Chicago Plans Huge Live Stock Exhibit

America's annual continental congress of agriculture, the International Live Stock Exposition, will be held November 28 to December 5 in the new International Amphitheater at the Chicago Stock Yards.

It will be the 37th renewal of this largest annual exhibition of purebred farm animals and crops in the country, and according to the management, one of the biggest shows in its history.

B. H. Heide, secretary-manager of the Exposition, states that plans are now under way to house over 13,000 animals at the 1936 show. He reports that entries are pouring in from leading stockmen and farmers in nearly every state in the Union and province of Canada, listing their prize herds and flocks for the competitions that will feature more than 30 different breeds of draft and light horses, beef cattle, sheep and swine.

Approximately $100,000 will be paid in cash premiums to winning exhibitors in the various divisions of the Exposition, says Heide.

Entries for the live stock classes will close November 1, with the exception of the carlot contests for commercial stock that are displayed in stock yard open pens. Feeders have until November 21 to reserve space for exhibits in this event.

C. E. Tate Has Fine Record As Attorney

C. E. Tate is the Republican candidate for State's Attorney, and his many friends in both the Republican and Democratic parties are predicting his success by a large majority.

Mr. Tate has been engaged in the practice of law in Champaign County for several years, having been graduated from the University of Illinois College of Law, after working his entire way through school. His practice has taken him into over twenty-five counties of the state of Illinois, and since qualification, experience and ability are things to be looked for in selecting a State's Attorney, it is expected that many voters will consider his fine record when they vote for State's Attorney.

Mr. Tate stands for a full enforcement of the law, and the fact that he is an aggressive attorney with the necessary experience will enable him to fulfill this pledge.

Fred Hamill is well qualified by temperament, education and experience to serve as State's Attorney, and is the type of energetic citizen which should be encouraged to seek public office. Offensive Signs

In keeping with what is becoming a nation-wide protest against offensive signs and billboards, the authorities of Paris have decreed that no signs shall be displayed on the famous thoroughfare, the Champs Elysees, which advertise any goods not sold on the premises.

By their erection of signboards which spoil the natural scenery along the highways, and by their encroachment in residential sections of our cities, the billboard people have brought upon themselves the just resentment of that section of the public which has regard for appearances.

When we become more civilized the billboard will go the way of the town crier. As an advertising medium it is an anachronism already.

Airplane Accidents

In the early days of flying, if our memory serves us correctly, most persons involved in airplane accidents were killed outright. At least, a very large percentage were. It was a little surprising, therefore, to read a recent report which states that during the last few years only one out of seven persons involved in airplane crashes was fatally hurt.

Most surprising still is the statement that of all those involved in air accidents 60 per cent received no injuries at all. About 15 per cent were killed, 10 per cent were seriously injured and 15 per cent were only slightly hurt.

Causes of accidents have been studied, resulting in the conclusion that about 57 per cent were due to errors by pilots; structural failures in planes caused a little more than 9 per cent, motor failures, 17 per cent, while miscellaneous and doubtful causes account for the remainder.

During the three-year period covered by the report there was a total of 2,994 accidents recorded, involving 9,558 persons, of whom 1,413 were killed, 947 were severely injured, 1,366 received minor injuries and 5,805 were un hurt.

Malaria vs. Paresis

If we could only discover it, there may be, as Jacques declares in "As You Like It," some good in everything." It is unquestionably true that much that is good and useful has been found in most unexpected quarters. For example, in malaria germs.

For quite a while experiments have been made which have tended to show that the germs of malaria retard the progress of paresis, or partial paralysis.

A report of cases made by Dr. Gillispie, hospital assistant at Binghampton, N. Y., states that more than one-third of the patients suffering from paresis at that institution during recent months have been so improved by the injection of malaria germs into their blood that they have been permitted to go to their homes.

Dr. Gillispie does not claim that this treatment can be relied upon as a cure, but among the cases treated all but about one-third have shown a favorable response. This is a most hopeful indication of progress toward control of one of the most dreaded diseases which menaces mankind.

The idea of setting one disease to fight another is fascinating and may have great possibilities as applied to therapeutics of the future.

Islam's Decline

Mohammedanism is losing its authority as a religion, particularly in Turkey, but in other Moslem lands as well, according to well-informed observers.

Mustapha Kemal, the present ruler of Turkey, dealt Mohammedanism a terrible blow by abolishing the Caliphate, the highest church dignity formerly held by the sultans, and repudiating the Koran as the legal code of the country. This, together with the spread of foreign literature antagonistic to the faith, has played havoc with Mohammedanism prestige in Turkey, Egypt, Arabia, India and Africa.

Founded by Mohammed, an illiterate epileptic shepherd and camel-driver of Mecca, the era of Islam dates from 622 A. D. when with about 150 followers he fled from Mecca to escape persecution and settled in Medina, where his real power arose.

His epileptic tendencies had brought on "visions" whereby he professed to have received revelations from God at various times, these communications being later incorporated in the Koran.

After the death of his first wife, he took ten other wives, many concubines and female slaves into his household.

He exercised both temporal and spiritual authority, waged war with the cruelty common to that period, and partook more of the character of a conqueror and statesman than of that of a prophet. His own sincerity of belief in his divine mission, especially during his later life, has been seriously questioned.

Yet the movement he founded had within 100 years after his death become a serious menace to Christendom, until checked by the victory of Charles Martel near Tours in 732, while today the adherents of Mohammedanism number about 234,000,000.

Like Christianity, Mohammedanism is divided into many denominations or sects, of which the Sunnites and the Shiites are the most numerous.

Electrical Progress

Significant evidence of progress is seen in the new ideas and improved equipment which have been applied to power stations, whereby the cost of generating electricity by steam plants has been brought below four mills per kilowatt hour in some instances, with even greater economies promised for the near future.

This increased efficiency of steam plants will have a most important bearing upon the future value of waterpower projects, because only those power dams which are most advantageously located will be able to produce electricity at a cost less than that of generation by steam.

A survey by the National Industrial Conference Board some months ago showed that the use of electrical power in manufacturing has trebled during the last ten years and now totals more than 26 million horsepower or 73 percent of all the power used.

What the total electrical output will be in another ten years must be left largely to the imagination. Electrification of farms and railroads is in its infancy, but is going forward rapidly. New electrical appliances for every conceivable means of utility, comfort and entertainment are being developed with amazing rapidity.

In fact, we are just beginning to get some slight idea of what electricity will mean to civilization of the future.

They Never Come Back

By E. P. O'BRYAN

OLD Pop Travers heard the news with bowed head. "He ain't ready yet," Gus Rubie said. "No use starting him before he's ready. It'll ruin him. Only thing you can do is run Sunbeam in his place."

Pop shook his head. "Wouldn't be no use. He's too old."

"Oh, I don't know about that, Pop. That old nag's got some speed in him yet. Better think it over."

Pop, veteran owner, at one time had boasted a string of fast horses second to none. Twice he had won the Kentucky Derby. But now he was down and out. The stock market crash had caught him unawares. Then, besides that, Mary's eyes had gone bad on her. He needed at least five thousand to send her to Austria for an operation and he didn't have it. His hopes had rested in Sunbeam the Second, and he had just been told by his veteran trainer, Gus, who had been with him twenty years, that Sunbeam the Second wasn't ready. He'd have to run Sunbeam himself, 1928 Derby winner, retired these many years to the stud. Out of the crash Pop had saved but these two horses—one too young and untrained to run, the other too old? The Handicap prize was better than $10,000—more than enough to send Mary to Austria.

But Pop finally decided to let Sunbeam run. "All right," he told Gus. "I'll make the switch, I'm going to bring Paddy Day down from the ranch. I'll announce it this afternoon."

When the newspaper boys heard it they saw a story. A horse and rider from out of retirement. Paddy Day had ridden Sunbeam to victory in the Kentucky Derby. "Two Old Veterans Coming Out of Retirement to Ride in Classic," ran the headlines. "Famed Jockey to Ride 1928 Derby Winner."

Race fans grew enthusiastic. Two veterans to try for a comeback against a field of younger and faster rivals whetted their appetites for the dramatic. They all knew Sunbeam couldn't win, but down in their hearts they were praying that he would. Of course they didn't bet any money on him, but everyone would have lost gladly just to see the old veteran come back.

Pop never ran a horse that he didn't back to the full extent of his capital. The day before the race he bet his wad, amounting to a little over six hundred dollars, three hundred of which he had borrowed. The big money, however, was all on the favorites, and Sunbeam, in spite of the publicity, still remained twenty-to-one. No one had any faith in him, but they all wanted to see him try. That explained the presence at the track of some twenty thousand enthusiasts when the Handicap lineup paraded before the stands.

Pop Travers stood at the rail chewing frantically at a frayed cigar. He watched the horses go by one by one. Sunbeam, he thought, was looking extremely well, with Paddy up. Paddy gave him a big wink, as of old. Sunbeam and Paddy were getting a big hand from the crowd. The review over, the horses lined up at the barrier. Hot Tip, the favorite, was fractious, hard to handle. Unfortunately he was lined up next to Sunbeam and the latter began acting up.

"Just like he used to do," Pop muttered to himself. "Just like he used to do before he went in there and ran the feet off all the others."

Then they were off—suddenly. Pop's heart quickened when the crowd began yelling for Sunbeam. It was just like old times, only different. They used to bet their money on him. Now they didn't think enough of his chances to bet on him, still they wanted to see him win.

Pop's hopes faded when they hit the quarter mile post. Sunbeam was buried in a cloud of dust. That wasn't like him. He had always been out front. That was one of his strong points—getting out front and staying there. The time he won the Derby he had led all the way. He had stamina then.

Then suddenly something startled the crowd. Pop didn't see it at first. Sunbeam was moving up!

When Pop saw what was happening he began going berserk, flinging his arms wide and shouting. The thing he couldn't understand was Sunbeam's behavior. He had never been a good horse when he had to come from behind, and today he was showing a reversal of form. He was a changed horse.

Behind Sunbeam dropped Sergeant Dewey, then Cartwheel and Star Gazer. Down the home stretch he came like a charging demon to challenge the leader, Hot Tip. At the mile post but two lengths separated them.

For the last hundred yards they fought it out neck and neck, then the great Sunbeam began reaching out. A rush of reserve strength carried him forward by a half length.

The crowd was now on its feet, watching a battle that was to make track history, while on the far side of the track a trainer stood tense, witnessing the re-enactment of a scene of long ago. It had been just like that when Sunbeam won his first race. The thing Pop didn't know—yet—and which the crowd would never know, was that the original Sunbeam had suddenly developed a strained tendon, and that Gus had substituted another and greater Sunbeam who had so dramatically made his bow to the public in the guise of his famed sire, whose brilliant performances he had surpassed.

EMBLEMS

IF YOU live in a state where they still allow party emblems on the ballot, take a look at them as you mark yours. That eagle soaring above the clouds at the top of the Republican column should remind you of Gen. John C. Fremont, who was the first Republican candidate for President back in 1856. It may be reminiscent of the eagles which he saw when he was "The Pathfinder" in the West or it may mean that the Republicans have been in power so long during the last 80 years that they figure they have a better right than any other party to claim the national bird.

That lordly crowing rooster at the head of the Democratic column should remind you of Joseph Chapman of Indiana whose habit of crowing over Democratic victories a century ago resulted in this symbol for his party.

That rising sun, with its beams glinting over an ocean, as though foretelling the day when there will be "Water, water everywhere, but not a drop to drink" tells you that below it are the names of the candidates on the Prohibition ticket. Those hands clasped against a background of the earth tell of the Socialists' dream of greater equality for mankind all over the earth. That stout bare arm with the hammer in hand speaks for the Labor party and that sickle and hammer remind you that the Communists would have us follow the example of Soviet Russia.

There was once a time when a Bull Moose snorted defiance at the top of one column on the ballot. That was when Theodore Roosevelt was seeking a third term under the Progressive banner but since 1912 the Bull Moose has been an extinct political animal.

Or course, if you live in a state where they use voting machines the emblems may be slightly different.

The reason for these emblems on the ballot is a practical one, besides their symbolical significance. In the early days they were placed there to aid voters who had left their spectacles at home and who didn't want to vote for the wrong candidates by mistake. When the tides of immigration began pouring into the country millions of foreigners who were illiterate, even after naturalization, these emblems were helpful to them in their voting. As new parties arose the use of these symbols helped avoid confusion and even though many efforts have been made to do away with them, they are still in widespread use.

"Now I Lay Me—"

This child was hurt when a tornado struck Tupelo, Mississippi, necessitating medical and nursing care for hundreds—care which in many cases could not have been given without Red Cross assistance. It is a fine tribute to the organization that the young beneficiaries of its health and relief services in variably place themselves in the hands of the Red Cross with a completely confident, "Now I lay me—"

RED CROSS AID TO MORE THAN 500,000 DISASTER VICTIMS

Large Urban Areas Devastated As Elements Hit 20 States East of Mississippi

"The number of disaster victims assisted by the Red Cross during the fiscal year ended June 30, was more than four times the number aided in the previous twelve month period," Admiral Cary T. Grayson, chairman, said in commenting on highlights of the annual report just issued. "Over 131,000 families were given food, clothing, shelter and medical care, and thousands of homes were rebuilt or repaired by the Red Cross to enable them to carry on."

Pointing to the many-sided problems created by the wide variety of types of disasters which occurred during the year, Admiral Grayson said, "The Red Cross sent hundreds of trained workers into 39 states to meet the many exigencies of catastrophes which included earthquake, epidemic, explosion, fire, hurricane, ice lock, landslide, refugee relief, shipwreck, tornado and typhoon. The Red Cross took charge at the scenes of 105 domestic disasters of major severity."

The report emphasized the marked value of Government-Red Cross cooperation when disaster strikes, giving as example the flight of Army bombing planes which dropped Red Cross food to marooned refugees at Renovo, Pennsylvania, during the Spring floods. More than 10,000 persons were rescued from the second floors of homes in Wilkes-Barre and Kingston through Coast Guard-Red Cross cooperation at the height of these same floods.

"Government agencies and relief groups were of invaluable assistance to Red Cross relief forces at all times," Admiral Grayson stated.

The complete resources of Red Cross leadership, training and disaster experience were brought into play by the Spring floods and tornadoes which took so heavy a toll of life and property in eastern and southern states this year, the annual report reveals. The Red Cross aided 77,000 families in 14 flooded states east of the Mississippi and 6,000 families in 6 tornado hit states south of the Mason-Dixon line in this one operation.

"Never before have as many metropolitan centers borne the brunt of attack by wind and water within a single year, challenging Red Cross preparedness and efficiency by so wide a variety of pressing human problems," Chairman Grayson said.

In its work of relief to disaster sufferers the Red Cross expended in excess of $5,200,000 for the year. The report points out that this figure does not include assistance given in 27 lesser disasters with a total of 2,000 persons aided, and adds that additional millions will be used to "clean up" Spring floods and tornadoes.

"Numerous local disaster situations occurring during the year were met by Red Cross chapter funds and manpower," Admiral Grayson said. "In each major relief operation undertaken the great army of Red Cross volunteers aided trained workers with the task of rehabilitating those without resources who had suffered losses."

"The Red Cross disaster relief service is one of many Red Cross activities supported by the American people through membership at the time of Roll Call, held each year from Armistice Day to Thanksgiving."

Red Cross Nurses Combat Disease on Wide Front

At the close of the fiscal year ended June 30, there were 673 Red Cross nurses bettering health conditions and caring for the sick in 604 communities. These Red Cross public health nurses cared for a total of 233,616 persons during the year and made more than a million visits on their behalf.

The annual report of the American Red Cross states further that these nurses cooperated with doctors in examining 671,057 school and pre-school children, with 342,861 physical defects found and curative treatment arranged in 209,080 cases.

In 979 Red Cross chapters 1,733 graduate nurses taught Red Cross home hygiene and care of the sick, issuing certificates to 53,126 persons completing the courses. In addition, 1,777 Red Cross reserve nurses were called upon during the year for disaster and epidemic control work.

In Honor of Franklin

Two centuries and a quarter after Benjamin Franklin's birth, a great memorial in Philadelphia will fittingly perpetuate his great genius and patriotic services by a tangible monument of practical as well as sentimental significance.

It will be a memorial such as Franklin himself would appreciate most if he were living, being devoted principally to a museum of the graphic arts which will illustrate the evolution of writing and printing since the earliest recorded attempts of man to express his ideas by visible means. For, be it remembered, in an epitaph written by himself for his gravestone, his only designation is "Benjamin Franklin, Printer."

The memorial building will have a total floor space of more than 500,000 square feet and will cost five million dollars. It will also have a large endowment fund. In the building will be the Franklin Institute, with more than 60 individual museums, libraries and departments devoted to scientific knowledge.

by every standard of accomplishment, is perhaps the greatest figure America has ever produced. As journalist, scientist, statesman and diplomat he exerted an influence of inestimable value to his country and to the world. To him, no less than to Washington, is due the success of the American Revolution, because it was Franklin's consummate diplomacy that secured the aid of France at the crucial moment of the war for American independence.

It is to the credit of the citizens of Philadelphia that at last Franklin is to have a memorial in keeping with his greatness.

Rigney Well Qualified For Post of United States Congressman

Hugh M. Rigney, Democratic nominee for Member of Congress from the 19th Illinois district, composed of the counties of Champaign, Douglas, Moultrie, Coles, Shelby, DeWitt and Macon, has many qualifications which recommend him as the logical successor to the present

Congressman, the Hon. D. C. Dobbins, of Champaign.

He was born on a farm in Moultrie county near Arthur, and attended Arthur schools, graduating with first honors in his class.

Early in life he learned the printing trade, and in due course of time without financial assistance from anyone, became owner and publisher of the Arthur Graphic-Clarion, a Democratic newspaper, which he conducted with marked success for thirty years. He is a member of the executive committee of the Illinois Democratic State Press association, a position that carries a great deal of prestige in state Democratic circles in Springfield.

His father, Dr. J. B. Rigney, who practiced medicine in Arthur 45 years, served as a regimental surgeon throughout the Civil War.

He had two sons in the World War, one Harold W. becoming a West Point Cadet; the other, Hugh P., was commissioned a machine gun lieutenant and is the present postmaster in Arthur.

Mr. Rigney has served his community as township tax collector, member city council, city treasurer, member Grade and High School board, Vice-President Arthur Fair Association and President Association of Commerce.

From 1930 to 1934 he officiated as chairman of the Moultrie County Democratic Central Committee, during which time the party was successful in five major elections in his county.

Mr. Rigney is a present member of the Illinois Legislature from the 24th Senatorial district comprising the counties of Piatt, Champaign and Moultrie, in which he has an enviable record. He is a member of the following important committees: Public Utilities and Transportation; Roads and Bridges; Congressional Apportionment; Military Affairs and Farm Drainage.

His work in the House of Representatives at Springfield was characterized by his close and intelligent application to the business of the sessions and his loyalty and support of the Administration, attention to and praise of which was made by Governor Horner in his recent address before a record crowd at the Tuscola Homecoming.

Mr. Rigney is in full sympathy and accord with the principles of the New Deal and feels that the policies which have done so much to cure the ills of the depression should be continued and to that end, if elected to Congress, will stand squarely behind President Roosevelt.—Tuscola Review.

One isn't a hopeless failure until he begins to hate his neighbors who have won success.
