Illinois State Capitol News

The amount of traffic on Illinois highways during January was 41 per cent less than it was in January, 1942. Sunday driving showed the biggest decline, being one-half what it was a year ago. Weekday traffic was off 37 per cent.

A sharp increase in the number of hogs on Illinois farms, as compared to a year ago, and a slight increase in beef and dairy cattle are shown in the latest livestock report of state and federal departments of agriculture. Sheep and lambs, horses and mules are fewer, but worth more than last year.

The month of March has been selected as the time for the 1943 War Fund drive of the American Red Cross.

Red Cross responsibilities have been greatly increased by the war. Red Cross workers are busy on every front where American fighters are found. The Red Cross is the recognized agency for forwarding aid and supplies to Americans who are held prisoners in enemy countries.

Analysis of the list of almost sixty thousand Illinois children who received Aid to Dependent Children payments in February shows that nine out of ten of them had been getting some kind of financial help from the state before being placed on the dependent children's roll. About two-thirds of them had been on general relief; others had been aided through grants for mothers' pensions. From these facts state welfare officials conclude that the Aid to Dependent Children act did not create a new class of dependents in Illinois.

Methodist Church Notes

James S. Ferris, Pastor

Morning Worship at 10 o'clock, "Dedication Sunday."

Sermon text: "But seek ye first the kingdom of God, and His righteousness." It is the intention that every one of the 42,000 churches of Methodism in this country will have its doors open on this day for the worship of God, and for a personal commitment of self, service, and substance to Him through loyalty to Jesus Christ. The leaders of the Methodist Church believe that peace can be restored and human rights and liberties maintained, only in so far as Jesus' way of life—reverence to God and loving service to mankind—is accepted and practiced by all the sons of men. This Sunday has been set aside as a special day for dedication or rededication, as the case may be. Everyone is welcome.

Sunday School—10:45.

Special program at 7:30 sponsored by the Young People's Fellowship. Mr. Victor Sherring, a native from one of the northern provinces of India and now a student at Garrett Biblical Institute, will demonstrate several native musical instruments and tell of his native country as well as answer any questions about India which you may have in mind. This should be a program of timely interest to everyone in view of the role India has been following of late in world affairs and particularly the actions of Mr. Gandhi. The general public is cordially invited to attend this program at 7:30.

THE HOG THAT WILL NEVER GO TO MARKET

It's a hog you don't see in this country. Landrace is the breed, a wonderful bacon hog developed in Denmark.

The Danes were just about the very best farmers in the world. They were a thrifty people. Through their farm cooperatives they produced and marketed livestock and farm products of the finest quality.

Successful and happy were these farmers—until one day the Germans came. They took the hog. They took all hogs. They took the butter and the cheese—and the cooperatives too. Like vultures, they picked Denmark to the bone.

Remember this story as you market your livestock, crops and other farm produce. Remember it and put every dollar you can into U. S. War Bonds—every dollar you can.

Every dollar in Bonds that you can for your country and for yourself. Your Government needs that money now and you yourself are making a sound investment.

The Bonds never depreciate in value. You get a third more than the original cost of the Bonds in ten years. You can always cash the bonds after sixty days if you need the money. Buy now—at your bank or post office.

Allied Peace Aims

Some of the idealists who are busy making blue-prints for a post-war Utopia might well bear in mind that the nations which are bearing the burden of the struggle will decide the terms of the peace among themselves. So far as we can see, there is no indication that there will be any serious friction because of rival claims of Britain, Russia, China and the United States.

Prime Minister Churchill has frankly stated that Britain intends to hold what belongs to her, including the territory taken from her by force. No one in authority has objected to that, and Mr. Churchill's declaration did not "shock the world," as Mr. Wilkie professed to believe.

Stalin has disclaimed any desire to seize territory not formerly Russian, but the Soviet newspaper Pravda makes it plain that Russia expects to recover the Baltic states and Bessarabia, which were part of that country before the first World War. No definite statement was made regarding Finland.

China wants to recover her former territory, including Manchuko, which was lost through Japanese aggression.

The United States will hardly give up any territory held before the war, and no other nation expects us to do so.

In short, the four great Allied powers do not appear to have any conflicting territorial interests, so far as their present and former holdings are concerned. They also seem disposed to restore the former territory of the other European nations which have not aided the Axis.

The disposition and control of Axis territory will present many difficult problems, but these must be solved primarily by the four great Allies, which alone will have the power to enforce whatever decisions may be arrived at after the war. And these decisions will be made by the constituted authorities, and not by private individuals or debating societies.

There is no harm in discussing these problems, political and economic, by the public in the meantime, but there is danger in the irresponsible utterances of individuals which may tend to create discord among the United Nations.

Already there has been too much unwarranted criticism of Britain and Russia, and too much loose talk about remaking the world overnight after the war.

Freedom of speech should be preserved, of course, but it should be borne in mind that foolish speech can do great harm, whether it is indulged in by officials or private citizens.

A Sullivan Memorial

No other American family has suffered such a loss in this war as that of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Sullivan of Waterloo, Ia., whose five sons went to death with the cruiser, Juneau, when that vessel was sunk in the Pacific by the Japanese.

In a letter to Congressman Maurice J. Sullivan of Nevada, Arthur W. Sullivan of Boston has suggested that all the Sullivans of the country be invited to donate a dime or more each for the purpose of building a me-memorial to commemorate the sacrifice of these brothers. The letter said in part:

"The five Sullivans of Iowa have immortalized our name in American history. It seemed appropriate that all the Sullivans of America be invited to join in a tribute to build a shrine in honor of these five men whose example should forever be an inspiration to the youth of America."

The idea is a worthy one and probably would meet a hearty response on the part of the vast number of Sullivans in the United States if the plan can be brought definitely to their attention.

There are doubtless many families who will lose more than one member during the war, but it is unlikely that another instance of five brothers dying for their country will occur. Three sons of Mr. and Mrs. Jack Ellis Rogers of Birmingham were killed in a single battle in the Pacific while serving in the Navy last December.

These exceptional tragedies suggest that it might be well to avoid permitting more than one member of a family to serve on a single warship.

The Submarine Toll

The sinking of two American passenger and cargo ships, with a total loss of some 850 lives, in the North Atlantic early in February, which was reported by the Navy Department recently, is another stern reminder of the seriousness of the German submarine campaign.

It was indicated that one ship lost 600 out of 900 persons on board, while the other lost about 250 out of 500 on board. The two vessels were sunk in a period of four days by submarine torpedoes, and each sank within 30 minutes after being struck. Whether the ships were sailing in convoy or alone was not disclosed.

Most of those aboard the vessels were Army, Navy, Marine and Coast Guard personnel and civilian war workers. A Navy spokesman made the vague statement that the ships were not transports in the technical sense, but were privately-operated passenger-cargo vessels not under direct control of the armed services.

This indicates that they may not have had the protection of naval escorts.

The loss of these two ships brings the number of American troop-carrying vessels sunk by submarines during the war so far to 12. The transports Bliss, Scott, Rutledge, Hewes and the Leedstown were torpedoed off Africa in connection with the landing of General Eisenhower's army last November. The Elliott, Little, Gregory, Calhoun and Coolidge were sunk in the Solomon Islands area of the Pacific, but the loss of life in each instance was comparatively small.

Considerably more than 600 cargo ships have been sunk in the Western Atlantic alone since the German submarine campaign in American waters began in January, 1942, but the number of Allied vessels sunk in other parts of the world has never been revealed.

Submarine sinkings are expected to increase this spring, as it is known that the German U-boat fleet is constantly becoming more formidable.

Sidelights

We wonder if there was anyone in Champaign county who had to declare as much as a Pittsfield, Mass., woman. When she reported to register for her War Ration Book No. 2, her declaration certificate showed that she had 1,000 cans of food above her allowed five cans for each member of her family. Registration officials figured out she would not be entitled to any more coupons until 1960.

Although the Military Police usually get the jibes and the jeers, once in awhile they get a break. And so it was with Pfc. Harry Stauffer, an M. P. at the Bainbridge (Ga.) Army Air Field. While patrolling a downtown Bainbridge street recently he received a call to quell a rumpus in a nearby hotel. Arriving on the double, he found instead of the expected riot, his wife waiting for him, a sergeant with a three-day pass for him, and a private to relieve him from duty. The surprise party was planned by his wife with the aid of her husband's buddies.

Drew Hilton, for fifteen years a valuable member of the Atlanta, Georgia, police department and now serving as chief turnkey at headquarters, has won himself a place in Ripley's "Believe It Or Not" album. Recently there was trouble at the jail and Hilton was called in to help. One prisoner more unruly than the rest, made a pass at Hilton and woke up in a city hospital. Hilton also reported to the hospital to have a tooth extracted from his right fist. The tooth formerly belonged to the prisoner but became imbedded in Hilton's right hand when his fist landed on the unruly one's mouth.

The burdens of the war grow heavier. With the period between coffee rations extended from five to six weeks; no canned goods sold during last week; meat becoming harder and harder to get, and the sugar bowl becoming empty long before the ration period ends, the burdens of war come closer and closer to the housewife and the man of the house. All of which reminds us of the story told by Abraham Lincoln in one of his addresses. It seems he saw a small boy carrying an even smaller boy up a hill. Asked whether the heavy burden was not too much for him the boy answered: "It's not a burden, it's my brother." Are these insignificant sacrifices we are called on to make today a burden—or should they be our happy contributions to the welfare of our fighting forces? Maybe these burdens are the "lift" we give our brother.

What You Buy With WAR BONDS

It is imperative that the ship lanes be kept free of ice. With American troops occupying Iceland and the Navy using the northern route for transportation of supplies to Russia, ice breakers are essential to Naval operations. The ice breaker is a specially constructed ship with heavily armored bows and powerful engines that crush the ice floes rather than ram through them.

Ice breakers of the Kickapoo class operating in the North Atlantic cost approximately $10,000,000. You can help our Navy build these ships by investing at least ten percent of your income in War Bonds every pay-day. Enroll in the payroll savings plan or apply at the nearest bank or postoffice. U. RED CROSS WAR FUND MARCH - 1943

Symbolic of the role the Red Cross is again playing, the 1943 Red Cross War Fund poster depicts the organization as a mother ministering to the needs of the men of the United States armed forces and the victims of war throughout the world. The poster is an appeal to all men and women for contributions to the War Fund. Lawrence Wilbur, noted illustrator, designed the poster. Helen Mueller is the model.

Red Cross Needs $125,000,000 To Finance Wartime Program

WASHINGTON, D. C.—Faced with the greatest wartime program in history, the American Red Cross will launch its 1943 War Fund appeal for $125,000,000 on March 1, Chairman Norman H. Davis has announced.

Pointing out that the bulk of the fund will be used to expand Red Cross services to the men of the armed forces and their families, Chairman Davis urged every American man and woman to contribute to the fund.

With the approval of President Roosevelt, who also is President of the American Red Cross, the month of March is being observed as Red Cross Month. Walter S. Gifford, president of the American Telephone and Telegraph Company, is chairman of the Red Cross 1943 War Fund.

"Red Cross services to our armed forces and to the needs of distressed civilians on the battle and home fronts can be supplied only by great expenditures and sacrifices," Chairman Davis said. "We are exerting our utmost efforts to accomplish these tasks with the least possible drain upon the resources of the people in funds, time and energy. We must never falter in our determination to meet these definite obligations. The Red Cross is confident that all our people will be generous in their support of the 1943 War Fund."

More than 65 percent of the fund received by the national organization will be devoted to meeting Red Cross responsibilities to the armed forces. These include the Red Cross overseas club program, recreation and hospital program, the stationing of field directors at all foreign and domestic military camps and bases, the huge surgical dressing production program, and the blood plasma project which recently was expanded to a total of 4,000,000 pints at the request of the Army and Navy. Chairman Davis pointed out that the 1943 program will be vastly greater than the accomplishments of last year, in which the Red Cross aided millions of war victims through its foreign war relief program; gave aid to thousands of prisoners of war; collected 1,500,000 pints of blood for the armed forces; produced 520,000,000 surgical dressings, and aided more than 1,500,000 servicemen and their families. The $125,000,000 quota, he said, will finance the local, national and international work of the Red Cross for the entire year, barring unforeseen emergencies.

Q. What is the ratio of land and water area in Illinois?

A. Land: 56,043 square miles (99 percent); Water: 622 square miles (1 percent); excluding part of Lake Michigan within the legal boundaries of the state.

Q. What were the legal boundaries of Illinois as prescribed by the convention?

A. East: Middle of Wabash River and the Indiana state line to the northwest corner of Indiana, east along the northern boundary of Indiana to the middle of Lake Michigan, thence north along the lake to 42 degrees, 30 minutes north latitude. North: Westward from the middle of Lake Michigan, along 42 degrees 30 minutes north latitude to the middle of the Mississippi. West: Middle of Mississippi to the junction of the Ohio.

WALT knew he'd entered the wrong driveway the moment he swung in between the two huge stone pillars. But there wasn't any place to turn around, so he kept on going. Abruptly he rounded a clump of shrubbery and burst on to a crowd of people scattered over a velvet green lawn. There were gay umbrellas around and metal tables and chairs painted a bright orange. Somewhere an orchestra was playing and there was much laughter and shrill voices.

Walt had to drag his tires in the gravel to avoid running down a girl who burst away from a group of people and came flying toward him. "You're Bill Thayer, the boy Ed Carter said was coming down from Santa Barbara! Oh, I'm so happy to see you!"

Walt swallowed and started to say he had never heard of Bill Thayer, but the girl, a rather dumb-looking creature, rattled on without giving him a chance.

"Just leave your car here. Poole will take it to the garage and Roberts will show you to your room. Then you must hurry down and join us all."

A liveried driver, obviously Poole, suddenly materialized beside the roadster, saying quietly: "Beg pardon, sir."

Walt hesitated. This was Hollywood, he reminded himself. People did crazy things, like crashing parties where they weren't even known, and having a swell time. He'd often wondered what a party like that was like. Here, he decided suddenly, was a chance to find out.

"O. K., Poole. And while you're at it, once over lightly. I picked up a spot of dust coming down." He slid out from behind the wheel. Poole slid in. The girl had vanished. A stiff looking individual came from the house and removed his bags from the rumble seat. "This way, sir."

Fifteen minutes later, Walt, garbed now in flannels and sport jacket, emerged again on to the lawn. No one paid him much attention. For an instant he had a moment of panic. Suppose they found out he was an imposter? Then the girl whom he'd almost run down, fluttered up, "Hello! Aren't you Tom Potter? But, no. Tom's a blond. Oh, well, I'll stop guessing. You tell me. I'll introduce you."

She didn't, however, get a chance. A young man with an old face came up and said something about the punch bowl being empty and she rushed off. Walt wandered around. People were everywhere. One or two spoke to him and suddenly out of the sea of faces he saw one that gripped his heart.

It was as if he had seen the face before, though he knew he hadn't. It was as if he had been looking for such a face all his life. It didn't seem queer that she was staring at him. It didn't seem strange that he should go directly up to her and say, with no restraint or hesitation: "I'm sorry. I don't believe we've met. I'm Walt Whiting."

She smiled. "I'm Nancy Lovell." "I like that name. Shall we dance?"

They moved toward the tiled flooring that was used for dancing. When he took her into his arms it was as though all his life he had waited for this moment. Neither of them spoke. A contentment dwelt in their hearts, a curious sense of oblivion and peace as if strife and struggle and pretense had ceased to be and each had reached a goal which they had been seeking for untold ages.

After the dance they walked away from the others. They found a brook and followed it, sat beneath a pepper tree and Walt at last looked up into her face.

"You won't think me crazy, I—I seem as though this is what I've always wanted. You, I mean."

"I understand," she said. "I know. I feel it too." She laid her hand on his and the blood pounded warm in his veins—

It wasn't until he awoke the next morning in the blue and white room that had been assigned to him that Walt realized with a shock the mistake he had made, the futility of continuing this game of pretense. The lovely, serene face of Nancy Lovell rose in his mind, and a pang stabbed at his heart.

Yet he could not resist the temptation to see her once more, to talk to her, to—selfish though it seemed—watch the changing lights of her eyes when he confessed his deceit.

Fate mocked him again when he found her beneath the selfsame pepper tree. She looked up at him and smiled, wistfully, he thought. He hesitated, deliberating; knowing it would be folly to torture himself longer.

"I don't belong here," he said. "They think I'm Bill Thayer. I'm not. I drove in here by mistake—"

Her eyes grew wide. A gasp escaped her lips, followed by tumbling laughter.

"Oh, how wonderful! I was so afraid. You see, I don't belong here either. There are so few of us that do. Fifteen of us heard about this party and we decided to try crashing it just for fun—the way you read about. It worked. Then I met you and—and that spoiled it. We—fifteen of us girls—are eastern school teachers on vacation!"

Household Hints

To make butter go farther mix it with milk, or with milk and plain gelatin, and whip the mixture to a smooth creaminess.

Add a few tablespoons of kerosene, turpentine or lemon juice to the boiling water to help to whiten very dirty clothes.

Fix a special hanger for that dress that keeps slipping off the hanger; rubber bands placed tightly around the ends of the hanger will do the trick.

Freezing is hard on clothing fabrics. Handle frozen clothes carefully in order not to tear or break the fabric. Never let wool freeze.

Spread one side of sandwich bread with mayonnaise or peanut butter to make the butter go farther, and to make sandwiches more tasty.

It is a wartime duty to see that no fat goes to waste. All fat saved from cooking should be used again unless it has been scorched or is too strong.

When clothes must dry indoors open windows, top and bottom, so the steamy air will pass out the top, and fresh air will enter the bottom.

Use beans to stretch the meat. Mash 3 cups of cooked beans and mix with a half cup of bread crumbs, 2 beaten eggs, 1 teaspoon of sage, salt and pepper to taste. Moisten with liquid and shape into the form of sausages, dip in beaten raw egg, roll in breadcrumbs, brown in melted fat.

With the arrival of warm weather and the incentive to play outdoors, the Chicago Motor Club poster distributed this month to all the schools in 92 counties of Illinois and Indiana calls upon children to play in some protected area and out of the path of moving traffic. Child accidents invariably show a decided increase in the warm months with a large number traced directly to "playing in the street!"

GARDEN SEEDS FOR ALL

"There will be enough seeds of standard vegetables to meet the normal needs of Uncle Sam's vast army of Victory Gardeners in 1943." This confident statement comes from Dexter Ferry of the Ferry-Morse Seed Co., the world's largest seed breeding and growing organization. "Our own home gardeners are provided for," he adds, "even though we are shipping large quantities of seeds to our Allies."

American-grown seeds will indeed plant the gardens of the far corners of the earth this year as well as those of this hemisphere. Certain types of seed are being sent to all the friendly nations because their usual sources of supply have been cut off. By air and by water they are being carried to England, Russia, Australia, India, New Zealand, British West Indies, South Africa, and many other Allied countries.

Sharing garden seeds with other countries, as America is doing, is one of the most economical as well as one of the most effective ways of helping needy neighbors in wartime. Seeds take up less room than most food stuffs, thus leaving valuable shipping space for important munitions and other war supplies. From a health standpoint vegetable seeds are a necessity in every land because they are the basis of fresh foods which could not possibly be shipped long distances without deterioration.

"Because there are garden seeds enough for Victory Gardeners does not mean that they can be used carelessly," Mr. Ferry explains. "As a wartime measure, every man, woman, and child who plans a Victory Garden this year should make the most of every seed planted. Determining the right amount of seed for a given space, proper planning and planting so that all seeds will have the best growing chance, caring for crops to avoid waste and spoilage, and making good use of the garden-fresh food produced, will all help to prevent what otherwise might be serious national food shortages."

Although seed supplies in general are sufficient, certain varieties of some kinds of vegetables are rather short this year due to unfavorable growing and harvesting conditions, according to Mr. Ferry.

"That should inconvenience no one," he says. "If you cannot find seed of your pet variety of vegetable at your dealer's, there will be others so nearly like it that you will not miss your favorite."
