Big Crops of Corn and Soy Beans are Being Harvested

Farmers throughout central Illinois are making good progress in harvesting soy beans. A large proportion of the big bean crop is being held on farms because of limited storage space available at terminal markets.

Corn husking is also getting well under way in the corn belt. The yield of corn in Illinois this year is estimated at 53 bushels per acre, an all-time record. The previous high record, made last year, was 52½ bushels per acre.

Broadlands To Celebrate Hallowe'en With Party at Community Building

There will be witches and ghosts and bats aplenty—enough to make you breathe fast and laugh hearty—at the Community Building on Hallowe'en night.

Everyone willing to leave the earth for a few hours and change himself into some grotesque creature is invited to the big community Hallowe'en party on Saturday night, October 31st. Disguise yourself as an animal, as some famous person, as a comic strip character, or whatever you want, but mask, and join the rest at the big frolic in the Community Building.

Entertainment is planned for everybody—young, old, and in between, men and women, boys and girls. Something for all—even the preachers and the school teachers. Food will be served and to cover the cost, ten cents will be asked of all who come.

Even if you insist upon remaining just plain Bill Jones, and can't be persuaded to dress up for a good time, just come along anyway, there'll be something to entertain you, too.

Remember, at the sign of the pumpkin the goblins make merry!

The party is being sponsored by Rev. Robert Frey, pastor of the St. John's Church, and Rev. James S. Ferris, pastor of the Methodist Church.

Obituary of Mrs. Grace Allen Pugh

Grace Allen Pugh was born May 5, 1889, near Longview, Ill., and passed away at her home near Allerton, Ill., October 12, 1942, after an extended illness, at the age of 53 years, 5 months, and 7 days.

She was the daughter of the late George W. and Matilda Allen. She was married to Elmer Pugh on December 19, 1915. To this union were born two sons, Lowell of the United States Army, and Max at home. Besides her husband and two sons, she is survived by her mother, Mrs. Matilda Allen, and one sister, Mrs. Bertha Hodgson, and a multitude of friends.

She was an earnest and energetic member of the Presbyterian Church of Allerton. She was a gentle and loving wife and mother, a devoted daughter and sister. She was a friend whom people liked to have near. She was the very essence of kindness. Grace was loyal in her devotion to God and always demonstrated a true Christian spirit in all her dealings with humanity. A great vacancy has been made in the community, but we would not recall her for a single moment to this world of suffering.

The role of Illinois in the world conflict is strikingly told by the spectacular new sound motion picture "Illinois at War." The film portrays the shifting of agriculture and industry from the peaceful pursuits to wartime production, and shows soldiers of Illinois' own Division, the Thirty-third, marching off to war. Theaters, schools, churches and other organizations may obtain either 35MM or 16MM sound prints of this picture without cost by addressing the Division of Department Reports, 417 State House, Springfield.

A 70-day season for shooting migratory waterfowl began in Illinois October 15. The open season this year will be ten days longer than it was last year. An exception will be made in Alexander County, noted goose hunting region, where the season will close Dec. 15, after running sixty days.

Hunting conditions, none too good as the season opened, are expected to become much more satisfactory as soon as colder weather starts large-scale southward flights of the ducks reported to be abundant in the Northwest.

Daily shooting limits: Ducks, ten; geese and brant, two; blue geese, six.

Reuben Lloyd Dies; Rites Here Tuesday

Funeral services for the late Reuben Lloyd were held at 2 p. m. Tuesday, Oct. 20, from the local Methodist Church, with the Rev. James S. Ferris, pastor of the church, officiating. Mrs. F. A. Messman and Mrs. Edgar Young sang, "Jesus Cares," and "Abide With Me," with Mrs. George Cook accompanying.

Burial was in the Fairfield Memorial cemetery, southeast of Broadlands, with Dicks Bros., local morticians officiating.

Pallbearers were Messrs. Edward C. Remick, Chicago; Oscar Henderson, Homer; F. A. Messman, Thos. W. Bergfeld, Ira F. Laverick, R. M. Astell.

Reuben Lloyd, son of Mary Jane and Jedidiah Lloyd, was born Oct. 10, 1871, and passed away Oct. 16, 1842, at the age of 71 years and six days. He was the fourth of ten children, four of whom, with his parents, preceded him in death.

He spent his boyhood and early manhood in the vicinity of Broadlands. Thirty-eight years ago he moved to Davidson, Saskatchewan, Canada, where he lived until the time of his death. Here he was a true pioneer, as there was no railroad and only a few houses at Davidson at that time. He helped in the development of the country in many ways.

In 1900 he was married to Minnie Todd, who preceded him in death in 1927. To this union were born three children, two of whom died in infancy, and the third, Albert Coolley, now resides in Pittsburgh, Pa.

His second wife, Amanda Landin Lloyd, together with his son, Albert, and two grandchildren, Albert and Virginia Lloyd, survive him. Also five brothers and sisters, Mrs. Lida Waldrop of Villa Grove; Mrs. Addie Freeman, Broadlands; Mrs. Myrtle Cummins of La Cuna, Calif.; Charles of Superior, Neb.; and John of Arcola.

He was a great naturalist and nature lover. He was never happier than when working with animals, birds and flowers. On his home farm he had set aside several acres for this hobby, and here he raised many unusual animals and wild fowl.

Several times the Canadian Government had obtained his help in tabulating and conserving the wild life of several provinces of Western Canada. This service he gave most willingly as he did that of any work he could do for the betterment of his community and country.

Stalin Gives Views

In one of his rare statements for publication, Joseph Stalin gave his views on some important phases of the war situation to Henry C. Cassidy of the Associated Press recently in reply to questions asked by this war correspondent in Moscow.

Stalin said he considered the establishment of a second front as a matter of "first rate importance," that the aid given Russia by the British and the United States had so far been "little effective," and in order to amplify and improve this aid the Allies should fulfill their obligations "fully and on time."

In reply to a question regarding Soviet capacity for further resistance, Stalin said:

"I think the Soviet capacity of resisting the German brigands is in strength not less, if not greater, than the capacity of Fascist Germany or of any other aggressive power to secure for itself world domination."

It is evident from Stalin's statement that he is not satisfied with the aid given Russia by Britain and the United States so far, and that he thinks a second front in Europe necessary to relieve the German pressure. His feeling in the matter is quite understandable, although it is not certain that he fully realizes the tremendous difficulties involved in an attempt to land an effective Allied force in Western Europe.

These difficulties have been pointed out time and time again, and, in the light of the disastrous raid on Dieppe most military experts agree that a land invasion of Germany from the west at any time in the near future would be doomed to failure. There is no indication that the British and American military leaders will be "prodged" into prematurely attempting such an unpromising venture, either by Stalin, Willkie, or anyone else.

Major General Ira C. Eaker, chief of the American bombing command in England, has expressed the opinion that the continued large scale attacks on German objectives by Allied air forces will eventually reach such proportions as to wreck Nazi ports, factories, transportation facilities and other works to an extent which would make a land invasion unnecessary. It is evident that these bombings already have been effective in crippling Hitler's war production, besides spreading terror among the German people.

Marshal Goering in a recent speech confessed the inability of his Luftwaffe to prevent these raids, and called upon all Germans to bear them with fortitude. His tune has been completely changed since he assured them early in the war that no Allied bomb ever would be dropped on German soil.

The Allied air forces already have in reality established a second front in Western Europe, and its scope and effectiveness will increase as the war progresses.

Fire Is Sabotage

"Today fire is sabotage," says a release from the National Board of Fire Underwriters. "Every fire that destroys a single item of war machinery makes it that much easier for the enemies of freedom to kill and maim the fighting men of our country and of all the United Nations. Every fire that keeps a skilled worker away from his job is a victory for the enemy in his race against time. This war will be won by production and not by ashes."

This war has created many grave new fire dangers. Due to lack of new equipment, it is often necessary to use old and faulty equipment of various kinds in both home and industry. Millions of people are working harder and longer than they ever worked in their lives, and that makes for fatigue and carelessness. It is necessary to put little-trained people to work on factory jobs, and many of these people do not understand the fire hazards which are inherent in their occupations. The tremendous speed-up of industrial output in all fields is in itself a definite but unavoidable fire hazard.

Under these conditions, it is necessary that every conceivable safeguard against fire be used to capacity. Every home-owner should get into the habit of periodically inspecting his home for dangers. And in every factory, workers and managers alike must be trained in fire prevention and control. It is especially important that approved types of fire extinguishers be placed at handy spots in plants—and that all workers be instructed in their operation.

It should be remembered that cleanliness and orderliness are in themselves good defenses against fire. The littered home or shop is all set for a destructive blaze. There's a job for everyone in this fight against fire—and the time to do that job is right now!

Tools For The Rails

A short time ago, the railroads of the nation presented to the ODT and the WPB their basic equipment budget for the year which begins this October. The lines asked permission to purchase, with their own money, 80,000 new freight cars of various types, and 900 new locomotives. All of this equipment would be used on behalf of the war effort—for the carriers already have a surplus of equipment for peace-time needs.

If the railroads are given permission they will spend some $350,000,000 for the cars and locomotives. The manufacture of the equipment will call for almost 2,000,000 tons of steel. But, as Time said, "This year the railroads will turn back to the steel mills well over 3,500,000 tons of high grade scrap, enough when mixed with ore to turn out more than three times as much new steel as the railroads are asking for next year's equipment needs." In short, the railroads are giving far more precious steel than they are asking.

As every informed person knows, the railroads have performed a miracle in moving the war traffic to date. They have made every car, every locomotive and every mile of track provide its fullest measure of service. Now the point is near when existing equipment simply cannot provide additional service. The only solution is the modest amount of new equipment the railroads want.

No industry is more important to the success of the war effort than the railroads. Modern war is a war of movement—and no other agency of domestic transport can move the gigantic war load. The railroads are simply asking permission to buy, with their own money, the basic new equipment which the ever growing war load makes imperative.

Sidelights

The Red Cross first aid work taken up by Mrs. John Freeman and daughter of Dalton, Ga., has already paid good dividends. Finding one of his newest pigs suffocating, Mr. Freeman called to his wife and daughter for help. Applying artificial respiration taught them in Red Cross class, the two women were soon rewarded with a grunt. The pig revived.

Scrap metal in the present drive comes from many unexpected sources. At a junk metal pile in Miami, Fla., recently, two workers were busily engaged in loading metal when two unidentified air pilots drove their automobile up to the junk heap, cut off the motor, stepped out and casually said to the men: "Well, there it is." The soldiers left without giving their names.

The Mortons of Thomaston, Conn., are conducting their own phase of the war. Called the Machine Gun Mortons they are going about this business of war in a systematic way. Father Frank Morton, Sr., works in a foundry making .50-caliber machine guns; Mother Morton works in another shop where she makes dies for .50-caliber machine gun bullets; and son, Frank Morton, Jr., is a sergeant in the army, in charge of a squad handling .50-caliber machine guns. Such co-operation is certain to get results.

In an effort to spare his wife further heartache after their 13-year-old daughter had died—Jack Spears, Tulsa, Okla., pocketed the telegram he received from the Navy Department reporting their son, Donald, killed in action. The daughter's untimely death had almost caused Mrs. Spear's death and her husband felt that the news he was keeping a secret might have disastrous results, so he suffered the new sorrow alone. Recently another telegram reached him. It read: "Arrived Charleston Navy Yard okay. All is well. Donald."

"The Problems of Lasting Peace"

Herbert Hoover and Hugh Gibson, from their vast experience during the last war and the negotiations for peace, have made a vital contribution in this book which has just been published. Like all thinking Americans, these men desire to avoid the mistakes of the Treaty of Versailles. "We can have peace or we can have revenge but we cannot have both."

Mr. Hoover, referring to the peace after the first World War, says: "We went to the Peace Conference in 1919 animated by the loftiest and most disinterested ideals, but we were totally unprepared for the specific problems that had to be met at the peace table. We secured neither peace, freedom, nor prosperity." Mr. Hoover lists seven dynamic forces which must be dealt with. First, ideologies; second, economic pressures; third, nationalism; fourth, militarism; fifth, imperialism; sixth, the complexes of fear, hate, and revenge; and seventh, the will to peace.

Personal Liberty.

Concerning our cherished personal liberty, Mr. Hoover says: "The definition of personal liberty varies from time to time and from race to race, for it is modified by the whole racial history of peoples. But there are two essential common denominators. "The first common denominator is the concept of the dignity of man and his personal rights. And, included in this concept, is that these rights are an endowment by the Creator and are inalienable by the state or any other domination. This concept came from two urges. One was from the demand of men for intellectual and spiritual freedom—free speech and free worship; the second, equally potent, was the demand of men for an economic freedom in which they might choose their own callings, bargain for their own labor, and reap and hold the rewards from their own enterprise and efforts."

Mr. Hoover has a deep concern not only for victory over foreign enemies, but for the preservation of our American freedom of opportunity and liberty of conscience as pledged to us by our Constitution. No one has ever questioned Mr. Hoover's honesty, his wide experience and knowledge of the facts, the stature of his mind or his abiding patriotism.

Moth Is Sneak Thief

For a big, husky man to let a frail little moth steal the overcoat right off his back seems pretty silly until we learn mama moth doesn't just walk up and snatch the coat. Instead, she sneaks quietly under coat lapels, deep into pockets, or up under the lining to concealed seams. Utterly unaware he's harboring a thief in the dark, the poor man hangs his coat in a far corner of the closet and, more than likely, forgets it until the chill of autumn jogs his memory. Too late, he then discovers mama moth's young have fed on his overcoat all summer. All of which could have been prevented by having the coat thoroughly cleaned and then stored in that attractive cedar chest the little woman has been hinting for ever since she discovered modern cedar chests are handsome pieces of functional furniture, styled and veneered to fit into any room in the house.

Now that trailer coaches have settled down to war service, they're strictly substantial family affairs. More than 65 per cent of the families living in them have one or more children, which means increased attendance at local schools and Sunday schools.

'Only Congress Has Power'

"If the laboring man is to be required to join an organized group in order to work, because of some over-riding social policy, the compulsion must take the form of new legislation. . . . It can be brought into existence only by Congress; it cannot be created by executive or administrative fiat."—From an Inland Steel Company brief questioning the power of the War Labor Board to impose the closed shop on war industry.

War Intensifies Schooling

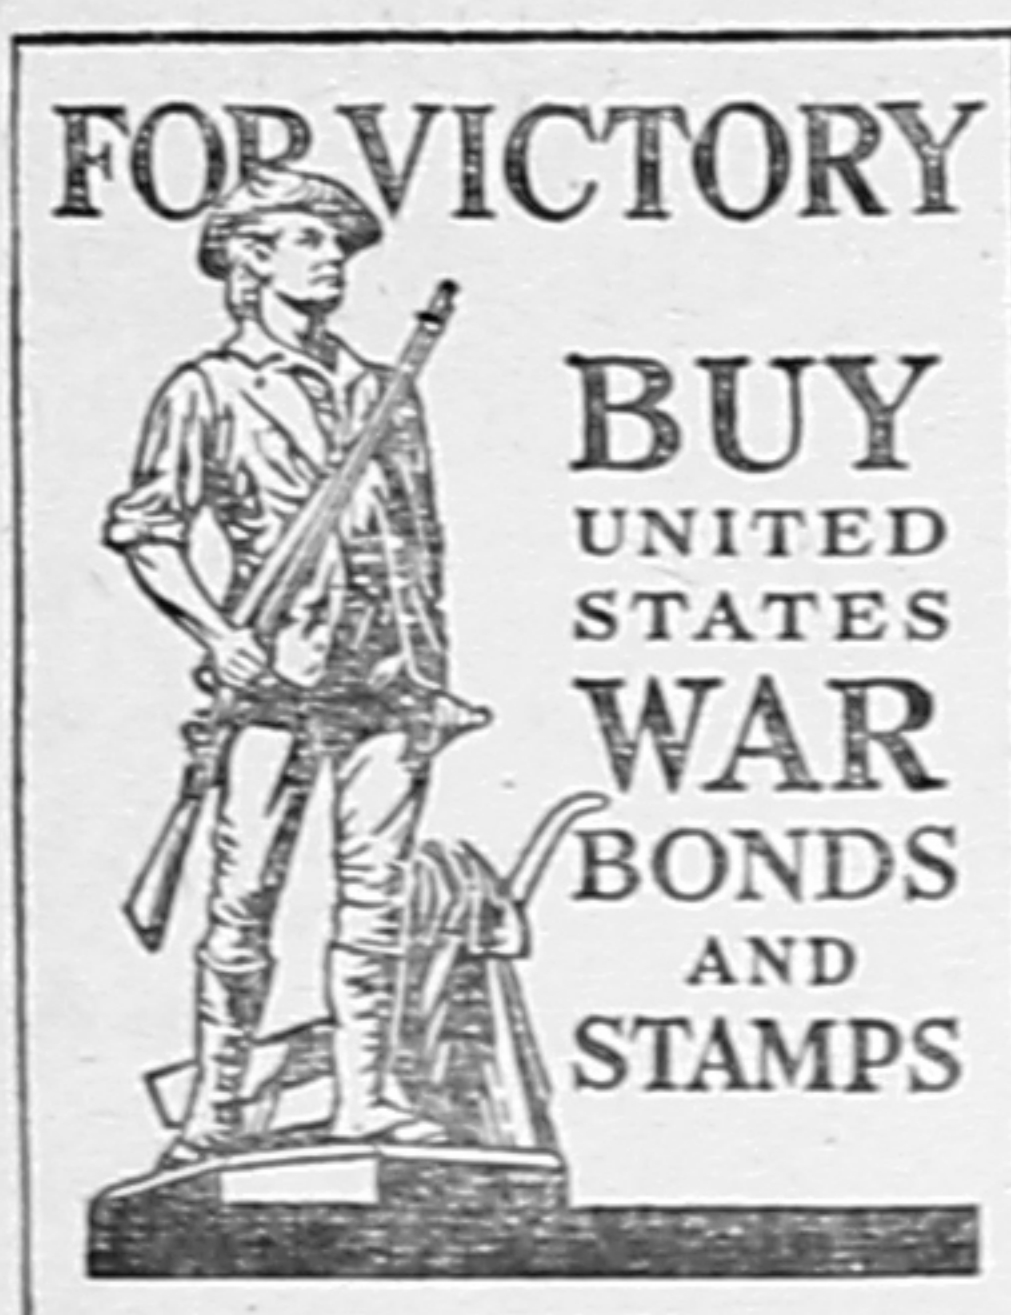

Presidents and faculty members are co-operating with the Board of Education of the Methodist Church to intensify the war-time programs of the 125 Methodist colleges and universities throughout the country. Dr. Harry Wright McPherson, secretary of the Board in Nashville, said their slogan, "Methodist Schools Excel," will have even greater meaning in providing education with a Christian basis. "Only by accelerating the school curriculum," Dr. McPherson said, "can we hope to continue to fit our young people before entering the war effort with the necessary background of Christian education to prepare them for war and post-war world conditions."

"THEY MUST BE FED"

So the World Looks to the American Farmer.

In a recent issue of a Mid-West farm paper these significant words appeared: "Survey in 81 counties reveals need for soldiers on the farm front if world is to eat in 1943." Here are some of the facts disclosed by that survey: Farmers from 60 to 70 years of age are cutting down on their crops; intend to raise fewer hogs and milk fewer cows; reason is—"My farm hand has left for a war job paying $12 a day; my son is in the Army."

The cold fact appears to be that American farmers, who must feed the armies and civilians of this country and a considerable part of the world, are so badly handicapped today that dangerous food shortages may prevail before the end of another year.

The true situation was revealed at a recent meeting of agricultural publishers and business men in Chicago.

Accounts were there given of farmers working 18 hours a day because of labor shortages. No 40-hour weeks for farmers! Stories were told about tractors running 24 hours a day, with alternating shifts of operators; about farm women pitching hay, picking corn, driving tractors and doing other heavy jobs which men ordinarily do, in addition to caring for the poultry and looking after the home.

Food is a First Necessity
Ask the average person to name a list of war materials, and he will probably come to a full stop after mentioning ammunition, guns, planes, tanks, ships and other equipment.

Military leaders since long before the time of Napoleon, who gave expression to the idea, have known that, without food, fighters are helpless. Life is the first essential, so food is a first. And those who produce the food are as necessary to any war program as the ones at sea, on land, or in the air.

This puts the American farmer alongside the makers of shells and ships and other implements of war, if not ahead of them, in importance. If such importance be granted, then the farmer's position in the present situation must be studied with all the seriousness that can be given it.

Nowhere in the United States is our American way of life, our love of freedom and equal opportunity so much a part of every-day life as on our farms. Whatever may be the handicaps, American farmers will tighten their belts and do their level best. They have never failed in all our history—they will not fail now. All they ask from our officials is fair consideration.
