadway. An amphitheatre for opera, plays of all kinds, and other forms of entertainment will be built on the shore of the big lagoon. And there will be water sports on the lagoon. A children's village, a "Hall of Nations" -for the Fair will be international in flavor, and most every government in the world will be represented-and other Board of Design. But as yet the style of architecture to be employed has not been decided. A competition open to all the young architects of Greater New York may establish the style. It is the opinion of the board that most of the structures will be of only one story, and will depend upon beauty and originality instead of height.

space is only a fiction of the wrong with a man as there is brain doesn't help much when with a motor when he knocks one can't find a place to park.

Vocational Premium Money Received

The contribution the state makes to further the incentive to produce better breeding and feeding animals as well as grain produce is very much worth while to communities when one considers that the young people need some method to compensate them for their efforts, especially so when a competent judge evaluates them on a special occasion. This event was held at the St. Joseph fair last August at which time seven Longview Vocational High School boys won a total of $66 in premiums on their projects exhibited. These winners were: Ronald Wilson, $8, spotted Poland China hogs; Lloyd Davis, $12, Hereford steer; Gordon Hales, $4, Chester White hogs; Clifford Leerkamp, $12, two Hereford steers; Kenneth Bickers, $12, Hereford steer and Guernsey cattle; Louis Klienmeyer, $8, Angus and Hereford; Bill Zenke, $10, Hereford and Angus.

A similar show will be held next year at the same place for Future Farmers that are now starting their projects.

F. F. A. Organizes

The Longview Future Farmers of America met to elect officers for the ensuing year. Those elected were: president, Duane Eckerty; vice-president, Ralph Schweineke; secretary, Glenn Carleton; treasurer, Gordon Hales; reporter, George Apgar.

The F. F. A. encourages boys to become better informed concerning things pertaining to the farm, develop thrift, economy, and to play when the time arrives and to work with zeal when the occasion demands it. The purpose of the next meeting will be to plan the annual events.

Attention Voters

Here is a list of the Republican Candidates-men who believe in Republican principles and men we can recommend to the voters of Champaign county as conscientious, capable and efficient. Every one of these men will give an honest and careful administration if elected. YOU can help elect them.

Vote For Permanent Recovery

Vote for Recovery that will be sound and stable. Vote for recovery that will mean taking laborers off the relief rolls and give them jobs of permanency, whereby they will have a decent wage and be able to lay up something for a rainy day. Vote the Republican ticket and vote it straight.

Vote For Your Home Markets

Mr. Farmer, if you want to save the American Markets and stop this tremendous importation of foreign grains, livestock and all kinds of foodstuff, vote the Republican ticket. Your newspapers are giving you the facts about this daily. You cannot treat this lightly, it means your homes, your business and your future prosperity.

Vote For Your Business and Your Farms

No business can live and spend more than it takes in. Your government is just a big business and this government of ours is now spending, spending, spending until it is over $33,000,000,000 in debt. You are going to help pay this heavy indebtedness off by taxation. Pleasant thought, isn't it? Now is the time to stop this headlong rushing into debt and begin to pull out. The Republican party offers you the remedy. Will you take it? The best service you can render to your country and to yourself is to vote the Republican ticket on next November 3rd.
