U. of Illinois Man Making Intensive Tests of Plastics

Plastics are being put through a "daily dozen" at the University of Illinois by research engineers who want to learn all about the mechanical properties of these new materials, and look ahead to their almost limitless possibilities.

In an air conditioned laboratory, machines stretch and bend specimens of plastic materials until the specimens break. Some tests continue as long as a year.

Plastics have been developed and put to use so rapidly that there has been little time to learn fundamental facts about their mechanical properties, according to William N. Findley, in charge of this testing project.

Two and a half years ago he set out to help fill in the data which will enable designing engineers to use plastics for more things and with more efficiency. In this he has been advised by other members of the University staff, who for more than a quarter of a century have put metals through similar "exercises" to learn fundamental facts about them.

Among the results of these tests of metals has been a completely new understanding of how and why metals break in service, and data which enables designers to make stronger crankshafts and gears, bridges that withstand vibration, safer railroad rails, wheels, and axles, and better battleships, guns, and airplanes. Results from the tests of plastics are equally fundamental.

Former Pupil Writes

Mrs. Lillie Bowman

Through the courtesy of Mrs. Lillie Bowman, we publish here with the following interesting letter which she received from one of her former pupils:

North Africa, June 10, 1943.

Dear Friend: I was very surprised today upon opening one of the letters I received as on the outside the postmark was blurred and only the first half showing so I figured it was from Brocton as both start with the same thing. Then when I opened it and saw your name I had to look again at the outside. I like the greeting card very much as I had never seen one quite the shape of it. You probably think I am just telling you this because of you remembering my birthday but it was only a few days ago that I mentioned to my buddy that I had a teacher back home whose birthday was very close to mine and should drop her a line as it is impossible to get any cards over here.

I am sure you would enjoy seeing this country, especially the northern part from Casablanca across to Tunis. I have been across it twice and the scenery is very beautiful. They have very modern towns or business places. Of them all, Algiers is the pick of the large cities, as they have all kinds of interesting places to see and things to do. We can get three day passes now since the campaign is over, so some of the boys have been taking advantage of them and visiting the larger cities.

I am going on my eleventh month over-seas now and spent three months of it in England before this campaign opened. We came in three days after the landing, so been in on all of the push. Was in quite a few bombings and the little book you enclosed with the card is one of my prize possessions when a bombing is going on. My buddy and I had a hole dug in the ground with our shelter halves put over the top so in an air raid we could stay right in our tent instead of running for a fox hole. We all came through ok and never lost a man in our group, but the bomb group with us lost one by flying schrapnel.

How is everything and the old town getting along? It has been a long time since I was up around there so don't imagine I know many people there now. My old side-kick Wayne Brewer is married now I hear and is in the army also. I couldn't see my way clear in getting married before I entered the army and have a very nice girl friend also. She is a school "marm" so may have to take a few more lessons after I get home.

My buddy is from Illinois and we've been together ever since we were in California. Have traveled around 20,000 miles since coming into the service so have practically seen the large part of the United States. Went from home to the southern point of Texas, then to California and back across the complete country to the Atlantic Coast. When I get home I am going to hibernate and when anyone mentions travel may shoot them.

My duties at present are handling the telephone system for our base and supposed to be a radio operator but not much to do in that line now and don't like it very well anyway. Altogether have enjoyed every minute of the army because of the travel, but when it is all over I sure want to get out but quick.

I sure want to thank you again for the lovely birthday greeting and also want to wish you a similar one in return. Maybe by the time the next one rolls around we won't be so far apart. I received a very lovely card from Mr. and Mrs. Ira Laverick for last Xmas and was the first one I received. All for this time and wishing you the best wishes ever.

Weldon Snider.

Letters To The Editor

Oliver Gen. Hospital, Augusta, Ga., June 30.

Hello Joe—How is everything around the old home town?

I thought I would drop you a line to let you know my new address. I am at Oliver Gen. Hospital, Augusta, Ga. It sure is a swell place. It is for boys that have been hurt in action over seas.

When I arrived here I couldn't believe that Uncle Sam had such a nice place for us soldiers. We have tile barracks with a bath room and everything attached to them. They are sure swell on the inside. Our barracks are about one-eighth mile from the hospital.

Yesterday my buddy and I talked to some of the boys that were wounded in action. They told us some very interesting things. I'm sure that if the men that are keeping out of the army, so called "draft dodgers" could talk with these boys, they would change their minds and help the fighting men win this war. As ever, L. A. Sy.

Russia Reviews War

In a recent communique on the second anniversary of Hitler's attack on the Soviet Union, Moscow reviewed the war in Russia and appraised the present situation. It was estimated that in the two years of fighting, the Germans had lost 6,400,000 in killed, captured and missing, while the Russians had lost 4,200,000 dead and missing.

Losses of heavy weapons were estimated as follows: Planes—Germans, 43,000; Russians, 23,000.

Tanks—Germans, 42,000; Russians, 30,000.

Guns—Germans, 56,500; Russians, 35,000.

While the German losses may be considerably overestimated, the figures serve to give some idea of the relative significance of actual losses of men and material on other fronts in the last two years.

The Russian communique was highly optimistic, but it stated that while Germany was now militarily and politically in a state of crisis, it added:

"But this is not enough for victory. Everything now depends on how the Allies will use the favorable situation for a second front, without which victory is impossible. To delay a second front in Europe against Fascist Germany means to protract the war, which means a colossal increase in victims."

While insisting on an immediate opening of a second front, the Russians did not withhold credit from the United States and Britain for their accomplishments. The broadcast statement said:

"Our Allies are increasingly helping the Soviet people with material. Joint actions have taken place during past months. Powerful blows from the east have merged with blows by the Allies in North Africa, while the Allied air forces dealt blows on Germany and Italy. The industrial power of Germany's war industry has been weakened also by the Allied blows.

"The European rear of Hitlerism is becoming weaker and weaker. The occupied countries are rising in the struggle against Hitler. Soon this struggle will link up with the Allies. The Soviet Union engaging Germany's main forces enabled the Allies to develop production and mobilize a mighty army."

It is also said that hundreds of new factories have been established behind the Russian lines and that the international position of the Soviet Union also has been strengthened. The morale of the Red Army was declared to have grown stronger and that "it burns with the determination to put an end to the Fascists."

The situation as pictured by Moscow—and as it really exists—is vastly different from that of last October, when Germany had reached her high-water mark, both in Russia and in Africa.

Rapid Progress

"I am Brave Eagle," said the Indian chieftain, in introducing himself to the paleface visitor. "This is my son, Fighting Bird." "And here," he added, "is my grandson, Four Engined Bomber."

Sidelights

Our hat is off to a certain Elberton, Ga., citizen who is quite a man. While County Judge C. B. Thornton was filling out a marriage license application, he asked the prospective bridegroom the name of his fiancée. "Oh, just leave that blank," the applicant said. "I'm courtin' two women and I don't know which one I'll get, but I heard licenses were going to be rationed and I want to be sure to get one while I can." Whatta man!

We can hardly blame Jack Mullins, 41, an old coffee drinker from Milwaukee for smashing up a Rockford joint. Mullins drank many cups of coffee each day at the usual price of 5c a mug, but when he was charged 10c for a cup at the Rockford restaurant he saw red. He became so indignant he insulted the waitress, dumped a plate of eggs on the floor, knocked over the stove and kicked out a partition. His fine in police court amounted to $56.15.

Although the youth pleaded guilty, the 20-year-old boy, who had been arrested for staring at women, was given a suspended sentence. Hailed before Magistrate Charles Solomon in New York City's night court recently on a disorderly conduct charge, in which he was charged with standing on the street corners and staring at women as they passed by, the youth pleaded guilty. Judge Solomon in suspending the sentence remarked: "Looking at women, especially if they are good looking, is no crime. I still do it myself."

From out of every war comes a war song that marks that conflict and lasts forever in the memory of the fighting men of that conflict. Leaking through the censorship for several months has been sketches of the new war song that had its origin in North Africa. A song of many verses, many of them unprintable, no one on this side of the pond knew of a tune that matched the words. The song is "Dirty Bertie From Bizerte," and finally music to match the words has been written by Sgt. Paul Reif. So we can expect to find "Dirty Bertie" on the Hit Parade very shortly.

If you are a staunch believer in the knowledge possessed by members of the United States Congress then you can bank on the war ending in October, 1945. In a poll of the nation's law-making body by Representative Wilson (R., Ind.) in which he asked their views on the length of the war, it was shown that the majority of the astute gentlemen believed that the European phase of the struggle will be ended by October, 1944. They all agreed it would require an additional year to exterminate the Japs. It is interesting to note that 20 of those polled believe the war will end this fall; one believes the Pacific war will end this year; nine believe that the European war will last longer than June 1945, but 79 believe it can be finished next year; 21 expect it to take until the early part of 1945, while five members believe that we will still be fighting in 1946. The average of all answers produced the October, 1945 date.

Do You Know Illinois?
By Edward J. Hughes
Secretary of State

Q. How did Greasy Run Creek get its name?

A. This creek in Coles County was so called because in early days hog thieves, in order to prevent identification of stolen property by ear marks, would cut off the heads of hogs and throw them in the creek. Their decomposition made the water greasy.

Q. What is the origin of the name Kankakee, Illinois?

A. The word is either a French corruption of the Iroquois Kankakee, meaning among the meadows, or from kankakee in the Algonquin language meaning raven.

Q. What is the origin of the name of Kewanee, Ill.?

A. From the Indian word ke-wa-nee, meaning "returning track."

Q. Where did Kickapoo, Ill., derive its name?

A. From the Algonquin ki-wi-gapowa, meaning "he stands about" or "he moves about, standing now here, now there."

Q. What is the origin of the name of Rollo, village in DeKalb County, Illinois?

A. From the series of children's volumes called the "Rollo Books."

Q. What other names preceded the present name of Oak Park, Illinois?

A. Kettlestrings Grove, Oak Ridge, Harlem, and Noyesville.

Q. What is the meaning of the Indian name "Nokomis," town of Illinois?

A. Grandmother. Nokomis is also the name of a character in Longfellow's Hiawatha.

Q. What is the Indian meaning of "Neponset," a village in Illinois?

A. "He walks in his sleep."

Q. What is the origin of the name Monee, Ill.?

A. It is a corruption of the name Marie, the name of the wife of Joseph Bailly, a French trader in the Calumet River country. The Indians, unable to pronounce the name in French, gave rise to the present form.

Q. For what is Marengo, Illinois, named?

A. For the scene of the victory of Napoleon the First over the Austrians, June 14, 1800.

Household Hints

A 10-cent whiskbroom dipped in water will make a quick job of sprinkling clothes to be ironed.

When sewing buttons on a garment draw the thread thru a piece of beeswax to keep the thread from knotting.

Good bedrooms have closet or other storage space for clothing, hats, and shoes. A built in shelf and a shoe rack or bag will keep the hats and shoes off the floor.

House cleaning and good order make a home attractive and satisfying to the youngsters in the family, and they will enjoy sharing in the housekeeping responsibilities.

If the housewife has to do the gardening, sharp cutting edges well coated with oil or grease will do a clean quick job. Sharpen cutting tools after each use and they will be ready for the next job.
