A. Bosch Fatally Injured In Fall

Anthony Bosch, 76, died at 10:55, Monday night, July 1, 1940, following a fall from a porch at a height of about 10 feet. The accident occurred at 4:45 o'clock Monday afternoon.

An inquest into his death was held at 8 p. m. Tuesday at the Dicks Bros. funeral home here by County Coroner R. C. Shurtz.

Mr. Bosch was painting the house when he fell at the home of his son, Andrew Bosch, northwest of Broadlands, where he resided. He suffered broken ribs and internal injuries.

He was born in Alsace Lorraine and came to the United States at the age of 24. He settled at Newman and lived there five years before moving to the farm near Broadlands.

In 1894 he was married to Rosie Roetker, Sigel, who preceded him in death five years ago. Surviving are the sons, Andrew, George and Edward, near Broadlands; and Doctor Michael Bosch, of Cleveland, O. He leaves 25 grandchildren.

Funeral services were held from the Immaculate Conception church this Thursday morning at 9 o'clock, with burial in the St. Joseph cemetery, with Dicks Bros. of Broadlands in charge.

Will Erect Community Building This Summer

Bonds aggregating $15,000 for the purpose of erecting a community building in Broadlands were signed Monday night at a meeting of the board of managers.

The bonds were sold to H. C. Spear and Son, Chicago bonding company, according to C. E. Tate, Champaign attorney for the township. They will bear four percent interest, the first one of $1,000 becoming due in 1942, Tate said.

The remainder of the $33,000 cost of the building is being furnished by WPA.

Board members signing the 15 bonds were Oscar Witt, president; Harold Anderson, secretary; Kenneth Dicks, and Fred Messman, treasurer, filed a $30,000 surety bond.

Financing of the building was made possible by a validating act passed at the last session of the legislature which allows the township to incur a five percent bonded indebtedness instead of the prior limitation of two and one-half percent. This is the first building in the state to be financed under the act.

Site for the new building has not been selected, but it will be picked soon and work is expected to start before fall, Ralph D. Wilson, Champaign, structural engineer, said Tuesday.

It will be reinforced concrete, 80 by 85 feet. An auditorium and gymnasium will constitute the major part of the building, Wilson said.

Seating capacity off the playing floor will be about 250, and approximately 1,250 can be seated for performances on the stage. The gym floor will be 40 by 75 feet, which complies with the standard required by the I. H. S. A. A. Dressing rooms and showers will also be included.

Other rooms in the building will be provided for village and township board meetings, civic and voting rooms. There will also be a kitchen.

Architects for the building are Deal and Deal of Lincoln. C. E. Tate is attorney, and Wilson is structural engineer. — News-Gazette.

E. M. Porter, A Former Broadlands Resident, Dies

Relatives have received word here of the death of E. M. Porter, a former resident of Broadlands, which occurred at his home in Marion, Ohio, Sunday evening, June 30, 1940. Heart trouble was the cause of his death. Mr. Porter was about 72 years old.

Mr. Porter conducted an implement and harness store here for a number of years, he and his family having moved to Ohio about 22 years ago.

Surviving besides the widow are two sons, two daughters and several grandchildren.

Funeral services for the deceased were held from a funeral home in Marion, Ohio, last Wednesday afternoon.

The N. M. S. and Y. W. O. Classes of the U. B. Church, neighbors and relatives, served a covered dish supper at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Oscar Witt on Thursday of last week, as a farewell for Mr. and Mrs. Willis Myers. The Myers family moved to Amboy, Ind., the first of this week.

The Suez Canal

Italy's entry into the war draws attention again to the Suez Canal, the highly important waterway which connects the Mediterranean with the Red Sea, crossing the Isthmus of Suez, a total distance of 87 miles.

For more than 70 years this canal has been the great artery for water-borne traffic between Europe and Asia, and to north-eastern Africa, its use obviating the former necessity of sending ships thousands of miles around the Cape of Good Hope at the southern tip of Africa. At present the canal is closed to all vessels except Allied warships.

The Suez Canal was begun in 1859 and was opened to traffic in 1869. Since that time it has been widened and deepened, so that it now has a minimum depth of about 42 feet and a minimum width at the bottom of nearly 200 feet.

The canal was built by the French with the cooperation of khedive of Egypt, but in 1875 the British government bought the khedive's interest, nearly one-half of the total issue of stock, for a little more than 20 million dollars.

Its building was facilitated by several large depressions in the desert of the isthmus, which became lakes when water from the two seas was allowed to flow in. These lakes form about 21 miles of the course of the canal.

In normal times between 5,000 and 6,000 ships pass through the Suez canal each year, the merchandise averaging around 30 million gross tons.

Consolidated Schools

Elimination of small rural school houses which have outlived their day and the development of larger schools that may be made real centers of community life is recommended by practically all progressive educators.

The old one-room schoolhouse served well in the period when sparse settlements and lack of good roads prevented the assembling of more than a few pupils in any one place for instruction. If it did not serve well, it at least was the best means available for its purpose.

Much progress already has been made in the direction of consolidated schools, but the movement has not everywhere kept pace with the need for better planned instruction. Educators believe that all small rural schools might well be eliminated in districts where good roads make transportation of pupils for longer distances practicable.

Where this is not feasible for all pupils, it is suggested that those of the sixth grade and above should be transported to the larger schools, which should be made community centers. In no other way will it be possible to give farm children an education comparable with that enjoyed by those of the towns and cities—and all children should have equal opportunities so far as it is possible to provide them.

The traditional little red school house was a great institution in its day, but it is rapidly giving way to the more efficient consolidated school, by which the cause of education is being steadily advanced.

Sidelights

Great Britain's oldest soldier, General Sir Bindon Blood, called the "father of the British Army" and a veteran of seven military campaigns, died recently in London at the age of 97. He was a famous big game hunter, credited with killing 57 tigers.

A story illustrating the dislike of Efrem Zimbalist, noted violinist, for social functions is being told. Asked to play for a fashionable musicale, he placed his fee at $5,000, but when the hostess told him he would not be expected to mingle with the guests he reduced it to $1,000.

When presented with a medal for saving a young woman from drowning last summer, Elmer Cotich of Rochester, N. Y., accepted it, but said he thought he had been rewarded sufficiently already. "I got my prize three months ago," he declared, explaining that the girl whose life he had saved had become Mrs. Cotich.

As the result of a too realistic dream, Alvin Rasch of Madison, Wis., is suffering from a broken back. He is a veteran World War aviator and in his dream he thought his plane was being forced down by an enemy flyer, so he made a "parachute jump," landing in the back yard, 20 feet below his bedroom window.

Credit Policy Curbed In Pioneer Trading

Pioneer Illinois residents in and near Macon county are said to have brought with them the southern custom of doing business on credit. For a while, says the Illinois Writers' Project, WPA, this practice resulted in good for all concerned, but the time came when wholesale credit was considered to have had its day.

According to an early historical account as soon as there was a fringe of settlement in the heavily timbered area, a tradesman with a span of spanking horses and a two-story wagon stopped at the houses. There he loaded beeswax, furs, live chickens, and other home products taking them all on credit. He agreed to sell them in St. Louis and to pay for them upon his return either in cash or in sugar, coffee, spices and other products to be found in centers of population.

All seems to have gone along well until a drove of hogs, on one occasion, was assembled and as had been the custom, driven away on credit. In time the drover returned but, it is said, unfortunately brought with him neither money nor goods. This experience taught the settlers to avoid the wide-open credit policy.

Find Fancy Names For Quilt Patterns
Log Cabin, Double Tulip, Garden Wreath, and Joseph's Coat, may seem to be names of novels but to Illinois students of history, they simply refer to quilt patterns used in early communities of the state.

According to the Illinois Writers' Project, these pioneer designs were frequently finished during merry afternoons when women of a locality met to sew and quilt. In some instances the number of separate pieces used for a pattern ran into the hundreds. They were often woven out of wool from sheep raised in the immediate neighborhood.

Pride Made Problem In Horse and Carriage Era

In the days before automobiles were common, many Illinois residents rented "a horse and rig" by the hour. Not uncommonly a whole family would have a grand time seeing the countryside or driving around town.

In the 1880s, accounts show, Illinois law-makers decided that all hired vehicles must bear numbers and lights. Thereupon, a storm of protest arose from persons who found themselves embarrassed by the new ruling, because they were unable to hide the fact that the carriages in which they rode were hired, and not owned by themselves.

However, according to the Illinois Writers' Project, WPA, the numbering of vehicles continued although epithets, such as "vulgar" were used to denounce the new ruling.

Hailstones Were Large

Weather-minded Illinois residents have recently recalled an unusual April day in 1910. According to the Illinois Writers' Project, WPA, records show that southern Illinois was then hit by a storm which brought hailstones as large as croquet balls. It is declared, indeed, that one of them hit a cookstove and cracked the top of it. One editor reporting the incident asserted "this is absolutely true."

Mercerized
WHEN you buy a shirt and the sales clerk tells you it is mercerized, naturally, you are impressed. But do you really know what it means?

Mercerized cloth is cloth that has been treated by a process that was invented by John Mercer of Lancashire, England, and patented back in 1851. And that process consists in dipping in a solution of caustic alkali, shrinking it and tightening the fibers so that the cloth takes dyes more brilliantly and has a greater luster.

There seems to be some misunderstanding among the experts as to what brings about this luster. The 1929-32 edition of the Encyclopedia Britannica says, "Considerable change in the appearance of the cross section of the cotton fiber is effected by mercerizing it. It is especially noticeable that the fibers appear more rounded." And here is what the 1919 edition of The Americana says: ". . . mercerizing gives a luster to the cotton cloth because its fibers are drawn closer and flattened, presenting a smooth surface that reflects the light."

Flat or round, John Mercer of Lancashire invented the process. (Released by Western Newspaper Union.)

"The Name Is Familiar"

'Rich as Croesus'
WHEN a man is so rich that he actually reeks with wealth, we call him a Croesus. The word is pronounced like those things in a man's trousers—and we don't mean wrinkles, like in ours.
But don't misunderstand — we don't call a rich man a Croesus because he is the only one who can afford them in his pants. Perhaps we never should have brought the matter up.
Croesus is a word for a rich man and goes way back to 560 B. C., when the original Croesus, a Greek king of Lydia, was born. He was richer than any king before him, hence the use of his name. Living in the time when men wore togas, you can see that he didn't even wear pants—or did they wear pants with togas? Now we are sorry we brought the matter up.
Lydia, at the time Croesus was king, included practically all of Asia Minor, and his wealth was obtained mainly from the mines and gold dust of the river Pactolus. (Released by Western Newspaper Union.)

Youth Passes Too Rapidly; Use It Well!

By PATRICIA LINDSAY
© Bell Syndicate.—WNU Service.

LITTLE sister at the age of three loves to wear mother's high-heeled shoes and powder her nose. A few years later she wants her curls "done up" or cut short like big sister's. When she is entering her 'teen age she is so eager to be an adult that she gets unruly, and causes herself, and those around her, a lot of trouble.

Are you a little sister? Why do you suddenly want to be old? It's no crime to be young! Youth is glorious—being young is thrilling, if you will just take it in your stride at the pace you should.

You think mother and daddy are old meanies for keeping you away from some parties and asking you to get home early from others. You get simply furious when mother insists on low heels and clothes which you think of too sweet, simple and girlish. Big brother is a downright nuisance when he suggests quietly that you lay off heavy make-up and petting in dark corners, "or else."

"Oh," you wail, "will they ever let me grow up!"

Of course they will, sister, just as quickly as you convince them that you are not a reckless, heady little tadpole, so eager for adult life that you are missing today. They know the pitfalls, and because they love you, and so want to be proud of you, they seem over-cautious when they try to steer you clear of them. Why don't you help a bit?

Quit hating the fact that you are still young.

Quit hating the fact that you are still young. Glory in being your age and live each day joyously. Delight in your clubs, your frivolous parties, your many privileges—all yours because you are young! And every minute, sister, cherish and protect your fresh loveliness, for once you lose it, or mar it, you can never recapture it!

These Things Are Essential

Begin right now keeping yourself healthy and lovely. Eight or nine, even ten, hours of sleep each night (see why mother wants you home early?). Use little make-up, for young skins have a definite beauty which should not be covered. A rosy lipstick, a speck of good powder. No mascara, eye-brow pencil, rouge. Why hide that pixie allure with cosmetics meant for fading beauty? (Isn't big brother right after all?). Let your skin breathe unhampered, and keep your cheeks and mouth flushing with color by exercising. Walk in low-heeled shoes whenever you can to develop true and glorious posture, and eat your meals regularly with few sweets on the side!

Don't be stubborn about your clothes. Simple sports frocks for day wear, full-skirted gowns (never too revealing) for evening.

Instead of pouting, and tirading against proper restrictions, spend those moments keeping yourself fresh as a daisy, and nicely groomed with hair brushed to shining glory and your nails manicured.

And above all, my dear, live proudly! Don't cheapen yourself through thoughtless acts (like petting indiscriminately) even though you see other girls being foolish! A few years from now when Prince Charming comes along you will be awfully glad you didn't!

HINT-OF-THE-DAY

In your own home are materials for bath which beautify and invigorate. A pound of sea salt, two cupsful of starch, oatmeal, bran, almond meal or a small package of baking soda thrown into the tub are of great benefit in relaxing the nerves and reviving the spirits. If you have no shower under which to rinse, then put the meal in small cheesecloth bags which you can make yourself. A quarter of a pound each of oatmeal and almond meal mixed is a good combination. Scent your bath if you wish with any scent you have on hand.

The Talkative Man
"I's'pose," said Uncle Eben, "dat it's one o' de wise pervisions of Providence dat makes a man wifout much sense want to talk a whole lot an' give hisself away, so's he won't fool anybody."

Personal Service

By THAYER WALDO
(McClure Syndicate—WNU Service.)

REYNOLD RAND gave himself over to the luxury of a near-leer. In fact, refusing it status as a full-fledged one is based upon purely technical grounds; he neglected to exhibit his contortional tour de force. Rather, he screened it with great care behind his open newspaper. Of course, that may have been all for the best; there was a lady seated opposite him at the breakfast table, and she chanced to be his wife.

"But my dear girl," he said, nothing but silk in the purr; "my dear, dear girl—how preposterous! Could you conceive of idiotic jealous suspicions in me, of all people? I engaged a bodyguard for you merely to ensure your complete protection and my peace of mind."

With an emphatic movement Irene Rand reached across and snatched the printed barricade from his hands.

"You," she stated in flat accusation, "are a triple distilled liar! In the last 10 years you've never given me a single thought when I wasn't right in the same room, and as few as possible then. You've gone and hired some horrible plug-ugly just to embarrass me so I won't go anywhere, all because in your vile imagination—"

"Pet," Reynold interrupted, suavely mild, "remember your blood pressure. Do you want the veins in your neck standing out when they take those close-ups today?"

Swift solicitous fingers fluttered to her throat, stroked it soothingly. Reynold lit a fat cigar and continued:

"My motives, I can only repeat, are of the highest order. As a well-known star, you can't afford to ignore the current prevalence of kidnaping and robbery."

In the kitchen on their right sounded a buzz. The titular head of the house glanced around in an almost apprehensive fashion. Then he faced forward again, managing a careless smile.

"Ah, yes," he murmured; "that must be the chap now. I asked him to drop around this morning so you could meet him."

Irene gasped and began loudly:

"Reynold P. Rand, if you think I'm actually going to put up with this, you're dafty as hell and—"

Deflately he had risen and slipped through the swing door, leaving her amidst speech. She sprang around the table, bolted after him—and then came to a halt just inside the dining room. Reynold's meager back was toward her, in the hallway; towering neck and more above him stood a great warrior-featured blond lad with gleaming teeth.

"Oh, Mr. Drake—Rey's just been telling me all about you. Do come in and sit down."

Both men faced her, one surprised, the other wearing a mask of cold politeness.

"How do you do, Mrs. Rand?" The tone was self-possessed and impersonal. "It's a pleasure to meet you; I've seen so many of your pictures."

His indifference brought an added thrill. Here indeed was novelty!

"Thank you," she said, leading him into the library. "Reynold, will you please call the studio and tell them I'll be a little late. Mr. Drake and I need to chat and get acquainted."

He came at nine that evening, looking monumental but even handsomer in dress clothes. Driving alone, they went to the Capitol club.

For an hour she enjoyed herself utterly.

Drake still would unbend but slightly. She was trying for the dozenth time to draw him into conversation when, several tables away, she suddenly glimpsed a familiar face, and started. Maurice! As she stared he saw her, evidently not for the first time. Elaborately he bowed; the accompanying smile was hard, ironic.

Quickly she glanced at her escort, and as instantly knew real excitement. He had seen, too! He was positively glaring in that direction. Irene leaned across the table to whisper:

"Never mind—he's probably tight. I never laid eyes on him before."

But it was futile; that seemed only to aggravate matters. With a bull-like growl deep in his young chest, Drake sprang up and was striding toward the offender, fists hugely doubled.

Shocked wonder checked her thoughts as she saw him charge straight past Maurice, heading for the table beyond. Then the tow-headed giant pulled a man out of a chair, sent him down again with a right to the chin—and the withheld little shriek burst from Irene. Incredibly, the man Drake had punched was Reynold!

The next second or so she never recalled. She only knew that at last her bodyguard was standing before her again; that one enormous hand inexorably grasped the wrist of a fearful little thing with auburn hair.

"Sorry, Mrs. Rand," he said in a voice like avenging thunder, "but I'll have to leave you now, and I won't be coming back. It seems this stuff should begin at home, so from now on I'll be shadowing my wife."

Long View News

BY FELIX B. STREYCKMANS and ELMO SCOTT WATSON

Raglan Coat

Baron Raglan

FITZROY James Henry Somerset, who was Baron Raglan, should be remembered as commander-in-chief of the British forces during the Crimean war because it was he who gave the order for the famous "Charge of the Light Brigade." But it's more likely that he'll be remembered for his coat!

At the Battle of Waterloo, young Somerset, who was aide-de-camp and military secretary to the duke of Wellington, was so seriously wounded in the right arm that it had to be amputated.

Because of the loss of his arm, he needed a coat that was easy to put on. His tailor designed a garment that was loose, had roomy sleeves and hung over his shoulders like a cape. In 1819, he was created Lord Raglan.

Meanwhile British sportsmen had begun using the style of coat Lord Raglan always wore, because of its comfort, and from that time to this it has been a raglan. Strangely enough, if the coat you are wearing today hasn't raglan sleeves, it isn't the "latest style."
