Accident Toll Is High During Corn Harvest

In the next couple of months, Illinois farmers will be working with a piece of farm machinery that each year exacts a terrible toll in fingers and hands, and even lives—the mechanical corn picker. Last year, during October, November and December, 76 Illinois farm folks received temporary injuries in corn picker accidents, 29 lost fingers, 14 lost hands or arms, and seven were killed.

Nearly all of these injuries occur in an identical way—when the stalks or husks which have jammed the machinery, gets his hand or glove caught in the rollers. If he escapes with the loss of just one or two fingers, he's unusually fortunate—it's often the entire hand.

All operators of corn pickers are warned not to attempt, under any circumstances, to work on one of these machines without first stopping it. It's only the work of a few seconds to disengage the power take-off—it can be the regret of a lifetime if you don't.

Walter Brandt Says Crops Are Good In Nebraska

Ansley, Nebraska, Sept. 18, 1942.

Mr. J. F. Darnall.
Dear Joe—How are you? I am just feeling fine and still kicking. Hope the same of you. I did not have time enough to visit you, I was very sorry to say, that I was called to the army sooner than I expected.

Have huge crop in Nebraska. Much of the corn will mature before frost. Custer County this year, like all other sections of Nebraska, will harvest its largest corn crop since 1933. Other crops showing some increase in production include oats, rye, potatoes, sugar beets, alfalfa and wild hay. There will also be a large increase in the production of fruits, mainly in the southeast part of Nebraska.

Some of the later plantings of corn may be damaged by frost, but the bulk of the crop in most sections of the state will mature properly. We had around 4 inches of rain a week ago. It is unusual to get that much rain in the fall of the year. Will ring off. Good luck, goodbye. Your friend, Walter A. Brandt, the auctioneer.

P. S. Say Joe, please send my paper here to my home address, Ansley, Nebraska.

Blackout

The term is descriptive of what is happening in the world today. Blackout means much more than doing without artificial light. It is a symbol of the gradual destruction of human advancement. It means the breaking up of families, the death of millions of innocent people, the destruction of a free education and religious system. It is the forerunner of a type of government that makes slaves of all the people it touches. Blackout symbolizes the end of civilization as we have known it. It is an ominous word. In a country like ours, imagination cannot conceive of the terror that follows in its wake. Blackout is the forerunner of a new type of enemy invasion that wherever successful, actually does black out, or wipe out the individual identity, opportunity, savings, family relations - for children become mere pawns of the state-freedom of speech, freedom of worship, private enterprise - everything that symbolizes America.

The fact that large sections of this nation are now living under dim-out and blackout regulations is a warning-an ominous shadow of what we face if we do not crush the forces that have caused almost a total blackout of the rest of the world.

There would be little labor trouble, or production trouble, or politics-as-usual if the people could visualize what blackout means. It's mere shadow should be enough to cement this nation into one irresistible unit of opposition.

Army of 10 Million?

Estimates of the size of the United States Army to be ultimately reached have been raised several times in the last few months, and military authorities are now talking of an army of 10 million men. That is a lot of men, although the mere enlistment of that number would not be difficult. Putting them on foreign battle fronts and keeping them supplied with equipment, clothing, food and other necessities is something else.

Competent authorities assert that an army of 10 million could not be raised, equipped and trained in the United States in less than three more years-that is, before the latter part of 1945. This does not include the additional time it would take to send such a vast number of troops to fighting fronts all around the globe.

If it really should take 10 million U. S. troops, in addition to the millions from Allied countries, to win the war, victory could not be expected before 1947 or later.

This raises the question as to whether the shortest road to victory involves the creation of such a vast army by the United States, and the future question of whether it would be possible to obtain sufficient ships for the transportation of men and material.

A great many believe that this would not be possible, if we must also supply and transport equipment for the armies of Britain, Russia, China and some of the other American republics. These think it would be far better to concentrate our efforts on air power and the smaller naval craft for the destruction of enemy shipping, while limiting our army to more reasonable proportions.

There is no lack of manpower in Russia and China, but these countries need airplanes, tanks, cannon, rifles and every other kind of war material. It would be wiser, it seems to us, to send this material to the people of Europe and Asia, along with instructors, technicians and other specialists, to enable these countries to put their vast manpower into action.

We might do this and still furnish a field army of five million men for service against Germany in Western Europe and the Middle East. Such an army, with those of Britain and Russia properly equipped and supplied, should be able to crush Hitler if supported by overwhelming Allied air power.

In the meantime, our navy and Air Force, in cooperation with the Chinese land forces, could at least hold the Japanese in check, and they could be finished off later.

All this is only a layman's idea of grand strategy in the present situation, and it might not work. But the plans of Allied experts have not worked very well so far, either. We hope the decisions recently made, to which the President referred in his radio address, will lead to better results. We would not like to think that victory must be deferred until the United States gets an army of 10 million men overseas.

Sidelights

It was a matter of pressing his luck too far and he landed in the "big house." A shoplifter was noticed by a passerby as he squeezed through the door of a New York store and the police were notified. When apprehended, the officer found concealed under an oversize overcoat, five dresses, four playsuits, 70 pairs of women's hose, 37 pairs of women's anklets, 137 pairs of men's socks and 2 pairs of boys' stockings.

"The best derved horse thief in the country," was released from a Philadelphia prison recently. Old Joe Buzzard, 83, who lays claim to the above mentioned title, has retired and there will be no further need for padlocking the barn door. Records show that Old Joe hasn't spent two consecutive years out of jail since he was 17. He has completed his longest stretch, a three-year term for stealing a horse and buggy in New Holland, Pa., but now he says he is through. "I'm going away and go into business," the old timer announced.

Any number of newspaper scribes contend that Hitler should never be spoken of by any other name than Schicklgruber, his real name. There may be some merit in this proposal except that to all Americans the name of Hitler stirs up hatred and signifies a menace to all that we hold sacred, whereas, the name Schicklgruber signifies a meek, clowning, nondescript and evokes a chuckle instead of the contempt that we hold for Der Fuehrer when called by his borrowed name of Hitler. We predict that in future years mothers will scare their wayward children with threats of Hitler instead of the bogeyman.

Do You Know Illinois?

By Edward J. Hughes Secretary of State

Q. Who organized the Territory of Illinois?
A. Nathaniel Pope, Secretary of the Territory.
Q. In whose stead did Pope act?
A. His cousin, Ninian Edwards. Edwards had been appointed Governor of the Territory on April 25, 1809, but word had not come from Washington, and Pope under the law assumed the functions of Governor.

Q. When did Pope issue the proclamation organizing the Territory?
A. April 27, 1809.

Q. What did the proclamation contain?
A. It established the counties of St. Clair and Randolph with the same boundaries as under the Indiana Territory, and issued commissions to two justices of the peace and one sheriff.

Q. How long did Pope act as Governor?
A. For six weeks until Edwards took office on June 11, 1809.

Q. How old was Pope at this time?
A. 25.

Q. What effort to oust Pope was made during his acting governorship?
A. The opposition, headed by John Edgar and William and Robert Morrosin, charged that since he had taken oath before a Louisiana magistrate he was improperly qualified and without power to act.

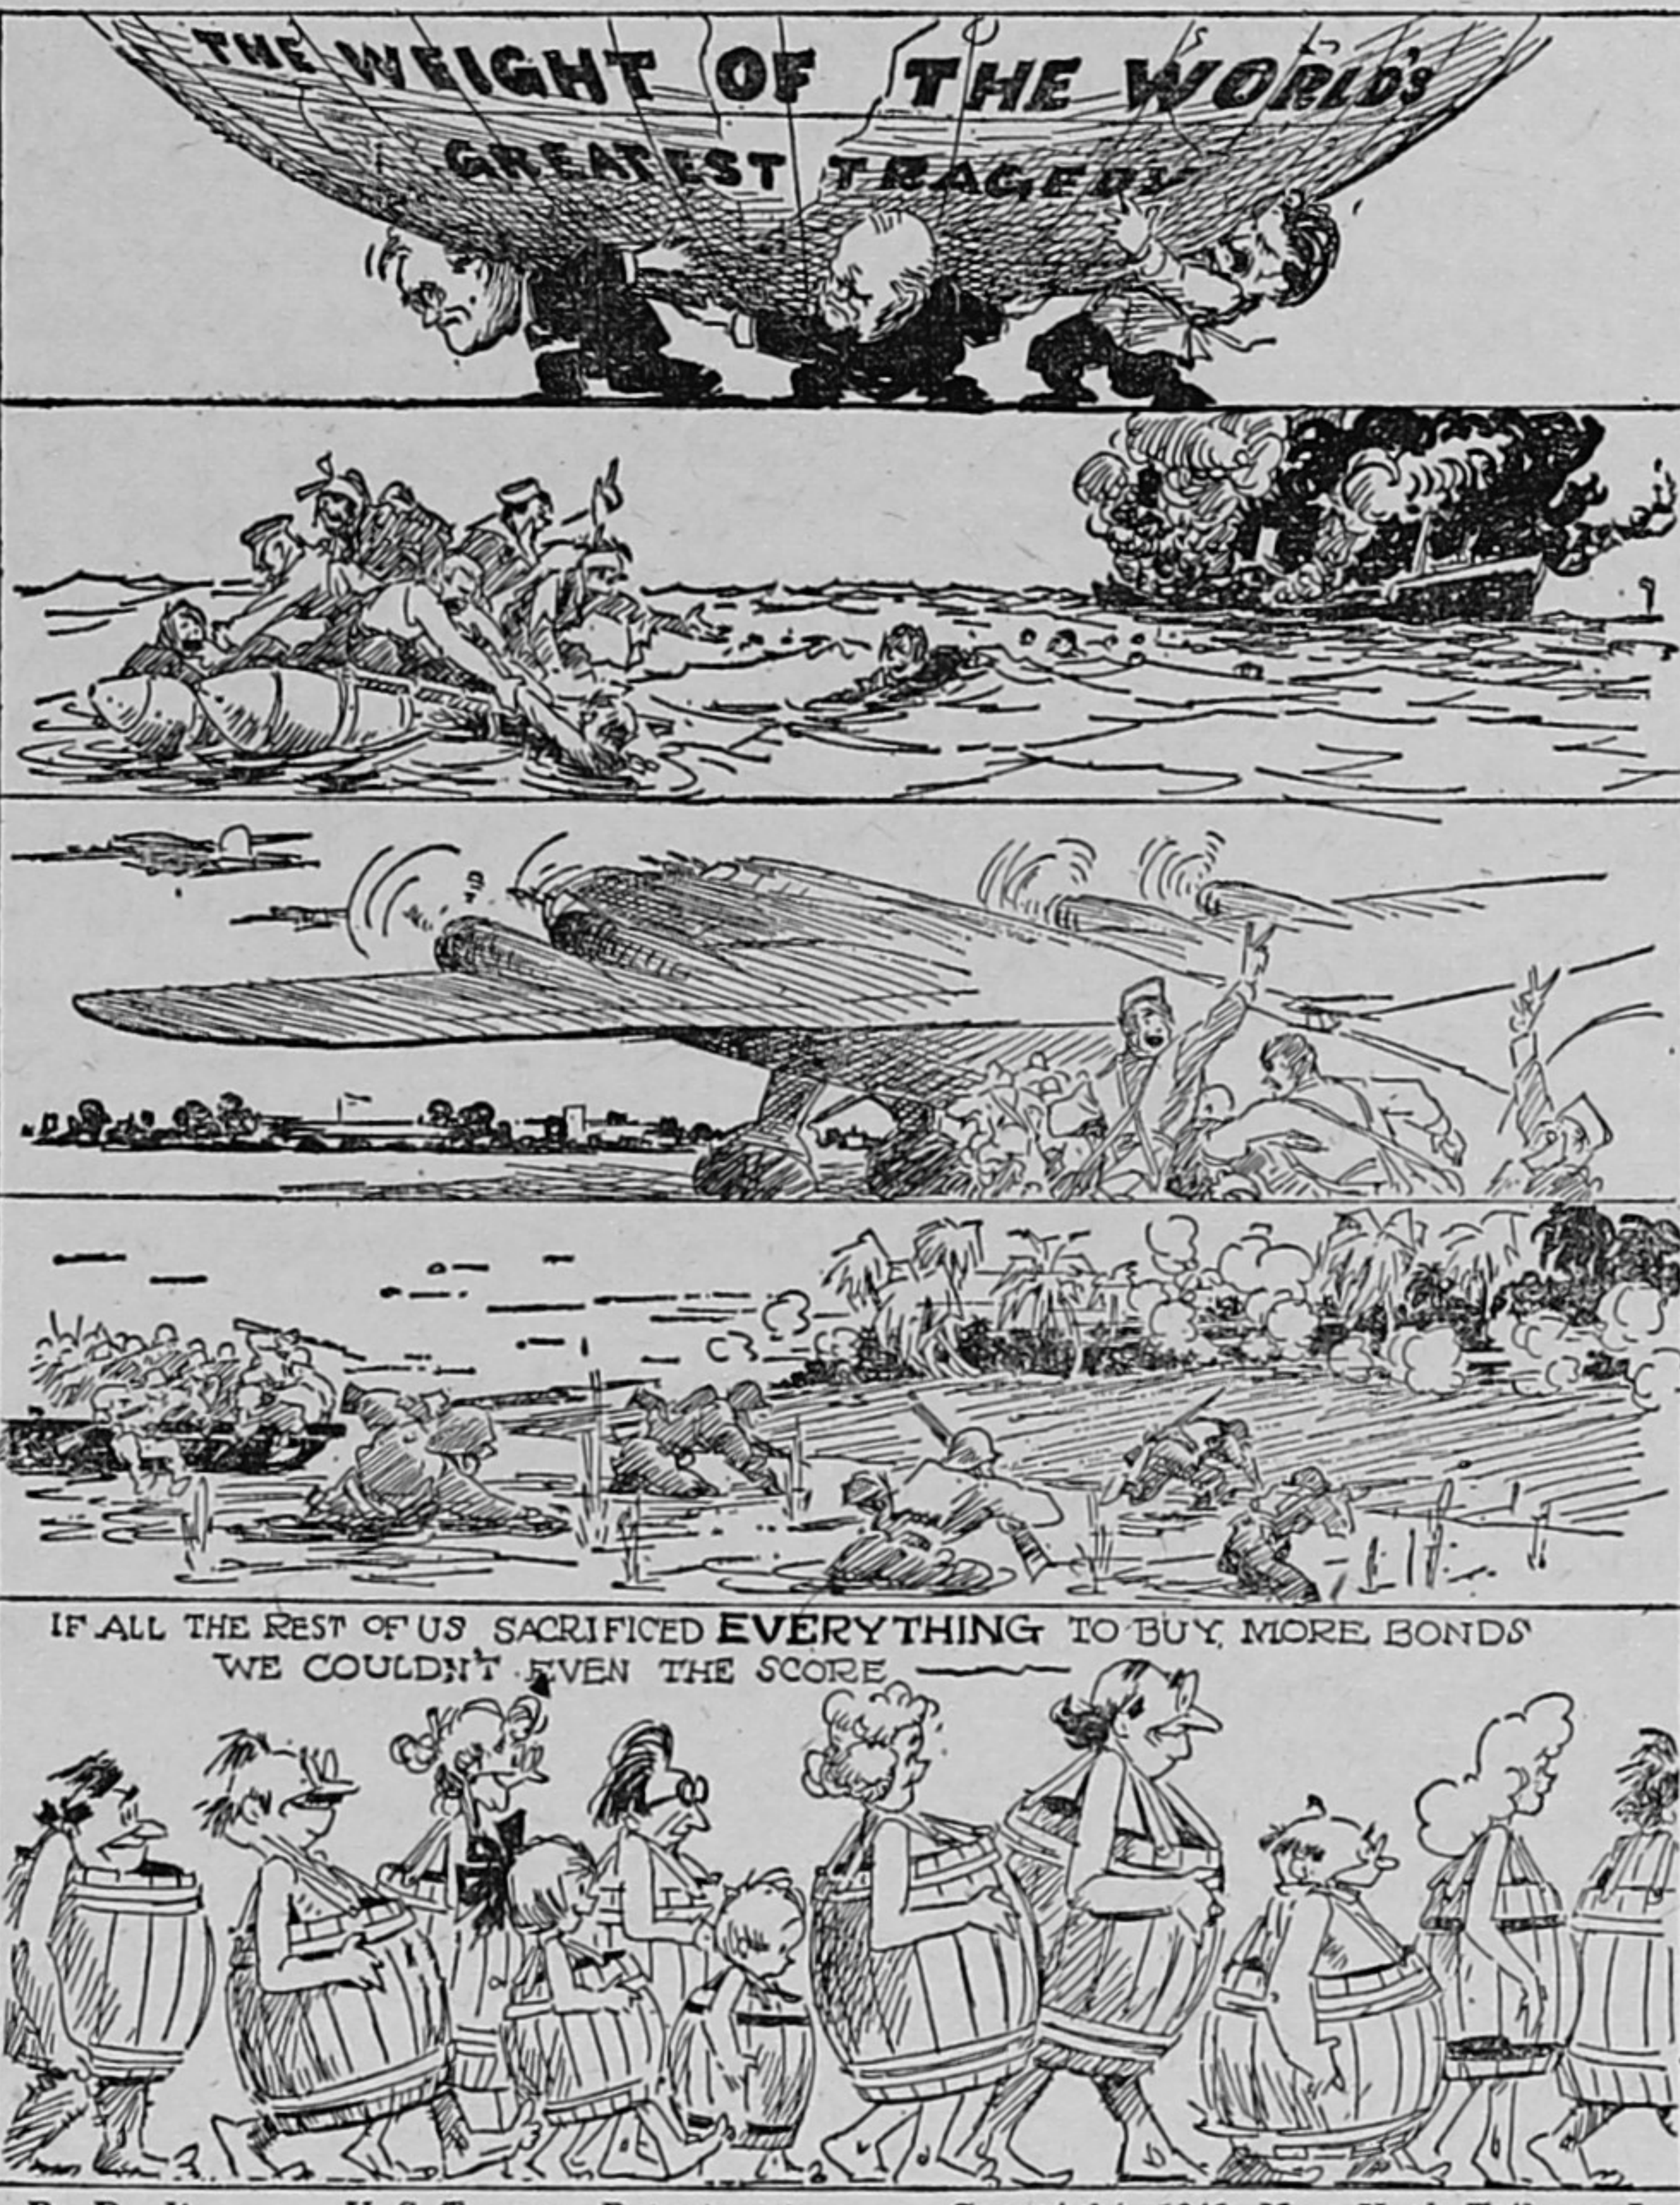

Q. What did the Illinois Territory include at this time?
A. Not only the present State but the lands to the north as far as the Canadian boundary.

Q. What attempt in 1809 did Pope essay in the Indian question?
A. He planned to summon the Kickapoo, a belligerent tribe between the Wabash and the Illinois, to a council at Kaskaskia, and to try to secure the attendance of the Shawnee and Delaware.

Q. Was the council held?
A. No. Edwards vetoed the plan upon arrival to assume the governorship.

POOLED CREAM DELIVERIES SAVE TIRES, GAS, LABOR

FORMERLY--Each farmer carried his cream to town as suited his convenience

TODAY--Each farmer, in turn, delivers his neighbors' cream with his own, thus saving precious tires, gasoline and labor

Officials of the U. S. Department of Agriculture and the Office of Defense Transportation see in the current tire scarcity a serious threat to the quality of milk, cream, and other produce marketed by farmers. The danger lies in the tendency to less frequent marketing, with longer holding on the farm and consequent spoilage or lowering of grade.

The spirit of neighborly helpfulness traditional among farmers promises a way out, however, and plans for the pooling of cream and produce deliveries are being encouraged by our government. This spirit already is manifest in a number of states where groups of farmers are arranging to take turn-about in the use of their cars or trucks for milk and cream deliveries and the hauling of supplies back from town. Where before five cars from a given locality might have been seen on the road to town, each carrying a can or two of cream, today one departs, carrying the combined load of five farmers' cream. The result is a saving of no mean proportions. Sixteen tires have been spared the wear and tear of a trip; four vehicles have had another trip added to their lives, and the time of four men has been spared for field work. Besides that, and of equal importance, milk and cream, highly perishable products, have gone to market on schedule and at top quality. Valuable food and critical war materials have been saved.

Of the three basic principles of quality cream production--cleanliness, cooling, and frequent marketing--the last is of great importance. Two or three times a week is none too often to get cream to market. Longer holding on the farm tends to nullify the good work of keeping cream clean and properly cooled. Time gives bacteria the opportunity to multiply, and they do that at an astonishing rate. Objectionable flavors become more pronounced each day and quality is lowered correspondingly. The result is either a product unfit for food and subject to rejection, or one of such inferior quality that it cannot bring a first-grade return.

Bank's War-Bond Record

The president of the American Bankers' Association reports that the banks of this country have sold 85 per cent of the war bonds sold up to this time. As an essential part of the American business system, the banking industry has reason to be proud of this record. The achievement affords additional evidence that private management, under free opportunity according to the American way, must be protected and preserved.

What You Buy With WAR BONDS

It's not a pleasant picture to contemplate, but War calls for "blood and sweat and tears." And the Army Medical Corps, with its efficient nurses and its volunteer Red Cross "Angels of Mercy," needs thousands of surgical beds for field and base hospitals on every front.

These beds cost approximately $22 each. They are the latest thing in modern hospital beds, with elevating springs. In some instances surgical cots are used in temporary field hospitals and there is a folding bed which may be used in ambulances. Your purchase of War Bonds and Stamps can buy many of these beds for the Army. You'll sleep better if you know our boys have every hospital comfort. Buy War Bonds every pay day. Invest ten percent of your income.

U. S. Treasury Department

LOOK Lady
By JOSEPHINE HUDDLESTON

Time was when it was nobody's business but our own if we spent the night fighting a poorly made bed. It was a free country and if we wanted to spend half the night pulling the sheet off our feet and the other half trying to cover them up again—well, it was our feet, our sheet and our jangled nerves.

We still have a free country and we want desperately to keep it that way. That's why, today, it's everybody's business whether or not we spend the night fighting a poorly made bed. For research shows that ill-fitting bedding robs us of restorative sleep and robs us of textiles—both vitally imperative if our victory plans are to be successful.

Short sheets affect our health because they are an irritation, preventing the peaceful relaxation essential to restorative sleep. Without restorative sleep, there is no period wherein the body can repair the effects of daily wear.

Short sheets affect our fabric conservation plans adversely because they wear out faster than properly fitting sheets, according to the American Institute of Laundering. Not only do these experts know that short sheets wear out faster, but they know why. And, they'd like for us to know, too, for this is the time to conserve every bit of fabric we can. Here's how the Laundry Institute explains the whole business of "frictional wear" which is what gets our sheets when they are too small for the bed.

When Johnny and Bobby begin a tug of war with one of our bath towels, their actions are so exaggerated our concern for the safety of the towel becomes acute instantly. We know that, unless stopped at once, they'll soon have the towel in shreds.

Tillie's nightly tug of war with short sheets tears down her morale and tears up the sheets, both mighty important things to avoid these days when health and fabric conservation are "musts" for a successful war effort.

But what most of us fail to realize is that, over a period of time, less forceful but more continuous yanking and pulling, twisting and crushing, can, and does, have the same effect on all fabrics.

The constant pulling and tugging given to ill-fitting bedding adds up to an appalling total of excessive tension, or strain. Over a period of time, this actually approximates the quick shredding of a towel under a vigorous tug of war!

So, right now, before you lose any more sleep, or sheets, check yours and make sure all sheets are large enough to tuck in securely at the foot and still leave enough to cover the shoulders.

Besides proving a wonderful health and fabric preserver at this time, sheets long enough to cover feet and shoulders at the same time keep quilts cleaner longer.

The Tax Load

We may not be able to reduce the tax load for a long time to come, but we can see to it that tax money is spent for national victory and not for local, state or federal waste.

When We Hurt Ourselves

THE FARM AND THE FUTURE

Future American prosperity, according to Wheeler McMillen, will come from our farms. Farmers have produced what all of us eat and wear. In the future they will produce much of the material that will be used in industry. The products of 40 million American acres are now going to our industrial plants, and that is but a start. From the farms the scientist and the industrialist will secure products from which to manufacture many commodities and make possible the increased factory production from which prosperity is born.

AN AFTER THE WAR PROBLEM

Under the American system of private ownership, management and operation, the automotive industry in this country became one of the wonders of the world.

According to the last census, the annual wholesale value of its products was $5,575,167,433. In the year 1939, almost 3½ million new cars were manufactured. The industry was buying materials and equipment in 1,700 different markets, and operating plants in almost every state in the Union. On January 1, 1940, the number of motor vehicles registered in the states was 32,452,861. History has furnished no production record equal to that. In the use of cars, tires and gasoline the United States led the rest of the world by a wide margin.

Then, suddenly, the huge industry was obliged to re-tool, change all its plans, readjust its schedules, abandon the lines it had been making, and adapt itself to the needs of America's fighting forces. How well it did so, under private direction, is a matter of record.

What of the Future?

Within the period of a few weeks, much more rapidly than had been hoped or expected, motor car and accessory factories were turned to the production of planes, tanks and other fighting machinery. The exact war output is of course a military secret, save for an occasional over-all statement from Washington, but it is known to be of mighty proportions.

But what of the future of a business upon which we were all so dependent when war came? Some day there will be no more need for tanks, planes and guns, and the automotive industry will face another staggering task, that of tooling up for peacetime, to supply what is sure to be an unprecedented market. By the time the war is over, hundreds of thousands of cars will be obsolete. New models will be in demand. The public will be "hungry" for automobiles, as never before. Changing back to peacetime needs will be as vital an undertaking as the change-over to war requirements.

Every American has a stake in this second reversal of production which the automotive industry will have to undergo. The economic system which substituted motor power for horse power and made possible the rapid conversion of motor manufacture to war machines is the system the people will need and demand when the time comes to restore automobiles for their important service in our American way of life.

Not counting petroleum and essential oils used in perfumes there are more than 1,800 fats and oils, of which 30 are important in peacetime and grim necessities in war.

Great Britain is now producing two-thirds of its own food, as compared with one-quarter grown before the war. Private parks, golf courses and other sites are being ploughed up to grow more food.

Keep home electrical appliances and cords out of the reach of children. Their hands are usually more or less moist, which increases the danger of electrical shocks.

Gov. Green Urges 35 Mile Speed Limit Be Observed

"All citizens should limit their automobile driving strictly to matters of business," Governor Dwight H. Green said, in a statement urging the people of Illinois to observe the thirty-five miles an hour speed limit and the restricted driving recommended by the Baruch committee. "I have ordered the immediate withdrawal from operation of every car owned by the state, the use of which is not essential to vital services."

"Illinois citizens have never failed to meet their patriotic duties, and I am confident they will meet the present critical situation with the same willing response."

The Governor explained that while Illinois speed laws can be changed only by action of the General Assembly, state highway police have been instructed to warn motorists who exceed the thirty-five mile speed limit.

Less Traffic on Illinois Highways During August

The month of August is usually the time when cars are thickest on Illinois roads, but August this year showed twenty-two per cent less traffic than last year on the main country highways. The decline was 24 per cent on Sundays, 23 per cent on Saturdays and 21 per cent for other days.

The three-month period ending Aug. 31 showed an eight per cent decline in commercial traffic on the highways as compared to the same period in 1941.

Three shifts of 45 men are doing the drilling. The company is using a large rotary drill, reported to be the third largest such type drill to be used in central Illinois and the first to be used in this territory.

The farm is under the management of Smith Shaw, who has been a tenant for the past several years. The 85-foot derrick is lighted at night and can be seen for several miles.
