Letters To The Editor

Fort Ord, California, March 28, 1943.

Dear Joe: Just a few lines to let you know that my address has changed.

I sure do enjoy the paper and the rest of the boys get a big kick out of it. I always like to keep up with the news that goes on around Broadlands, so when my subscription runs out in November I want to take it out again for another year.

Well I will close for this time and hoping to see Broadlands friends again soon. I close with best wishes and thanks for sending the paper away out here.

Your Friend,

We received a card from Miss Beulah Gore who is employed in Seattle, Wash. She writes:

"The City really is quite a place. It has rained most of the time, but cleared up today so that I really had my first glimpse of snow capped mountains. The harbor here is really marvelous—all ocean going vessels, including battleships are able to come up to the pier on their own power."

Urges Development of the State's Protective Services

Chicago — Warning that the next "possible war with sudden and vast aerial attack against civilian centers will leave no time for development of an effective system of civilian defense," Major Gen. Frank Parker, executive director of the Illinois State Council of Defense, urged development of the state's protective services for this and future wars.

The state council in February began a series of monthly simulated tests that will be climaxed in July by all services, equipment and personnel operating under full emergency conditions. The second test held in March revealed greater participation throughout the state than in the February exercise and was marked by increased efficiency.

In a message to citizens defense corps members now training for all out conditions of war, Gen. Parker said "your duty is to prepare for possible immediate attack and develop a system tested by practical exercise for present civilian protection that can be recorded for the benefit of future generations."

He pointed out that with the advance of science, future wars will be increasingly violent, rapid and complex.

"No one can know when this war will end nor when the next war will begin," Gen. Parker said. "We are in our seventh war since our Declaration of Independence, 1776, and we must not act on the supposition that this war will add to the spirit of world peace."

"Our civilian defense must be maintained at all times—actively in war, inactively but up to date in peace."

Americans should not dismiss as propaganda German threats to bomb our cities, Gen. Parker said. Germany is now being subjected to a tremendous aerial assault, he pointed out, and has boasted that it will strike back. It is possible for planes of present design with large bomb loads to attack our inland cities and return to their home bases by means of intermediate refueling rendezvous with submarines, he said.

He commended the field forces of the defense corps for the task they are carrying out and said, "your reward will be the satisfaction of this contribution to civilian defense, present and future."

Sidelights

We learned recently of the experience of a youth rejected for service in the armed forces. Disgruntled because of his failure to make the grade he told the officer that if he wasn't physically fit enough to get into uniform the army should discharge his brother, now serving in North Africa, because "I could lick him anytime."

Two new wall decorations have been added to practically every shop and public building in Britain. One is a large map of the United States with the names of the states and principal cities in large letters. The other, a chart showing what insignia is worn by American soldiers, sailors and marines. The program handled by the ministry of information makes it possible for the British to know their Americans better.

Sheriff Oliver Barry of Medina, Ohio, said he fears complications from the share-the-ride plan, judging by complaints already reaching him. He stated that in too many instances the system has turned into a share-the-wife plan. Scarcely a week passes, the Sheriff said, that he is not called upon to find the wife, or the mother of a family, who has disappeared, or to find a husband who has failed to come home. Every plan can't be perfect, it seems.

The jitters that surrounded the citizens of Florida's resort cities during the early months of the war apparently have disappeared, or at least, have been somewhat alleviated judging from a classified ad appearing in a Miami Beach paper. Spearman Lewis is advertising "an unused air raid bomb shelter" for sale. He describes the shelter as 20 by 10 feet in size, made with finest grade cypress beams and planks, some 2" by 12", and adds, "will sell for cash or trade for washing machine or typewriter."

POOR CREAM DEPRIVES ARMY OF NEEDED BUTTER

There would never be another can of rejected cream if farmers fully realized what an important part butter plays in the diet of America's fighting men in the present conflict.

Right now the government is taking 30 per cent of each month's production of butter in the United States for our armed forces and allies. It has been stated that each rejected can of cream represents enough butter lost to feed two soldiers for almost a year. Remembering that cream rejections in this country last year came to between 30 and 50 million pounds—whole trainloads of butter—it will be seen that the volume of butter so lost would have taken care of a huge number of soldiers, sailors and marines.

Neither would any farmer produce cream that would make anything but good butter if he kept in mind the thought that this butter will likely be eaten by young men of his own circle, perhaps even members of his own family who have gone into the service.

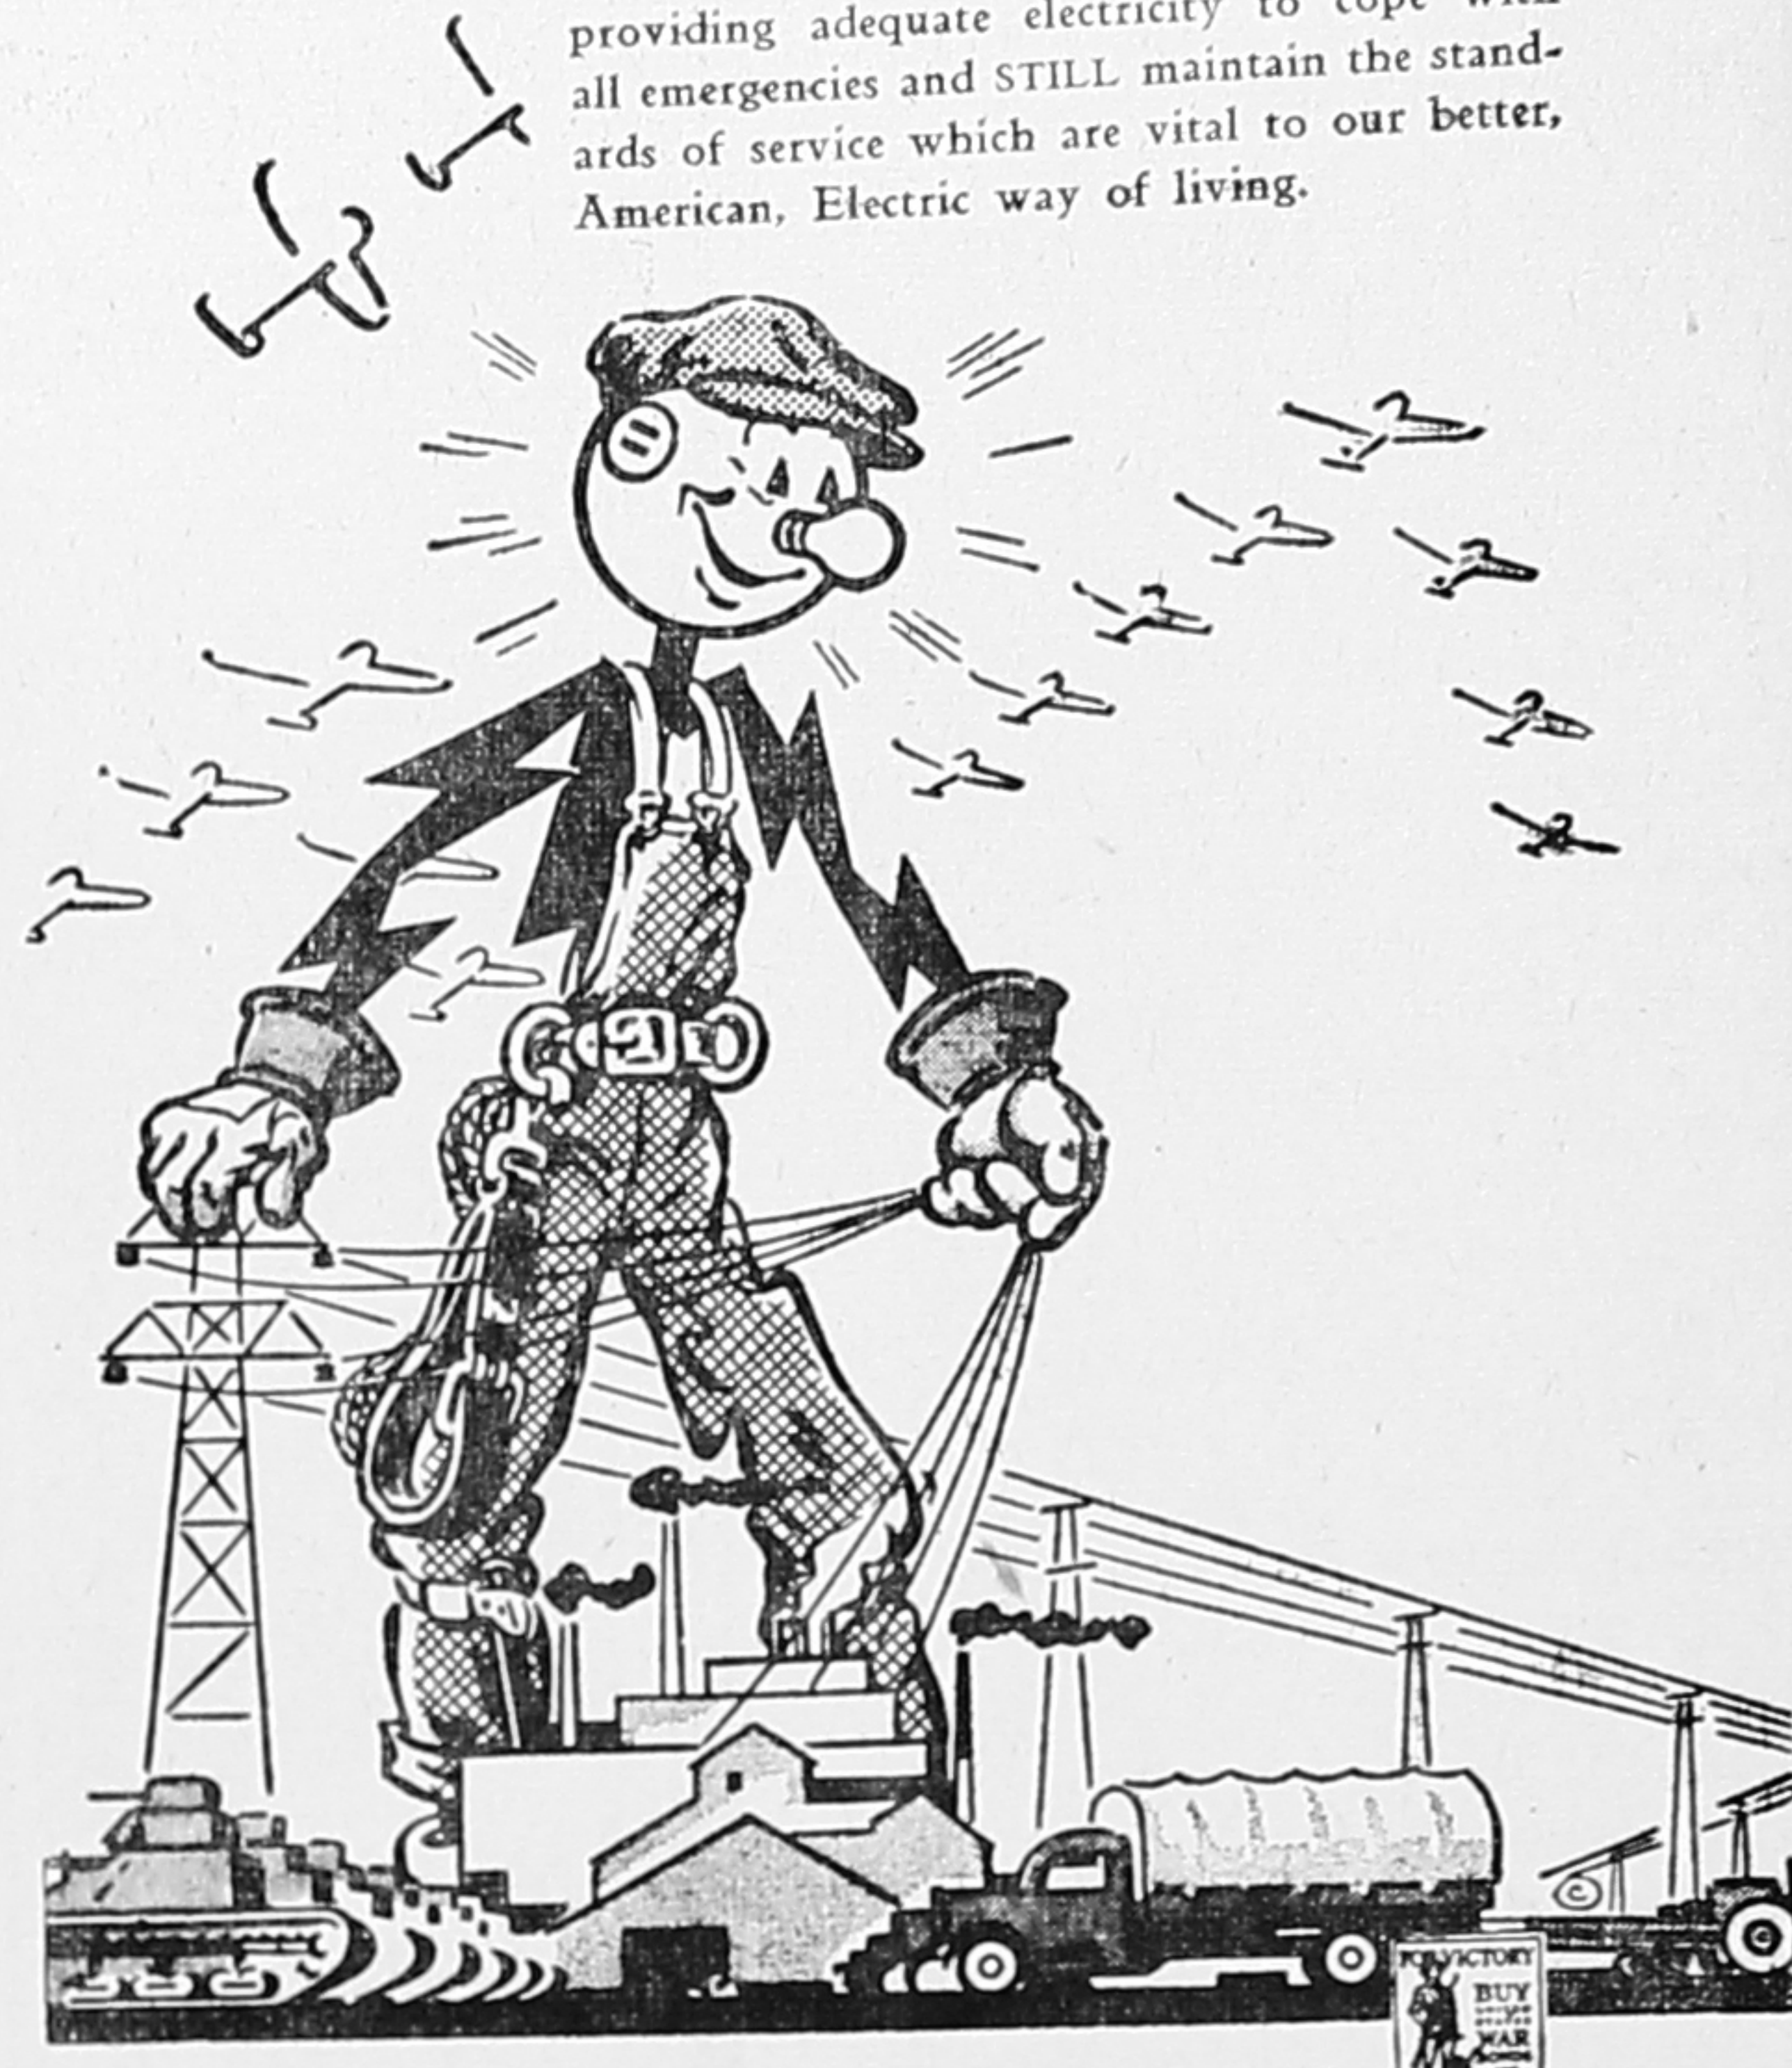

Aside from all other considerations, there is a monetary advantage to the farmer in producing cream that would make the best grade of butter. The best butter customarily brings on the market several cents a pound over that of lower quality butter, and the farmer who produces cream that can be made up into the upper-quality butter can expect to share in that higher price.

Dairy authorities have long been unanimous in the belief that the principal cause of poor or unfit butter is cream which had spoiled because of something done wrongly, or something left undone, somewhere along the farm production line. Unless the farmer takes every possible precaution in producing and delivering good cream, he must take the responsibility of depriving men and women in the services of a vitally needed food—not to mention the trouble and loss he is storing up for himself and everybody else involved.

HERE'S THE AMMUNITION

It's Electricity—the basic raw material for everything from welding parts for tanks and planes to making war production workers' toast.

And we can "pass it" on split second notice, to industry all-out for war, to business and to homes alike. For the American system of free private enterprise gives us the liberty to use sound business methods in faithfully providing adequate electricity to cope with all emergencies and STILL maintain the standards of service which are vital to our better, American, Electric way of living.

CRISIS IN MANPOWER

Today's problem of manpower means as much to the farmer with one hired hand, or the merchant with a single clerk, as it does to the industrialist who employs a thousand persons. It is all a matter of proportion.

The war program has reached such a stupendous size that the proper distribution of manpower assumes as much importance as the right use of steel, oil, rubber, or any other essential material or product.

It has been such a short time since there was more manpower than industry and agriculture could absorb that we may be a bit slow in waking up to the fact that today each man and woman who can be used to help in the battle of production is needed, and needed badly.

For the benefit, then, of farmers whose crops and livestock will suffer this year if manpower is not replenished; for the benefit of the armed services which have set their sights at possibly 10 million in uniform before 1944; for the benefit of the factories which must turn out ammunition, shoes, clothing, supplies and processed foods in ever-increasing quantities for fighters, civilians and allied nations, a careful stock-taking of manpower is required.

Where Manpower Is Wasted

Our new Congress must make sure that those in charge of this task, in Washington, cast about to see where able-bodied people are being needlessly employed. And in that city of Washington these authorities are now rubbing elbows with thousands of clerks, auditors, stenographers and others who could be used elsewhere without interfering with the war effort in any measure.

Recent figures showed that there were 2,606,300 persons on the civilian payroll of the federal government. This is not only a million more than were in our armed forces in foreign lands at the time the President made his address at the opening of the present Congress, but it is three times as many as were on the government's civilian payroll during the first World War. Of course this is a bigger war, but that only furnishes an even greater reason why the government should lead in conserving manpower for our farms and factories.

The "Renegotiation" Law

A single measure, introduced in Congress last year, would require thousands of new payrollers to carry out its provisions. This was the act providing that the Army, Navy and Maritime commission should each check its war contracts so that renegotiation could be demanded in cases of excessive charges.

The purpose of this legislation—to make sure that the government was not paying too much for its materials and supplies—was not questioned. But the proposed method of rechecking all war contracts called for the hiring of such a large number of new federal employees that amendments to the bill were quickly demanded.

Although the bill has been rewritten and amended, it still places upon the Army, Navy and Maritime commission so much of the responsibility for re-examining their contracts that thousands of new auditors and accountants would be needed. This violates the principle that united war effort calls for the placing of every available man and woman in productive work, at the same time helping to keep the taxpayers' federal load as light as possible, consistent with wartime demands.

An acceptable amendment to this law—not yet adopted—would leave it to the Department of Internal Revenue to uncover instances of excess profit. By using this established checking system, the other departments would not have to hire extra people to wade through the 95 per cent or more of war contracts which are honestly and conscientiously executed.

Here is but one example of how manpower can be conserved in these days when the efforts of all must be directed toward winning the war.

NEED FOR UNITED EFFORT

To win this war we must have unity of effort. "The do-as-I-tell-you-not-as-I-do" attitude will never mobilize national power or bring speedy victory.

This need for united effort was emphasized by the President in his recent call for a 40 per cent reduction in the use of government automobiles. Take the use of tires and gasoline by various federal agencies. A report of the Joint Committee on Reduction of Non-Essential Federal Expenditures says:

"Despite the growing automobile crisis, both in tires and gasoline, the investigation of the committee indicates that for the first four months of the present fiscal year the various agencies of the government, exclusive of the Army and Navy, continued for the most part to use as many passenger cars, to drive as many miles, and to consume about as much gasoline as did these agencies in a comparable period of the previous year, notwithstanding the efforts of the government to reduce the consumption of gasoline and conserve rubber.

Same Standard for All

"The committee believes that the same standard of strictly essential driving should be applicable to government employees as now applies to individual citizens."

The committee gives figures upon which its conclusions are based. In the last fiscal year the government owned 17,305 passenger automobiles, exclusive of the Army and Navy and exclusive of trucks and motorcycles. It now owns 18,953 passenger automobiles.

AMERICA

These words from a recent advertisement are worth reading twice: "A drum, a little red wagon, a picture book; these are gifts that bring joy to a boy's heart. But you can give him a far greater gift. You can give him the right to live as a free American."

Household Hints

Strong ammonia will remove paint spots from a wall or floor if the spots are not too old. Don't allow it to stay on too long for fear of eating into the wood.

Ink stains can usually be removed from cotton goods by rubbing the stains with a piece of raw potato, then rinsing the material in lukewarm water.

Buy, or make, soap in quantities and allow it to age or dry. The older and drier the soap the better it is for use in washing, and the better for preserving the condition of the hands.

Keep a few sprigs of cedar on the ironing board and rub the iron over the limbs to make ironing easier. This will give the clothes a glossy finish and keep the iron from sticking to starched clothes.

Free Enterprise

It took Germany nine years to build enough plants and equipment to fight this war; it took Japan 25 years, Russia 20 years. American industry, under free enterprise, has done it in two years.

Starting plants from seed indoors in early spring is the first step to success in raising tender vegetables such as pepper, eggplant, and tomato in northern Victory Gardens. Attempting to sow seed directly in the open is a definite waste and almost certain to bring disappointment.

When four conditions of indoor planting are met, — proper soil, temperature, moisture, and planting depths, — a home gardener can easily produce a stand of healthy plants he would otherwise have to buy at many times the price of the small amount of seed needed.

Suitable soil plays a big part in giving seedlings a healthy start. A flat or shallow box nearly filled with garden soil and topped with half an inch of clean builder's sand is a highly successful method used by Ferry-Morse Seed Co. in indoor planting at their Michigan Seed Breeding Station. The sand allows the tiny seedlings to break through easily, and there is little danger of too much moisture standing at the base of plants, a condition almost sure to cause that fatal disease, — damping off.

The garden soil beneath gives the young roots a firm moisture-holding foundation and supplies plant food until they are large enough for transplanting.

Sow seeds a little less deep indoors than when planting directly in the garden, keeping the flat where it is dark and cool until seeds sprout. Then, bring it into the light, protecting with a glass covering. Remove the cover occasionally to give the seedlings air. As they grow larger, thin out the weaker members, keeping only the husky plants for transplanting into the open ground.

Conscientious Objectors Not Required To Bear Arms

Conscientious objectors opposed only to combatant service in the armed forces, if inducted, may now be assured that they will never be required to bear arms or to be trained in their use, it was said today by Col. Paul G. Armstrong, Illinois director of selective service.

According to a recent announcement received from National Headquarters of Selective Service, such men will be assigned to either a medical replacement training center or a medical unit. "All local selective service boards," Armstrong explained, "have been instructed to notify those registrants who might wish to serve their country, but because of their particular belief, have felt unable to do so, may now be reclassified to Class 1-A-O and be inducted without the possibility of being called upon to bear arms. These men will be doing their part in the war effort by releasing some other physically fit soldier for combatant duty."

It is believed that, under these circumstances, Class 1-A-O should meet the requirements of most men whose conscience and belief prevent them from engaging in full military service where life might have to be taken. In the medical corps, their entire duty has to do with the saving and preservation of human life.

Young People's Fellowship

The young people's meeting was held at the Methodist church Sunday evening, April 4. Lois Dewitt had charge of the devotions. A prayer was read by Wallace Dicks. The discussion period was supervised by Melvin Dewitt and the topic discussed was "Should the young men be taken from college and put into the service."

The next meeting will be a worship service and will be held at 6:00 p. m. at the U. B. church.

A new and inexperienced hired man had just been added to the six-man crew of a large Missouri farm. All bunked in the same room and hours were from before daylight until after dark. About 4 a. m., the foreman began calling the men. The new arrival rubbed his eyes, sat on the edge of the bed, and said:

"I'll be darned if a fellow can't stay all night here the quickest of any place I ever saw."
