Soybean Crop To Have Value of $8,000,000

Ninety-five percent of the soybean crop in Champaign county should be harvested by the end of the week, according to the concurring opinions of farm authorities in Champaign.

This year's crop, an estimated five million bushels, will have a value of nearly $8,000,000.

Since a government imposed floor on soybeans guarantees the farmer $1.60 per bushel, it is easier to figure their value than it is to figure the worth of corn, hogs, and other commodities.

However, the 12 million bushel corn crop is expected to bring farmers around $8,400,000. The corn is approximately 75 percent harvested and should be entirely done in another three weeks.

Wheat raised by farmers in this vicinity and now being held by the Commodity Credit corporation will be released for sale at market prices to prevent increases in the price of bread and flour.

The announcement stated the release prices will be set by the CCC at such time as the marketing of loan wheat becomes necessary to accomplish the purposes of the program.

If successful, this move will keep bread prices at the level of last March.

Boys Destroy Property

A gang of local boys who have been soaping windows and pulling other Halloween stunts the past two weeks, carried the joke too far the first of this week by upsetting outbuildings, including the building which is used to house the picture machines for the showing of free movies. Some of our citizens are up in arms because of the destruction of their properties, and we will not be surprised if some boys have to pay for damage done.

There are a few "tough eggs" among the boys who are destroying property, and if their parents knew what people are saying about them, they certainly would keep them home at nights.

Ladies of the local Methodist church cleared $94 on their chicken dinner Wednesday night. There were about 200 in attendance.

Community Halloween Festival On Oct. 31st

It is going to be an all-community affair this Saturday night in the Community Building when people, both young and not so young, turn out for an evening of fun and merrymaking.

The various committees have been working hard to guarantee a good time and from all indications thrills and chills will come fast and furious. There are rumors to the effect that there will be several outstanding personages attending, some of whom have national and international reputations, in fact the only limit to what you may expect to find depends upon the extent of your imagination. In keeping with the spirit of a Halloween masquerade festival costumes will be the popular dress, however, the lack of a costume need not keep anyone away. Everyone is invited to come and join in the frolicking.

Five judges have been selected whose duty shall be to select the most original costume, the best masked lady, the best masked man, the best character mask, the most comical, the best masked couple, best masked group of not more than four, best masked girl and boy under twelve. In addition to the prizes for these selections a door prize will be given to the holder of the lucky number.

After the grand march during which the prize winning costumes will be selected, games for all ages are being planned.

The following have been selected to serve as judges: Mrs. Roy Bergfield, Mrs. Ed Nohren, Oscar Witt, George Cook and Joe Darnall. Bud Struck will act as Master of Ceremonies and award the prizes. Among those serving on the various committees are the following: Decorating committee, Lois DeWitt, Maxine Henson, Vera Eliot, Ralph Clem, Howard Mohr and Wally Dicks; prize committee, Mrs. Margaret Anderson and Pauline Limp; publicity committee, Oscar Gallion and Joe Darnall; food committee, Mrs. Ruth Henson, Mrs. Maude Anderson, Mrs. Gladys McClelland, Mrs. Tillie Schumacher, Mrs. Freda Killian and Mrs. Olive Rayl; program committee, Mr. and Mrs. Robert Frey, Jim Ferris, Edna Schumacher, Oliver Coryell and Mrs. Anna Struck; tickets, Harold Anderson.

The doors will be open at 7:30 and the party will start at 8. Lookout that the hobgoblins don't get you and you and you.

Admission 11c including the tax.

Lodge Meets Next Monday

Broadlands Lodge, No. 791, A. F. & A. M. will meet next Monday night at 7:30.

Harriman on Russia

The dauntless courage of the Russian people, soldiers and civilians alike, in the face of hardships that would have crushed a nation less resolute in spirit and body, have won the admiration of W. Averill Harriman, President Roosevelt's lend-lease adviser, who is deeply concerned over their threatened food shortage.

Of special significance in this connection is the fact that Mr. Harriman is one of America's foremost capitalists, being the son of the late E. H. Harriman, railroad magnate and empire builder of his day. The son is a large stockholder in numerous giant corporations, such as Western Union, Illinois Central and Union Pacific, and his companies lost many millions through the cancellation of Russian mineral concessions after the revolution of 1917. Thus his business affiliations are such as to make him a firm advocate of the capitalist rather than the collectivist and communistic form of government.

However, notwithstanding differences of opinion which he may have with the Russians concerning the organization of their internal affairs, he realizes their vital importance to the Allied cause, and desires to see all possible assistance given them in their heroic struggle. His view is described by the Scottish Rite News as follows:

"Mr. Harriman deprecates the subtle undercover propaganda being used by certain Americans to the effect that we should send the Soviet government only enough materials to enable them to check Hitler but not enough to leave it strong at the end of the war. He feels that this point of view should be scotched at once and for all. His view is that Russia is our ally, that we should extend every help possible; that they are a brave and loyal people and have just as much right to determine for themselves the kind of political and economic setup they want as we have to decide what we prefer."

Young Men For War

Following the President's fire-side chat recently, in which he gave approval to the drafting of young men 18 years old and upward, it now appears that legislation to that end will be passed within a few weeks. In this, as in many other important matters, the President and Congress appear to be catching up with public sentiment. The Gallup poll indicated some time ago that the people overwhelmingly favored extending the draft to include these young men.

Some members of Congress who favor calling 18-year-olds to the colors want a provision included which would prevent sending soldiers into combat service before they reach the age of 19, but there is little likelihood that such a restriction would make much difference, as a year or more of training in the United States would precede assignment to overseas duty in any event.

The Navy has been taking many youngsters of 17 as volunteers, with their parents' consent, as was done in the last war and they make excellent sailors.

Recently the Army has been offering special inducements to encourage 18 and 19-year-olds to volunteer for service in technical branches. The drafting of all of these would serve to delay the calling of men with children, and might make their drafting unnecessary, unless the war lasts beyond the end of 1944.

But irrespective of other considerations, all must agree with the President's statement that "all of our combat units that go overseas must consist of young, strong men who have had thorough training."

Women At War

Official statements from the Government indicate that the mobilizing of women for war is full of problems and difficulties which must be overcome.

The aircraft industry is training thousands of women and placing them in positions where they have proved that they have plenty of individual initiative and competent understanding of their jobs.

The country mobilized women to drive motor vehicles 25 years ago; and today the majority of women know how to operate passenger cars, and heavier motor vehicles.

The War Manpower Commission estimates that 4,400,000 women will be employed in the war industry by the end of this year. Mr. McNutt seems to take it for granted that the war will not be over by the end of 1943, and he predicts that about six million women will be in war industries by that time. Chairman McNutt expresses confidence that women can do as good a job as men.

The proportion of women in clerical and office positions in Washington is about two to every man, and no one will be unfair enough to say that they aren't as well qualified as men for the duties in the departments of government.

In the manufacturing industries women are already employed fabricating and forming sheet metal, operating machines in the shops; doing detailed and precision assembly in electrical, radio, instrument, tubing and cable plants; building up controlled surfaces for wings, fuselage assembly and welding; working with plywood, fabrics and sound proofing.

In Washington young women are carrying most of the burden as messengers for the telegraph and other companies. And they are in every branch of the Red Cross, and civilian defense activities.

Sidelights

In New York City, Friday has been termed the "meatless day" of the week and last Friday 125 restaurants observed the occasion. It was the first "meatless day" in 24 years and menus featured all types of vegetables and sea food dishes. Most diners out cooperated in the plan and feasted on spinach and other vegetables instead of sizzling steaks and chops.

The value of an automobile tire was clearly demonstrated by an incident in Augusta, Ga. A report went into police headquarters that all four tires had been stolen from a car owned by a local woman. Three detectives were put on the case and after a short time arrested the thief and recovered the tires. At its weekly meeting, the Civil Service Commission of Augusta divided $150 among the three officers—the gift of the owner of the tires.

Gallus Schnaebel of Miami was in a predicament. He appeared before his draft board for information regarding two questions on his induction papers: "Who is your next of kin; in case something happens to you, who should be notified." He had no next of kin and there was no one to notify. Puzzled, he asked the board if he might leave for an hour. Out he rushed, not stopping until he reached the Columbus Hotel, where he was employed. Finding the switchboard operator, he proposed. She accepted. They were married. He rushed back to the draft board within the hour allowed him, filled in the two blank spaces, and left for an army post.

Do You Know Illinois?

By Edward J. Hughes
 Secretary of State

Q. What was the average of fires in the year preceding the Great Fire in Chicago?

A. Two per day. This was greater than the average of New York which had three times as much population.

Q. What was the rainfall in Chicago in the summer months preceding the Great Chicago Fire of 1871?

A. From July 3 when one .50 inches of rain fell to October 9, there was only one .40 inches.

Q. Where did the O'Learys live in Chicago in 1871?

A. 137 De Koven Street.

Q. At what time did the O'Leary's barn catch fire?

A. Between 8:30 and 8:45 P. M., October 8, 1871.

Q. What desperate measure was taken to stem the fire after it began to spread through the city?

A. Dynamiting.

Q. What was the first building dynamited?

A. The Union National Bank on the southwest corner of Washington and LaSalle Streets.

Q. What building was the next dynamited?

A. The Nixon Block.

Q. Was the dynamiting successful?

A. No. The charge was only sufficient to blow out the windows.

Q. When did the Courthouse take fire?

A. At 1:30 A. M. October 9, 1871.

Household Hints

Furniture needs oil occasionally to keep it from drying, cracking and warping.

Using more cheese, milk and butter in the daily diet saves expensive meats.

Meat that is cooked in water or steamed is juicier if it cools in the juice for an hour or longer.

When making jelly from fruit high in pectin but low in acid, add one tablespoon of lemon juice to each cup of fruit juice.

Don't throw away a chair that needs only a seat to make it useful. Shucks, raffia, fiber and splints may be used for reseating chairs.

Moist, chopped, cooked meat used as a filling between two slices of bread dipped in an egg-and-milk mixture and fried in a little fat is delicious. Fry it crisp and serve hot.

Butter absorbs taints and odors very easily. It should not be kept in the refrigerator or in the cellar with meats, vegetables, etc., unless it is in an air-tight container or package.

When cleaning the backyard remember that old wash tubs, galvanized wire, buckets, tin roofing no longer in use, can go directly into the production of battleships, tanks, trucks, and other war materials.

Know meat cuts and put money in the pocketbook. Cheaper grades and cuts of meat are just as full of food value and flavor as expensive cuts. Talk with the butcher and learn about the different cuts.

WHEN ANDREW "OLD HICKORY" Jackson, seventh President of the United States, went on his war forays he took his cedar chest along. Today's soldier leaves his cedar chest with the girl he left behind so she can safeguard his letters and her trousseau until his return. PLANNING AND EXECUTION of household duties are streamlined to a minimum of effort and waste for wives of defense workers living in trailer-homes. In fact, the average modern trailer-home contains more modern labor saving equipment than the average home anchored to one spot. These wives have some mighty toothsome "main dish" recipes, too. For instance PIGS and PEAS. To make: drain liquid from canned peas, add diced cheese, a pinch of salt and pepper and let simmer until liquid is about 1/3 its original amount. While simmering, brown little pig sausages. Grease casserole with some of the sausage fat, alternate layers of peas and sausages, dot top with cheese and a little grated onion if you like it, pour liquid over and bake slowly from twenty to thirty minutes!

CONGRESS OF UNITED STATES

House of Representatives

Washington, D. C.

To The People of The 19th Congressional District:

We are at war! The 19th District is at war; Washington is at war; the whole country is at war.

This fact has added to my duties as your legislative representative, just as it has added to your work at home.

As your representative, I am now serving as:

1. Assistant Minority Whip;
2. Member Naval Affairs Committee;
3. Member of the Following Subcommittees of the Naval Affairs Committee:
 Discipline and Health (Ranking Minority Member)
 Public Works (Ranking Minority Member)
 Naval Yards and Stations,
 Committee No. 1 on Private Bills,
 Reorganization and Economy,
 Submarines.
4. Member Minority Special Agricultural Committee.

My votes on legislative matters have been based upon information concerning the progress of the war effort which I secured by reason of my membership on these committees. For obvious reasons, much of this information is confidential, but I can assure you so long as I represent you on this committee, that we will have a strong, efficient Navy and will emphasize the value of aviation in Modern Warfare.

I will continue to vote for economy and efficiency in government, and sane, relentless, prosecution of all-out War Effort.

Sincerely yours,

Collection Time

By DOROTHY DOUGLAS
(McClure Syndicate—WNU Service.)

ANNE rushed out to post the afternoon letters from the little suburban shop in which she worked. She had stuffed the letters into her bag and as she reached the letter box on the corner she pulled out the bulky lot and pushed them through the opening.

Then, as she turned away, she gasped and searched her bag.

Yes, she had tossed in the most private letter she had received that morning—the one in which the manager of the shop in which she was employed, had proposed to her.

It was unthinkable that John Barnes' lovely letter should be handed about the post office for every postman in the village to read.

"Whatever shall I do?" Anne asked herself desperately, and decided first that she had better marry him so that he would not have to bear the title of "rejected suitor" among the village teasers. Anyway, Anne had about decided that question in her own mind. She was very fond of John, and after all he was an exceptionally good match for any girl.

Then, all of a sudden she realized that she might go to the post office and ask one of the postmen to get her letter for her. Surely that would be quite simple.

Anne went straight around to that government building and was soon discussing her case with a decidedly pleasant young man.

"I'll tell you the only thing we can do," he told her, and Anne liked his smile, "since we must not open the letter box until collection time—perhaps you could be there at 7:45 this evening and the postman will then get your letter for you."

"Oh!" said Anne with a lovely blush, "it is very good of you. I wouldn't have wanted my letter lost—it's a—very—"

The young man didn't exactly like the emotion Anne displayed regarding her letter. It looked almost as if her love affairs were a settled thing. No girl would act like that over a mere letter even if it were an intimate epistle. No—it must be a love letter.

"I understand," laughed Elswood, "and since you must have it back—you shall most certainly have it. You just pop along to the letter box at 7:45. The collector will get it for you."

Anne hesitated.

"You will tell him—so I won't have to explain again?" she questioned.

"Yes," said Elswood, "I'll tell him that a very lovely young lady is in a very distressed condition because she had dropped into the letter box a—well a note from a maiden aunt."

Anne looked up and caught the twinkle in his eyes and a quick blush rewarded him.

"Well, you wouldn't want the love letters you had written to the girl you were going to marry read by everyone in the town!" she snapped back at him.

"I don't write love letters and I'm not going to marry any girl, at least—"

Anne smiled and from the kind of smile it was Elswood knew she had found out what she wanted to know. It rather pleased him that she was desirous of knowing whether or not he was "booked up," as it were.

"Well—" Anne had wickedness in her eyes now, "perhaps, if the post office is able to restore my love letter—we will invite the entire staff to the wedding," and with that she fled back to the lace counter of John Barnes' store.

"There's one you won't get to your wedding, little lady," Elswood told that vanishing form, "unless he's the man who says, 'I will.'"

And that evening, just when the sun was sinking in glorious splendor behind the great hills that hugged the outer rim of the town, Anne waited, beside the post box. Instead of thinking of John Barnes, she was seeing again the laughing face of the young man who was to get her letter back for her, and the more she thought of him the less inclined she felt to answer that letter in the affirmative.

Then in the near distance she saw the collecting postman approaching and for a second she didn't quite realize that he was the young man about whom her thoughts were centered.

Anne was possessed by a great desire to run away—why, she didn't exactly know. But she stood her ground, and in another moment Elswood had raised his cap to her.

"Just in time," he greeted her with a laugh. "You are more than anxious to get that letter back. I suppose you want to put it along with red roses and other treasured mementos."

Anne smiled. That peevishness meant a whole lot to her.

She glanced at her watch. "It's collection time," she reminded him.

Elswood gave himself the pleasure of a long look into Anne's eyes and what he saw there made him more willing to unlock the letter box.

A few minutes later John Barnes' love letter was restored to its recipient, and in another second, with a soft little smile, Anne tore it into a thousand pieces—"that's that," she said.

Illinois State Capitol News

Illinois has a short honey crop this year—about 4,520,000 pounds compared with 9,225,000 pounds last year. Honey is in good demand as a substitute for sugar, and beeswax is finding many special war uses.

Seeding of winter wheat in Illinois, which was finished some weeks ago in the central part of the state, is now practically completed even in Southern Illinois, where operations were delayed by dry weather. Fall-sown wheat in the central part of the state is up with excellent stand and color. In southern Illinois some fields of wheat are beginning to come up although showing the adverse effect of scanty rainfall.

The dangers and penalties faced by anyone who attempts to hoard gasoline in anticipation of rationing are pointed out by State Fire Marshal John H. Craig. The Illinois gasoline code limits the amount of gasoline which may be kept on hand for private use, except in fuel tanks of autos, to five gallons. Storage is not permitted in any basement, cellar or pit.

Storage exceeding five gallons must be in approved underground tanks, with approved pumps, such as are used by filling stations. An exception is made on farms, where three may be stored fifty feet from any building.

Mr. Craig warns that Federal rationing rules will contain provisions to catch hoarders, and that the Illinois gasoline laws will be strictly enforced.

Broadlands Chapter, O. E. S. observed its 44th anniversary Saturday night.

The two billion pounds of fats and grease wasted annually in the U. S. would make glycerine for about 613,800 tons of dynamite to grease skids for the Axis.
