End at Guadalcanal

After six months of tough fighting the American forces finally finished the job of crushing Japanese resistance on Guadalcanal. It is estimated that the enemy lost nearly 30,000 men on this island alone, and that the number wiped out on Guadalcanal and in the Buna region of New Guinea since last August totaled more than 50,000 land troops, in addition to many thousands lost at sea.

It is further estimated that the Japanese lost 72 ships of all

THE third day of the second week after they reached the cabin on Black Wolf Creek, Sid Condon, exploring a tributary alone, found gold. He spent half a day estimating the value of the find. It was a placer pocket and would probably net a total take of between $40,000 and Sid filled his pipe and sat down to meditate. He was an old hand at prospecting. He knew there was little likelihood of locating the original source of the deposit. The thing to do, of course, was to get Duke Brandon, his partner, clean out the placer, and hit for Big Rock settlement before the snow came.

Or was it? Sid sucked on his pipe, and his eyes grew crafty. Into his mind there came a picture of pockskinned, thin-lipped Duke Brandon. Why should he share this find with Duke? A man with $40,000 could retire and live for the rest of his days in comfort. A man with only half that amount would have to scrimp. What did Duke Brandon mean to him, anyhow? They had met for the first time in Black Wolf two months ago. Both were looking for a grubstake. They had agreed to pool their resources and set out together on a share-and-share alike basis.

Duke Brandon was in a surly mood that night. He had had no luck. The food supply was getting low. Snow would come soon. Why not quit now while their chances of getting out were good?

"Wait a week," Sid urged. "Might as well make sure we ain't missin' anything while we're here." So Duke was prevailed upon. The next morning they started out again in opposite directions. Sid went south, circled west and came out on his placer claim. Working feverishly he panned a handful of gold mile, caching it beneath a large moss-covered rock. The next day and the next and the next it was the same. Duke became more disgruntled. He decided to remain only one more day.

The next morning Duke headed north. Toward noon he swung west and south. At midafternoon he came the shore of what was to him an explored tributary. He sat down to smoke and rest, and as he sat there the slanting rays of the sun fell upon a dull, yellow piece of metal. Duke blinked, then leaned forward. He picked up the piece of metal and saw beyond it a small opening beneath the rock.

Duke Brandon's eyes grew wide. He looked about him like a man who is afraid that prying eyes have discovered him at some nefarious occupation. He knelt and reached into the hole and took out a handful of gold.

Sid Condon had stood in the bed of the stream when caching his placer gold, so there were no footprints nor other signs to indicate his having been there.

Evil thoughts ran through Duke's mind. There must be $30,000 worth of metal in the cache. Half of that was his, according to the unwritten law. The other half-but what could a man do with a mere $15,000. Who was this Sid Condon, anyhow? blackguard at heart, no doubt. One who cared not at all for him or anyone else. It would be simple, so simple, to remove this fortune to another cache.

Duke took a small sack from his pocket and filled it with the dull, yellow dust. His breathing was heavy as he knelt there. His eyes glowed feverishly. He knotted the sack together and rose from his knees-and stopped dead still.

Sid Condon was standing not fifteen feet away. Sid's left hand contained a sack similar to the one in Duke's. It was not full, but the bulge was evidence enough as to its contents.

The two men stared at each other. Significance of the meaning of the a broad if slightly bloody smile. "I situation dawned slowly into their ain't doing nothing, Mammy," she sluggish brains.

Sid Condon's lips flattened against his teeth. His eyes narrowed to slits.

"So!" he cried hoarsely. "So! This is how it is! Partners, eh?" "Partners," Duke Brandon echoed. "Partners!" he repeated in ugly scorn. "You louse!"

Sid Condon laughed harshly, wickedly. He was bigger than the other man, and he felt confident.

Sid Condon saw his partner's body though, for the sound of his own and there was a drumming and in airplanes. pounding in his ears. He sank to his knees, and through the haze of his vision he saw that Duke Brandon was also on his knees.

Then he knew that Duke had equalled him in speed at the draw. He fired again and a third time; and Duke returned shot for shot.

Thus they lay, so close they could almost touch, each dying, each holding firmly to a sack of Rosebud is a great reader of the newspapers. Mammy and Pappy don't take one, but there are plenty of perfectly good newspapers blowing round Vinegar Hill. It was out of one of them that Rosebud got her idea for spending the ten cents the Bunny had put under her pillow the night her tooth came out. After breakfast Rosebud disappeared down the Hill and reappeared soon after with a beautiful ten-cent War Stamp pasted firmly into a brand-new book with neat little squares for more stamps. She displayed her investment to Mammy. "I declare you're an angel child," Mammy said. Rosebud went on sitting on the kitchen floor staring with large brown eyes at the empty squares in her book. From time to time she took hold of one or another of her teeth and

He wondered if he could carry on a harmless flirtation without hurting Candida, without making his interest in Lita seem obvious. He decided that he could.

The next night he was halfwo through a dance with Lita when said denly he stopped. He took her the arm and without There was a moon, but does shad the shadows.

"Lita!" he said huskily, and took her in his arms. She yielded. The kiss lasted an eternity. They broke away at sound of voices close by. One of the speakers was Candida's mother. Johnny grasped Lita by the hand and dragged her swiftly away. They had not, he was sure, been observed.

Two nights later Johnny again get. He said things that he know he see loved her. He told her she had given life a meaning. He told ber that he didn't want to go on living without her.

Lita reciprocated nobly. She gave back answers of a like nature, only differently put. They kept it up for an hour or more, babbling nonsense to each other, assuring each other that no one else existed in the world.

Repetition began to rob the conversation of its sayor. There were long pauses, while each tried hard to conjure a new angle. The conversation that had started off delightful little intimacies, began to pall. Johnny became annoyed. It occurred to him that it was a p they couldn't talk about somethis else. It flashed across his mind the the guy who married Lita would have a pretty dull time, if this were the extent of her intelligence. He gan to think of some excuse to go away. A couple of words with Can dida at the moment would be refreshing.

Descending the companionway stairs, Johnny cursed himself for being seven kinds of a fool; Now the possibility that he hadn't succeeded in keeping his flirtation from appearing obvious, struck him brutally. What if Candida had noticed? What if she . . . He dared not think of the possibilities.

Two minutes later he knocked on Candida's door. She opened it and came out into the corridor. , "Dar ling, what's happened? You lookqueer." "I feel queer." Johnny laughed. He took her into his arms. You can cure me though-by assu ing me that you still love me,
