Sermon: "Jesus, the One Competent Shepherd."

The old city of Troy had but one gate. Go round the city, and you could find no other. If you wanted to get in, there was but one way, and no other. So to the strong and beautiful city of heaven there is but one gate, and no other. Do you know what it is? Christ says, "I am the door."

Order of Eastern Star Observes 'Friends Night'

Broadlands Chapter, Order of the Eastern Star, observed "Friends Night" on Wednesday evening, with friends from other Chapters filling most of the stations.

At the close of the evening a short program was given, and refreshments consisting of white house ice cream, nabiscoes, and punch, were served to about eighty members and guests in attendance.

Mrs. Belle Smith Entertains Class

Mrs. Belle Smith entertained the L. W. Class of the U. B. Sunday School on Wednesday afternoon. Mrs. Smith conducted the meeting, and the following officers were elected: Mrs. Ora Golden, president; Mrs. Leona Bergfield, vice president; Mrs. Olive Rayl, secretary-treasurer. Refreshments consisted of fresh peaches, devil's food cookies, and orangeade.

Members present were Mesdames Lucy Sullivan, Ora Golden, Lydia Brown, Olive Rayl, Leona Bergfield and Belle Smith.

Moping At Mailbox Kills Many Farmers

It's a far cry from felines to farm folks, yet the currently most common rural pedestrian accident reminds the Illinois Agricultural Association's department of safety of that classical kitty whose inquisitiveness resulted in the simultaneous loss of no less than nine lives.

Mr. and Mrs. Ruralist are intercepting a lot of fast-moving vehicles these days in going between their homes and their mailboxes," says C. M. Seagraves, IAA safety director. "However, the return trip appears most dangerous. It seems many of us turn away from the mailbox and start back across the road without first looking for approaching cars, while concentrating on a letter from Junior, or filching a glance at the card from Susan's boy friend.

The operator of a car cruising along at 60 miles per hour, or 88 feet a second, Seagraves points out, can hardly be expected to avoid collision with a person who steps squarely into his path.

The IAA safety department makes these suggestions to farm people.

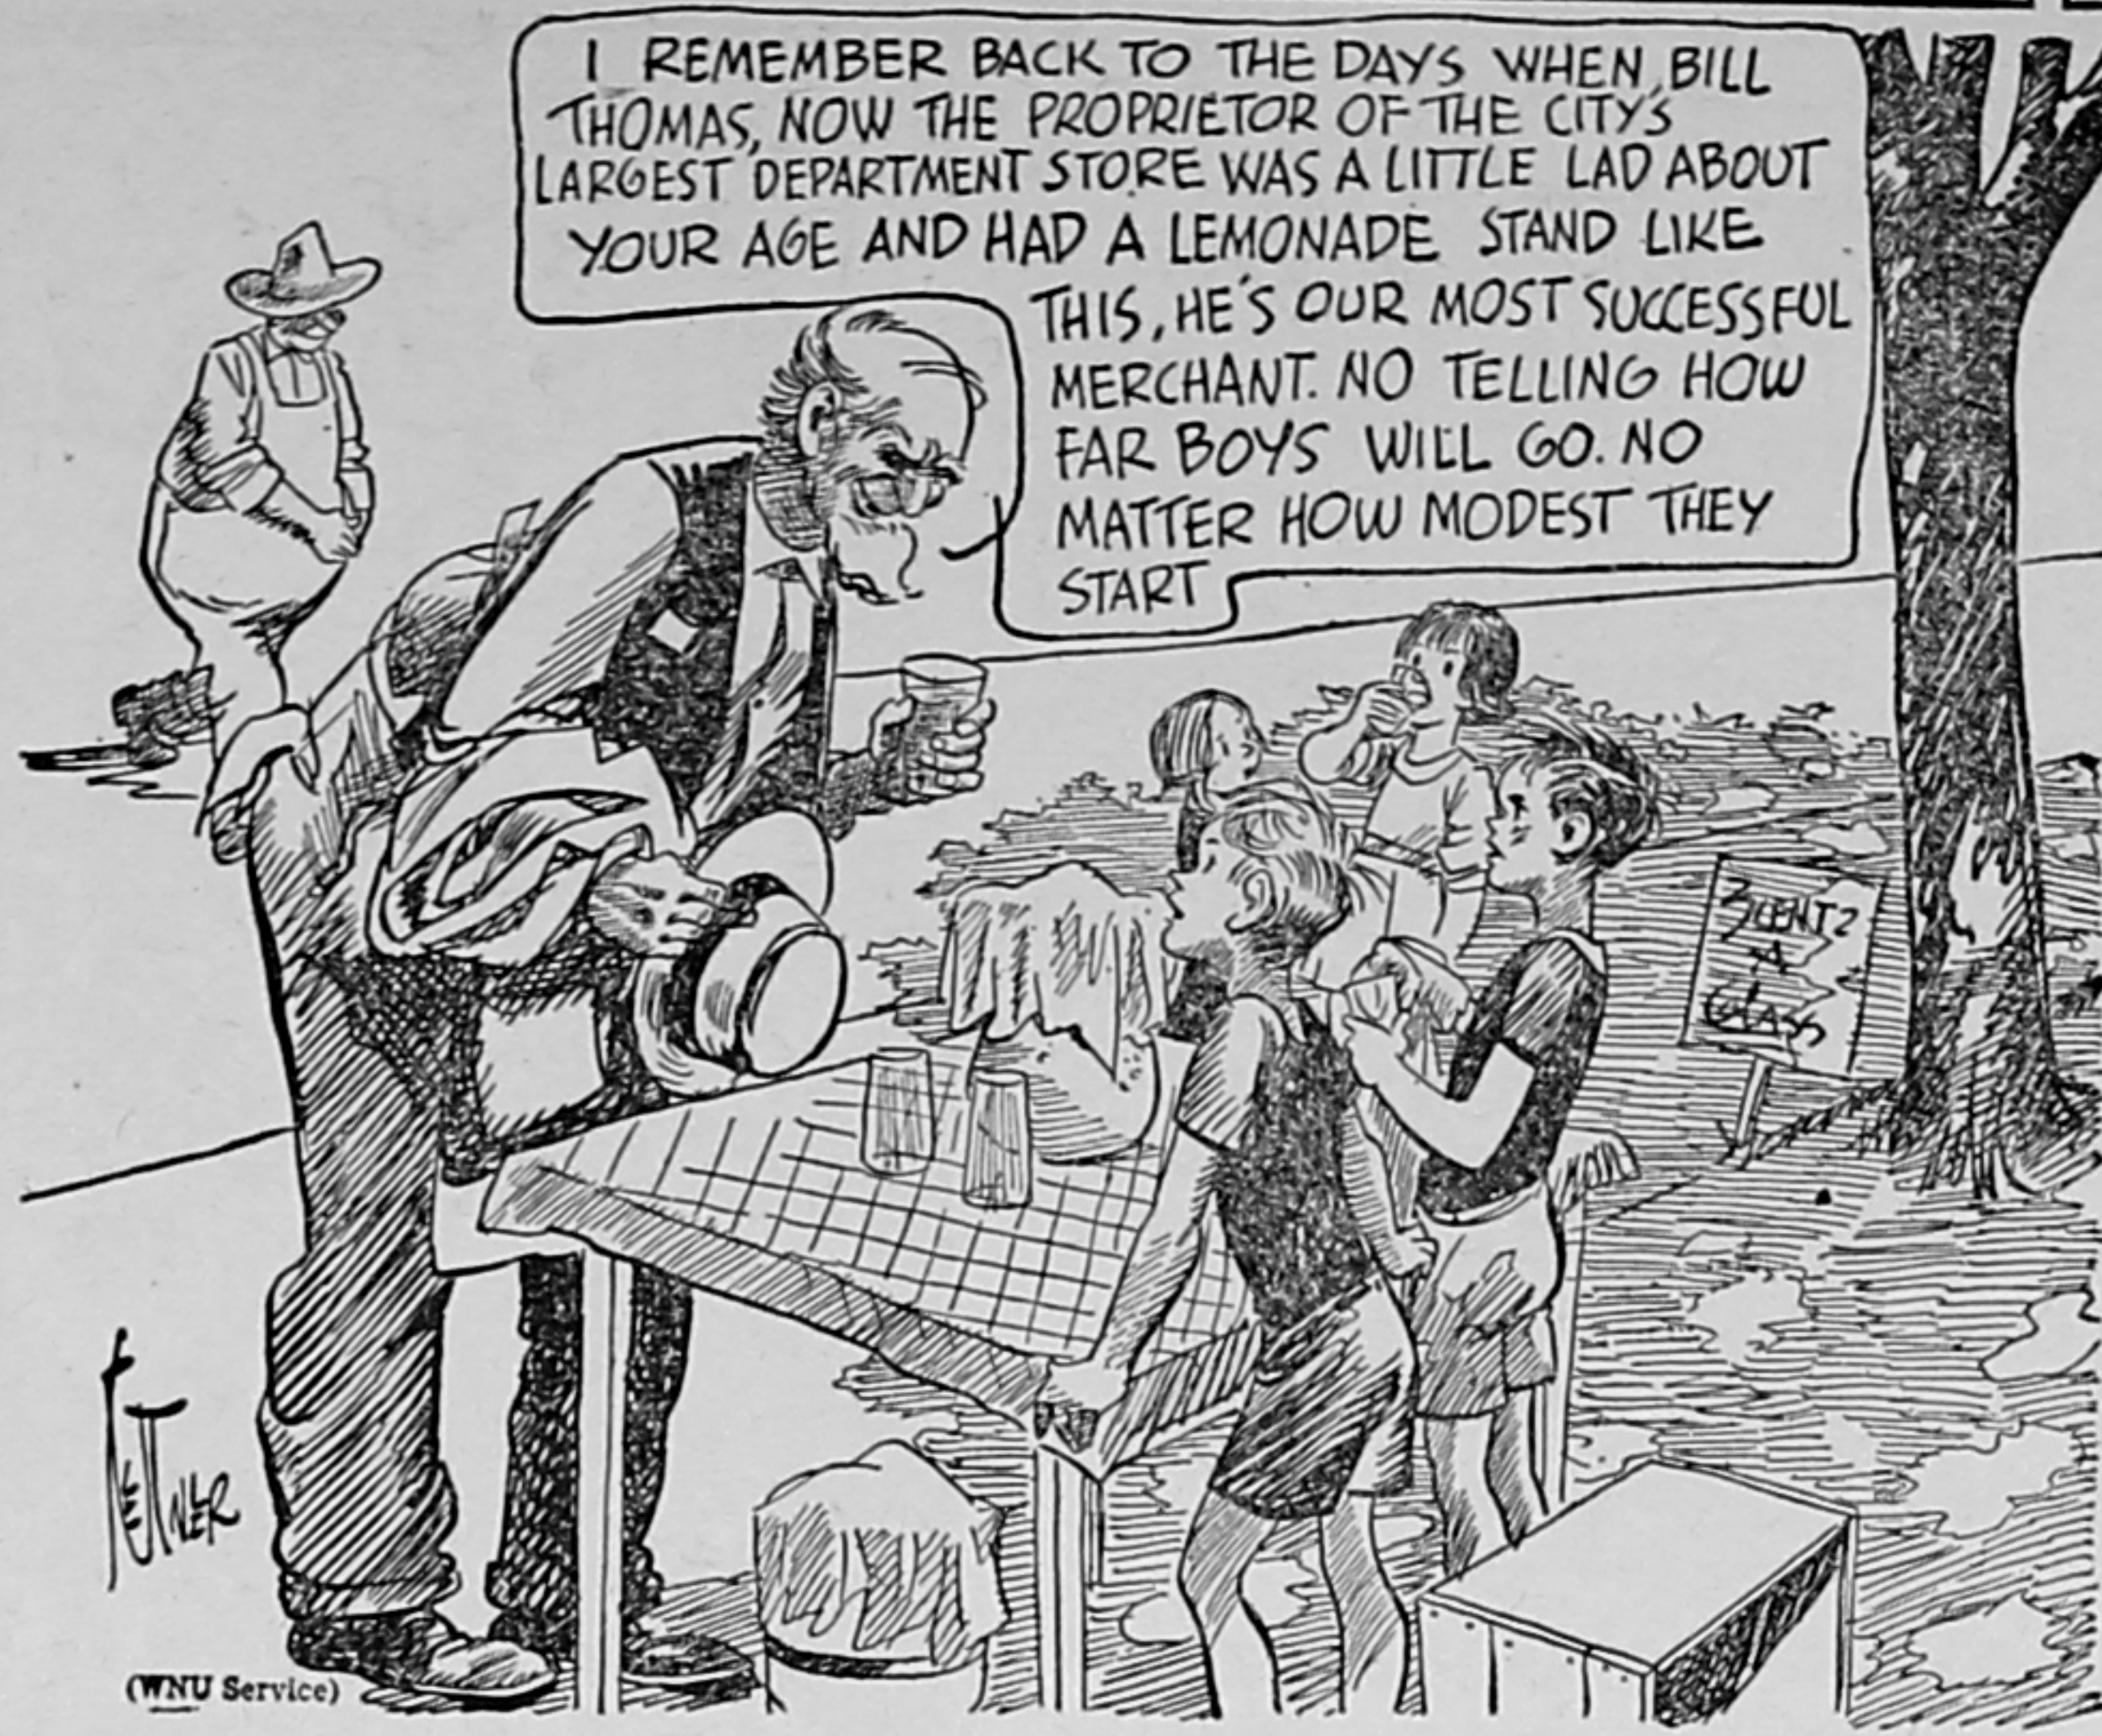

1. Curb your curiosity as to what the mail contains until after you've safely recrossed the road, or
2. If you cannot do this, have a bench installed adjacent to the mailbox and scan the letters and cards before leaving the box.

Public School Opens Sept. 2

The Broadlands Public schools will open Monday morning, Sept. 2 for registration. Following a short session the pupils will be dismissed until Tuesday morning, Sept. 3, when school proper will begin.

Seemingly, the crowds are getting larger each Saturday night at the free movie shows at Broadlands. A total of 165 cars were parked for the show last Saturday night, there being 88 cars parked inside and 82 outside of the show grounds on the streets south and east of the grounds.

68th Regiment Veterans Plan Reunion This Sunday

(News-Gazette)

Several hundred World war veterans, members of the 68th regiment, heavy artillery, U. S. army, will gather Sunday at Crystal Lake park, Urbana, for their third annual reunion.

An all day outing with entertainment and a basket dinner at noon and a talk in the afternoon by Attorney Ronald E. Winklemann, Urbana, himself a member of the regiment, will feature the convention and reunion program.

Members of the regiment who now reside at Bloomington, Kankakee, Danville, Peoria, Westville, Homer, Broadlands, Tolono and other Illinois towns, as well as a number of the outfit now living in Champaign-Urbana, will comprise the group gathering for the event.

Charles Hirschfeld and Harry Bullock, local veterans of the 68th regiment, are in charge of local plans for the Sunday reunion at Crystal Lake park.

Members of the outfit are reading the present war news from Britain with particular interest, as the 68th regiment was landed at Tilbury docks on the Thames, London, back in 1918; the same docks that were subject of a Nazi aerial bombardment last week. The regiment served eight months overseas, and was disbanded following the Armistice in Rockford on March 6, 1919.

Drum Corps Contests at Legion Convention, Danville

For two days, Saturday and Sunday, August 25 and 26, martial music will reign in a land where there is no martial law. Sunday afternoon the preliminaries for Class A and B begins. Sunday night will be competition between all Illinois Legion bands. Monday morning Sons and Daughters of the American Legion will compete early. Following that will be completion of the preliminaries. Monday evening's show will be the finals, or competition between Illinois' finest Corps which include some of the nation's best.

All competition will be held at the Danville High School Athletic Field. The general public will be invited and urged to attend.

Farm Folks Ready For Annual Sports Fest, Aug. 30-31

The answer of Illinois farm people to the old warning about "All work and no play makes Jack a dull boy" will be given at Urbana-Champaign on Aug. 30 and 31 with bats, arrows, axes, lungs and even guns, says the Illinois Agricultural Association. The occasion will be the fifth annual Illinois Farm Sports Festival, which since its inception in 1936 has become the biggest two-day rural recreational event in the nation.

Historic New Salem To Be Scene of Folk Play

Historic New Salem, recreated pioneer Illinois village where Abraham Lincoln spent several years of his youth, will be the scene of a folk play which will bring back the pioneers themselves to their native setting.

The play will be staged by the New Salem League, of Petersburg, Sept. 26, 27, 28, on a plateau facing the natural amphitheatre known in the old days as Kelso's Holler.

Stepping from the pages of history will be Lincoln, Jack Kelso, James Rutledge, Ann Rutledge, Jack Armstrong, Denton Offut, Henry Onstott, Philimon Morris, Samuel Hill, Peter Lukin and scores of others. Many of the players are direct descendants of the characters they play.

Money Rewards

The fact that the greatest money rewards do not go to those who perform the highest service to mankind is too well known to need restatement, but a few cases illustrating that fact recently compiled by an anonymous writer, are interesting.

His list begins with a horse, Seabiscuit, winner of $437,730 in five years, or an average of $87,546 a year.

Babe Ruth, the baseball slugger, earned more than a million dollars during his 21 years as a player.

Joe Louis, the Brown Bomber, has pulled down more than a million by mauling his opponents into insensibility or other stages of quietus in the last three years.

Greta Garbo, a Swedish girl who found it hard to learn English or to smile, has earned some $4,600,000 in less than 15 years.

The person selected to illustrate the other side of the picture is Dr. Harry Steenbock, Wisconsin-born professor of biochemistry, whose researches with vitamin D and ultra-violet rays have saved thousands of children from the crippling effects of rickets, and will benefit millions yet unborn.

During the 32 years since his graduation from college it is estimated that Dr. Steenbock has earned an average of about $5,000 a year.

A Speedy Mayor

Last November the voters of Salt Lake City elected as their mayor one of Utah's most popular citizens, David Abbott Jenkins. The world at large has never heard much about the policies or performances of this 50-year-old Mormon official in his capacity as mayor, but of his racing records it has heard many a thrilling story. In fact, the mayor, known to speed fans as plain Ab Jenkins, probably holds more automobile records than any other mortal who ever lived—153 of them.

After winning numerous speed events in his youth, Jenkins in 1926 made a bet that he could drive an automobile from New York to San Francisco in less than 100 hours. He did it in 85 hours and 20 minutes. In 1931 he made the same trip in 51 hours and 10 minutes.

A few days ago, on the smooth hard salt flats at Bonneville, Utah, Jenkins set the most remarkable record of his racing career. With a relief driver to take the wheel occasionally, he covered the amazing distance of 3,858 miles in 24 hours, making an average of a trifle more than 161 miles an hour. The highest average ever made in the 500-mile classic at the Indianapolis Speedway is a fraction over 117 miles an hour.

Mayor Jenkins, despite his 50 years, has no idea of retiring from racing, and hopes yet to make 4,000 miles in 24 hours.

British Taxes

An illustration of the sacrifices a people must face to carry on a modern war is seen in the present taxes levied on the people of Great Britain. There the base income tax rate is 42.5 per cent, while in the United States it is still only 4 per cent for individuals in the lower income bracket.

etc. British corporations pay 42.5 per cent of their net income, besides an excess profits tax which takes 100 per cent of their income above that earned as an average in pre-war years. In the case of individuals, income exempt from the income tax is only $500, and surtaxes run to 90 per cent of all income above $80,000 a year.

On top of all this, Britain imposes a sales tax of 12 per cent on all goods except food, and a 24 per cent sales tax on luxuries. The total tax on a package of cigarettes is 29 cents.

The British government has figured that if it confiscated all individual incomes over $8,000 it would collect only about 280 million dollars a year more than it does now.

The foregoing will give some idea of the burdens the British are bearing in their efforts to save civilization from Hitler, to say nothing of their losses of life and limb, or the mental anguish which they suffer day and night.

Railroads Prepare

Efficient transportation facilities are a vital factor in national defense, and the railroads of the country recently have been placing large orders for new equipment, with a view to meeting any demands which may be made upon them in connection with the preparedness program.

More new freight cars were placed in service during the first six months of this year than in any similar period since 1930. The placing of orders for 3,000 box cars by a single railroad, the Illinois Central, has just been announced by its president, J. L. Beven. It is expected that deliveries of these 25 miles of cars will be completed around the first of the year, at a cost of $9,375,000.

The cars will be built at four separate plants—1,000 at East Chicago, Ind.; 1,000 at Bessemer, Ala.; 500 at St. Louis, and 500 at Mt. Vernon in southern Illinois—thus distributing the employment over a wide area. Including this purchase, the Illinois Central will have added 11,662 new freight cars in four years.

Railroads of the country now have about 20,000 new freight cars on order, or nearly twice as many as were on order a year ago. They also installed 180 new locomotives during the six months ended June 30, on which date 124 more were on order. Thus, in the field of transportation, at least, we are getting prepared to meet any emergency.

Hay Fever Victims

Millions of Americans look with dread upon the hay fever season—a season of sneezes, wet eyes and blooming noses. In the peak period, August to frost, the glamorous movie star can match sneeze for sneeze with the way-side tramp, for hay fever is no respecter of age, sex or social position.

Response to treatment has been gratifying in recent years, say medical experts at Battle Creek sanitarium, and victims who cannot seek out lands of partial immunity have increased the roll of sanitarium patients.

Daniel Webster, who endured severe attacks yearly, called hay fever a "depressing and discouraging disease." Other great and near-great have used more picturesque language in describing the malady, about which public misconception is widespread.

Many think the 125 pollen-shedding species of goldenrod are the only plants causing it, but the experts say the homely dust-covered ragweed causes 85 per cent of the late summer hay fever attacks each of the Rockies. Other villains are timothy grass, corn, cocklebur, thistles, sagebrush, sunflowers and various trees. Most early spring hay fever is said to be caused by the pollen of trees; in a few instances by dandelions. Later in the season it is generally caused by the pollen of grasses and certain weeds.

Medical records show that the hay cavalcade begins moving toward places of treatment in July and swells to full force by mid-August.

What's New

A bulb type spray gun that can be attached to the top of a can of paint for small jobs was recently invented.

To extinguish fires in industrial workers' clothing or wash off spilled acids a powerful emergency shower bath has been invented.

A new appliance for photographic dark rooms supplies four different colored lights and a diffused white light for examining negatives.

A new "eye" for use in military photography has a range of 28 square miles at an altitude of three miles and records details with amazing accuracy.

A newly-invented extension for an automobile brake pedal enables a motorist to operate brake and clutch with his left foot, leaving his right foot free to step on the accelerator.

Do You Know Illinois?

By Edward J. Hughes
Secretary of State

Q. When was the first restrictive liquor law passed by the Illinois General Assembly following the 1850 organization of temperance groups?

A. 1851.

Q. What were its restrictions?

A. It set a minimum sale of one quart of hard liquor and allowed no sale to minors under eighteen.

Q. What event in 1851 speeded the temperance movement in Illinois?

A. The passage of a prohibition law in Maine.

Q. What important temperance meeting was held at Chicago in June 1853?

A. The national meeting of the Sons of Temperance.

Q. Who dominated the convention?

A. Neal Dow, author of the Maine law.

Q. What convention was held at Chicago in December 1853?

A. An interdenominational convention of "the friends of a prohibitory liquor law in the State of Illinois."

Q. How many delegates attended?

A. 240, 200 of whom were clergymen.

Q. How many counties were represented?

A. 24.

Q. What Alliance was formed in Chicago in January, 1854?

A. The Cook County Maine Alliance. The Alliance nominated Amos Gaylord Throop for mayor.

Q. What reason did the New Covenant (a Methodist Temperance paper) give for the defeat of Throop in the election?

A. His defeat was ascribed to the opposition of "Catholic priests, the rum sellers, Irish whiskey drinkers, and German beer drinkers."

Daniel J. Evans of Van Vert, Ohio, who found a wedding ring while digging a ditch recently, took it home and found his mother had lost it 37 years ago.

Last March a Washington correspondent, Everett Watkins, bet vice-President Garner $10 that he could not name the Democratic nominee for President. Garner wrote a name on a card, sealed it in an envelope and told Watkins to open it after the convention. The name on the card—F. D. Roosevelt.

Remnants of Sandals Point To Bygone Days

Shades of LaSalle and his courageous companions moved across the Illinois scene of 50 years ago, when the wooden sole of a sandal came to light near Keithsburg, Mercer county. Its copper binding, with other bits of evidence, point to leather handicraft of the famous explorer's time.

Historians, says the Illinois

Writers' Project, WPA, recalled the report that when LaSalle and his fellow adventurers left Huron Island in the Mississippi near Keithsburg, their boat overturned and three boxes of clothing were said to have been lost.

"Pair of Hinges" Brought A Marriage Certificate

Years ago if a prospective Illinois bridegroom walked into the county clerk's office at Carrollton, and asked for "a set of splicing papers," the Greene county official would reach for the marriage license book and proceed to fill out a marriage certificate.

Long service at the county office had taught him to anticipate requests for hitching papers, coupling poles, or splicing paper. However, in 1891, says the Illinois Writers Project, WPA, the veteran official was momentarily uncertain when a young groom-to-be asked for a pair of hinges.

Fragile Look Fostered by New Coiffure

By PATRICIA LINDSAY

ARTISTS and poets have raved about the lovely nape of a woman's neck since time began. It is supposed to be one of our most alluring feminine charms! And because fashion repeats itself, napes of necks are bare again, as those new and exciting, brush-the-hair-high coiffures are here for a long stay!

Such a hair-do is gloriously feminine. It has a way of making a woman or a girl more fragile. You know—looking as if she might not be able to take a severe scolding! And that's always a help!

Dame Fashion has a way of keeping us on our toes. We can never quite sit back and say, "I'm all settled for the next year!" For instance, two things will concern the woman who decides to make this change in her hair style—How to keep the back hair-line trim and appealing, and how to make her hair stay up just after she has trained it into a long page-boy bob!

Take an honest look at that back hairline of yours after you have combed and brushed your hair high on your head. Not very beautiful, is it? What can you expect if you have allowed hair dressers or barbers to hack away at it for years? But you've got to groom it into a smooth even line and train the hair to grow softly and naturally upward. For a time you may use a tiny barrette or small hairpin to keep it up, but by late fall it should stay of its own accord.

How to Train Straggly Hairs

Each day brush those harsh straggly hairs upward by letting your head hang down and brush toward the crown of your head. If you are not going to business, knot it high in a roll, pin up the ends, and tie a bandanna around it. That holds it in place.

Each night before going to bed apply a scalp pomade or a good hair tonic along the hairline. Gently massage it. The rich lubricant will not only feed the starving tissue but the rubbing will stimulate growth.

Don't have your hair cut again—just let it grow. Later on you may have it shaped, once you determine which high style you will wear. Or you may just twist your long hair into becoming puffs on top of your head. Many girls are letting their hair grow long.

As your hairline grows, attempt to keep it curled for gala nights with very small curlers, the iron, or by twisting it on hairpins. We will all have to go through the growing pains unless we have been wise enough to keep our hairline unclipped. During the heart-breaking stage you might pin false curls over the ragged ends.

HINT-OF-THE-DAY

Cologne Is Feminine Necessity
Cologne is an extremely refreshing body rub and is also a luxurious body deodorant. You will find that an after-bath rubdown of cologne before going to bed will leave a lovely fragrance clinging to your sheets in the morning. This makes for the kind of daintiness that lovely women seek—a faint fragrance that seems to be a part of their personality, exuding from them as they move and breathe.

A good brand of cologne, one with a distinctive personality, in its fragrance, should be used. It should hint at lightheartedness, glitter and gaiety.

Cologne, by the way, makes a splendid gift, and for this purpose several brands are available in unique bottles as an adornment to the dressing table.

Spies During World War
During the World war, the British Intelligence service, through a simple trick, finished the career of a clever Turkish spy. Securing his secret address in Constantinople, says Collier's Weekly, the service in London sent him $150 in cash in a plain envelope that, when intercepted by the Turkish censor, was considered to be "sufficient evidence" of his dealing with the enemy. Consequently he was executed.

Chester the Pup

WELL, Uncle Sedgewick left today, and I suppose we won't see him again until next winter. He's going to make a bicycle trip from here to Yellowstone park, and then he's going to roller skate from there to Seattle. It wouldn't surprise me to see him swim from Seattle to Alaska. Clara cried when he left, and even MacTavish and I felt kind of bad when uncle went pedaling down the street steering with one hand and trying to keep his beard from getting caught in the chain with the other. Uncle's quite a traveler. Last night he was telling Swizzlepuss how he climbed Mount Blanc on a pogo stick. He explored Central America on a pushmobile and covered Australia on a pair of stilts. He said the toughest trip he ever made was the time he crossed the North pole with his pet polar bear, Hemingway. The weather got so cold Hemingway's feet froze and Uncle Sedgewick had to push that polar bear 800 miles across the ice in a wheelbarrow. I think uncle's head must have been frostbitten on that trip, too.

No Shave Rule Put Prestige in Back Seat

Some Illinois barbers in the 1890s, seem not to have been influenced by whatever prestige any one of their customers may have had. This was particularly true of service after closing hours.

In 1893, when the barbers of Champaign met to consider the question, they decided to set eight p. m. as the inflexible weekday closing hour. They issued, according to the Illinois Writers' Project, WPA, the following warning: "No man, no difference what influence he may have in the community, can get shaved in Champaign after eight o'clock in the evening."

The Poetry Hour

ARLINE breathed a sigh of relief when the door of the den was safely shut. For the twelfth successive Monday her aunt had allowed her to clean this room promptly at 10 o'clock without question. And, though, in the bitter round of Arline's overworked days, it was no such treat to clean a room, the den was different. For here was the radio. And here, at ten on Mondays, March conducted his poetry hour.

The newspapers liked to make a bit of a mystery of March. No one knew who he was. Even the radio people professed ignorance of his real identity.

"This morning," the clear, beautiful voice began, "at the request of one of my audience who, like myself, prefers to conceal her identity, I am going to share with you some of the most beautiful sonnets in the English language."

"Arline!"
The girl sprang to her feet, trembling.

"So this is how you work! Using up my radio! Get to work now! Your uncle has an important conference tonight." The great diamonds on her aunt's fingers glittered wickedly. Arline had long since ceased to wonder why Mrs. Bolls wore all her jewels even in the morning.

Eleven o'clock! Arline slipped from her chair with a sharp gasp of dismay. She had forgotten her uncle's conference. How could she slip upstairs without being heard?

Then the little red-and-gold book almost slid from her fingers. From behind the davenport by the window came an unmistakable sneeze. Fear held her rigid.

"Who is there?" she stammered. After a moment of silence, a rather sheepish young man unfolded himself and stood before her.

"Does my uncle know you're here?"

"I hope not."
Arline's fingers tightened on the back of the chair. Her eyes were wide. It was his voice! It was March!

"What do you want?" she gasped. "I had planned to see your uncle."

He glanced swiftly toward the door. There was no mistaking that furtive look. He had no honest business here. In a dreadful moment of understanding, Arline knew why he had kept his identity secret.

"My aunt's diamonds—did your errand concern them?"

The young man's eyes hardened. He regarded her for a moment, speculatively.

"In a way, yes," he admitted. "Then it's no use," Arline told him bravely. "She wears them day and night." The young man did not move.

Oh, why didn't he go? Arline flushed with shame. She was protecting a criminal, just because she liked to hear him read poetry. On a sudden impulse, she thrust the book into his hands.

"See what I've been reading? I wrote you that letter! Now, won't you go?"

For a long moment the man stared down at the book, a deep flush rising in his face.

"You wrote that letter—his niece?" He jerked his head toward the door. Arline bit her lip at the memory of her uncle's hard eyes, his grim mouth.

"He's hard," she replied, "but he's good." She tried to make that last phrase an accusation, but she was ashamed of the lack of enthusiasm in her tone.

The young man started and stared at her.

"Look here," he protested. "If he's good, then what am I?" He read the answer in her miserable eyes. "I see. I'm a thief and a robber, but I have a lovely voice!"

Arline never replied to that. For on a sudden the door burst open and her uncle appeared on the threshold. March's hand dropped swiftly into his pocket. Upstairs there was a shot.

The next moment the room was plunged into darkness. Somewhere, amidst a crashing of glass, her uncle and March were grappling fiercely.

Then suddenly it was all over. Half fainting in her chair, Arline knew dimly that her uncle, and the other men, too, were being led off by a squad of policemen.

"You didn't get hurt, did you?" It was March, bending over her solicitously.

"But who—who are you?" gasped Arline.

"I'm a detective," admitted March. "I was supposed to hear what went on upstairs tonight, but my plans were almost ruined by a girl." He smiled down at her.

"But aren't you March? If you aren't—what I thought—why don't you tell your real name?"

A pensive look crossed March's friendly face, and he sighed.

"Reason enough! Don't you know that the biggest joke outside a comic strip is a cop who likes poetry?"

Thoughts while ramblin': That pitifully small group of listeners who turned out to hear Lindy at Soldiers' Field certainly was a far cry from the countless millions who sought every available inch of space for a glance at the Lone Eagle in 1927. . . We deeply appreciate suggestions from column fans and regret that a recent week-end engagement prevented us from attempting to interview Felix the Clown at the Ringling circus, following a tip from one of our best helpers. Felix boasts a hobby of writing poetry but has never had a verse published, according to Mrs. Almeta Beamish who gave us the tip and suggestion for a scoop. . . The Technicolor production, 'For Country Life,' featuring food products packed in glass containers for the entertainment and education of housewives, was filmed on Lowell Thomas' beautiful estate at Pawling, N. Y. . . Those two healthy looking stalks of corn thriving on the sidewalk parkway at 525 N. Laramie avo- noo are a sight for all passersby! . . . Whew! That Grennan cake truck racing down Race avo- noo across Lockwood nearly causing a collision! . . . Nomination for the possessor of Austin's most cheerful disposition: Ellen Witt, bedridden at her home on Lake street, near the Cicero "L" station, who has a smile and a friendly wave for the passengers on all Lake street "L" trains. . . Country life downstate at Newman and Broadlands, where every day is Thanksgiving and the farmers live like millionaires! . . . On a single week-end visit to those two garden spots of America we enjoyed the following repasts: dinner, first day, eight fried chickens and all the trimmings; supper, ten fried chickens and ditto—and for a snack luncheon the next day, three fried chickens and garden-fresh vegetables. . . Man, and boy, is it any wonder this nation choruses "God Bless America?" Hostesses at these bountiful feasts were Mrs. Lowell Smith, of Newman, and Mrs. Francis Bosch, rural route, Broadlands. . . And we are indebted to Mr. Robert Potter, real estate merchant of Broadlands, for the supper invitation. . . Hasten the day we can make another dash down to the heart of the heart of the corn belt!
