Many New Fibers

The textile industry, under stress of war, is developing a variety of new fibers. The new materials and methods of making them that are being developed in research laboratories will be labeled wartime alternates, but some will probably prove so satisfactory that they will be here to stay after the war.

Hats of the future may include a felt made from the bark of California's redwood trees. The short fibers of this bark can be blended with wool and spun into a yarn suitable for making woven or knitted fibers. The wool shortage speeded development work on this material, and a variety of experimental fabrics containing from 15 per cent to 60 per cent of redwood bark fiber have been produced, designed for use in blankets and as suiting.

Aralac, a casein fiber (made from milk) has been used increasingly the past two years in the production of hats and in blankets. Now its use may be expanded to women's dress fabrics, shirtings, sports apparel, and men's socks.

Extensive research is being made on fibers of soy beans, peanuts and other proteins. One manufacturer has recently built a soybean fiber mill where his staff of chemists are making a bean-cloth which is warm and substantial and the nearest thing to wool which man has yet been able to produce by synthetic means.

Cotton mills are also sharply stepping up their research activities. Along with the study of new fibers, research is now being conducted to improve textile manufacturing processes.

One new method used to produce textile fabrics is electro-coating. This technique avoids weaving. Short textile fibers are run between electrically charged plates over a backing material coated with an adhesive. The fibers become electrified and adhere to the coated base material, forming a pile fabric, like plush or velvet.

By new chemical processes cotton fabrics may be fireproofed; may be given a linen, a silk or a glazed finish; may be made water-repellent or highly absorbent; and may be made odor and germ resistant.

Youths Must Help

There is no longer any doubt that youths of 18 and 19 years will be made subject to military service in the near future, although legislation on the subject may be deferred until after the November elections. There is a growing sentiment for immediate action, however, and bills for the purpose are being prepared.

In a speech recently before an educational institute, Paul V. McNutt, chairman of the War Manpower Commission, declared that any thought of education as usual should be put aside, although he urged teachers to remain at their posts unless drafted for work in connection with the war effort.

He also announced that every able-bodied college youth was destined for the armed forces and should realize that he cannot have assurance of remaining in school "for any specified period of time."

The announcement was made in a commission-approved report prepared by the special committee in utilization of colleges and universities for the purposes of the war, headed by Dr. Edw. C. Elliott, president of Purdue University.

Educators from every state gathered on the campus of the American University to hear federal agency heads discuss how schools and colleges may help in the war effort in their Fall terms.

As for college students, McNutt said there was no excuse for any young man or woman preparing for any profession not directly useful to the war effort.

He said every high school student should regard himself as in the "reserves," and called on elementary school children to enlist in the salvage campaign and on other pupils and students to help in the victory savings drive.

Accidental Deaths

In a speech dedicating the new Naval Medical Center at Bethesda, Md., near Washington recently, President Roosevelt called attention to the appalling number of preventable deaths and injuries which occur among the civilian population, in homes, in factories, on the highways and elsewhere.

Last year, he said, approximately 60,000 Americans died from highway and industrial accidents alone, while 3,500,000 were injured, many being permanently disabled. But the President gave only a portion of the ghastly record. In a more comprehensive report recently issued by the National Safety Council it was shown that accidents during 1941 accounted for 102,500 dead and 9,300,000 injured, of whom 350,000 were permanently disabled.

To better grasp the significance of this terrible death toll, the foregoing figures may be compared with the number of American soldiers and sailors who were killed or died from wounds in wars in which the United States has engaged. The best available estimates placed the dead as follows:

- Revolutionary War, 4,044.
- War of 1812, 1,956.
- War with Mexico, 1,549.
- Civil War (Union) 110,070.
- Civil War (Confederate) 74,524.
- War with Spain, 1,704.
- World War I, 50,510.

Thus it will be seen that the 102,500 American deaths from accidents in 1941 alone almost equalled all battle losses of the Union armies in the entire Civil War, and greatly exceeded those of the Confederate armies.

In considering these facts it should be borne in mind that accidental deaths in 1941 were only slightly higher than the average of the last 10 years, and were actually lower than for years 1936 and 1937, when the number was 110,052 and 105,205, respectively.

Accidental deaths for the nation, if concentrated in Nevada alone, would wipe out approximately the entire population of that state in a single year. Such a disaster would be horrifying, yet little attention is paid to the same number of deaths when spread over the entire country.

No amount of warning seems effective in causing our people to be more careful in their daily lives, although it is estimated that 97 per cent of all accidents could be prevented through the observance of common-sense precautions.

TO ROUSE FLOW OF LIVER BILE

Get a bottle of Kruschen Salts tonight. Half an hour before breakfast, take as much as will lie on a dime in a glass of water (hot or cold) or in your morning cup of tea or coffee and keep this up for 30 days. Kruschen taken this way helps relieve such symptoms as sick headaches, bowel sluggishness and so-called bilious indigestion when due to insufficient flow of bile from the gall-bladder. You can get Kruschen, a famous English formula made in the U. S. A., at any drug store. You must be satisfied or money back.

Sidelights

One of the most beautiful headlines we have ever seen in newspapers and the happiest statement of the radio announcers now coming over the air is: "American Fliers All Return Safely."

Chee-Chee has been deferred for Army duty. Chee-Chee, a Belgian shepherd, was picked up by the Scranton, Pa., dog-catcher Monday and when no one called for her, she was earmarked for induction at an Army dog-training center. But, before Chee-Chee could be transferred, she produced a family of four pups. The dog catcher immediately issued his deferment order.

Ross Neal, a member of the Church of Christ at Lebanon, Tenn., was saved from death during World War I, when German shrapnel fragments at the Battle of St. Mihiel lodged in the New Testament, where it struck directly over his heart. Because of this occurrence and as a gesture of thanksgiving for Neal's escape, the church has ordered 24 Testaments, inscribed with the names of its members now in service, which will be sent to them.

Mrs. J. H. Edmonson, Louisville, is happy with her four Ft. Knox soldiers, whom she has "adopted." She entertains them on weekends and they returned the courtesies with a party for her during which they presented her with a cup inscribed: "To Our Darling Mom." "They are just like real sons to me," she said. "They called me up on my birthday and sang, Happy Birthday," and reversed the charges, just like your own children would do."

When the American Institute of Laundering says an article is washable it means that, under normal conditions in the average laundry, the article can be safely reconditioned. And, in laundry language, safely reconditioned means preserving the appearance of the article as well as removing soil.

For instance: If a housedress fades, or trimmings pull loose, or a hemline twists out of shape, or the pockets fade a lighter shade than the main part of the dress—the appearance of that dress definitely is ruined. It might be as clean as the proverbial whistle but its value to you is practically nil.

If this happened in the professional laundry, that dress would not be considered launderable because you wouldn't call it wearable when it was returned to you.

That's why the American Institute of Laundering says, "pure cotton and pure linen fabrics, whether in sheets, pillow cases, towels and other household linens or wearing apparel, are washable only when, under normal or average conditions prevailing in the professional laundry, they can be washed without fading, without shrinking beyond the 2 per cent provided by government and other reliable testing agencies, or when they can be washed without the material becoming sleazy."

"Pretty is as pretty does" might be what Sorry Sue is thinking as she compares her own shrunken dress with the spic and span appearance of Happy Hannah's laundry-tested and approved-for-launderability dress.

In giving its laundry tested and approved seal, the American Institute of Laundering goes a step farther and includes threads tested and approved as non-fadeable and buttons as non-breakable.

And, if any of these things occur to your articles at the laundry, you may be sure they would happen in home laundering, too, for such faults lie in the construction of the article itself rather than in the laundering method.

A. $1,000 annually.
Q. Where was Pope's office?
A. In a house belonging to his father-in-law, Elijah Backus.

Q. What rent was paid for Pope's office?
A. The Treasurer of the United States, Albert Gallatin, finally allowed $60 per year after having written to Pope that "Forty dollars per annum is considered the highest sum which ought to be allowed for the rent of an office."

Q. What were the expenses listed for the first three months of the Territorial government?
A. 1 Ream foolscap paper, $8.50; 1 ream letter paper, $8.50; printing 100 blank militia commissions, $5.00; printing 60 blank civil commissions, $3.00; 1 blank book, $10.00; 3 months rent, $15. Total $50.00.

Q. What were the expenses for the second quarter?
A. 2 oz. wafers, $1.50; printing 1 quire civil commissions, $2.50; printing 1 quire militia commissions, $2.50; quills, ink, powder and sealing wax, $3.50; 13 quires paper, $5.20; office rent $15.00; total $32.20.

A. $350. Apparently an extravagance.

Q. Did Pope act as Governor in 1809 or any other time than the weeks prior to Ninian Edwards' assumption of office?
A. Yes. During August and September Edwards was in Kentucky on private business.

Q. How did Pope conduct himself during Edwards' absence?
A. He acted strictly as his deputy. The Executive Register contains only three entries—the first, on Aug. 24, noting the issuance of a warrant for the arrest of a criminal wanted by the Governor of Louisiana Territory; the second, on Sept. 9, recording the filing of a letter from Edwards removing two justices of the peace from office; the last, on Sept. 22, appointing two others in their places.

Q. Is the Executive Register of the Illinois Territory still in existence?
A. Yes. It is in the Archives building at Springfield.

Q. What is inscribed on the first page of the Executive Register?
A. A copy by Nathaniel Pope of his commission as Secretary by President James Madison under date of April 25, 1809.

THE SAFEST ROUTE TO SCHOOL

The cut illustrated above shows a plan fostered by the Chicago Motor Club for the safest route to school. This system was designed by the club three years ago to help members of the school safety patrol in the work they are doing to prevent accidents. A large number of schools already have adopted this plan.

"Thousands of children," says Charles M. Hayes, president of the club, "entering school for the first time will travel by these preferred routes. Along these routes the fewest number of hazards will be met. Ordinarily a child might take the shortest route to school, but it might be that the shortest route is also the most dangerous one. Another route will have crossings protected by policemen, stop-and-go lights, or by members of the school safety patrol. This latter route should be picked."

Plans are available for any school in club territory. Patrol supervisors or principals who wish a supply should write to the safety department of the club.
