Letters To The Editor

Dear Joe—I finally got around to it—writing you a letter. I'm not apt to get another furlough very soon, so thought I'd give you an idea of where I am and what I'm doing, and those are just the things I can't tell you about, except that I'm somewhere in the Hawaiian Islands.

I have seen both Pearl Harbor and Honolulu from a distance.

This island is the most beautiful place I've ever seen, and I've seen a lot of country in the States since I've been in the service. I like it very well here, outside of being so far away from home. I miss seeing my old friends in Broadlands and Homer, and my family, but I've made a lot of new friends in the service and it's almost like being in a big family when you have known a lot of the boys for almost a year and a half.

This makes the sixth station I've been in since entering the service. I have been playing a lot of checkers in my year's time and you can tell all the old checker kings that I have improved my game immensely, and tell Oscar Gallion I think I could even spot him two checkers and beat him now, ha!

We have all new baseball equipment and planning to organize a Co. team to play on some of these Hawaiian baseball diamonds. They really go in for sports here on the Islands, and have some baseball fields that would almost compare to the major leagues. There are plenty of things to do outside camp if I can ever get a pass. So far, passes haven't been issued.

Well Joe, tell the Broadlanders to write. I'll try to answer everyone who writes me. So long, and give everyone my regards.

Yours very sincerely,
Wayne Brewer.

Remember Pearl Harbor!

Birthday of FBI

July 26th marked the 35th anniversary of the Federal Bureau of Investigations, organized by Attorney General Charles J. Bonaparte of President Theodore Roosevelt's cabinet on July 26, 1908, as a bureau of the Department of Justice.

Beginning with a small force of Secret Service agents and bank examiners borrowed from the Treasury department, the FBI now has a total personnel of more than 15,000 of whom some 5,000 are special agents, better known as G-men, who constitute the most efficient body of detectives and law enforcement officers in the world.

The development of the FBI is due largely to the ability and zeal of J. Edgar Hoover, who became director of the bureau in 1924, at the age of 29. He received his law degree at George Washington University and entered the Department of Justice in 1917, becoming assistant director of the FBI in 1921.

Before Pearl Harbor, Mr. Hoover was deeply concerned over the potential Japanese enemies in Hawaii, and had many of them under surveillance. Within 30 hours after the attack 1,771 enemy aliens had been taken into custody. Not a single act of foreign-inspired sabotage has been carried out in the United States, but numerous spies have been apprehended, and seven were executed.

In a radio address last Sunday, Mr. Hoover warned against any lessening of vigilance, saying that "our enemies have highly trained bands of saboteurs who might land on our shores at any moment."

Since the war began the FBI has picked up about 13,000 enemy aliens, of whom 4,300 have been interned after hearings before special boards. The organization's splendid work, both in peace and war, is deserving of the highest praise, and it is thoroughly appreciated by the American people.

Bombing of Churches

Exaggerated accounts of damage done to one church during the bombing of military objectives in Rome published and broadcast by Axis news agencies have caused the Pope to deny expressions attributed to him concerning the matter. A broadcast from the Vatican recently said in part:

"Reports have been published by the Stefani (Italian) news agency, according to which the Pope was quoted as having stated that the Basilica of San Lorenzo was almost entirely destroyed. This is untrue. The facts are that the frontal part of the cathedral has been destroyed, but the antique crypt of the basilica and the grave of Pope Pius IX are unharmed. The Holy Father wants to emphasize his readiness to believe that American pilots did not intentionally damage the basilica."

The Vatican also denied reports that the Pope had protested to President Roosevelt or the American charge d'affairs in Vatican City about the bombing.

In contrast with the accidental damaging of a single church in Rome, the Office of War Information in Washington has issued a statement saying that thousands of churches in Allied countries have been bombed by Axis airmen. A list compiled by the British home secretary names 4,100 churches and more than 9,000 other religious buildings destroyed or damaged in Great Britain alone. Among those damaged were the famous cathedrals of Canterbury, Coventry, Liverpool, Westminster Abbey, St. Paul's and many others, 22 of which were designed by the great architect, Sir Christopher Wren.

The Greeks charge that the Italians deliberately destroyed the ancient church of St. Sophia, described as the oldest church in Christendom. In every country invaded by the Axis powers the destruction of churches has been widespread, and no pains have been taken to avoid such destruction.

Too Much

The farmer came back puffing and blowing and threw the rake in the corner.

Gracious, Dad! cried his wife. Why did you want to chase that poor man off the farm like you did?

Reason enough, growled the farmer. I've just had to buy you that new hat and dress, and I had to buy Daisy a present for her birthday, and I had to buy a new suit for David because he's wild over that Burke girl. I had to buy a new set of harness for the buggy, and I had to buy a license for the dog—

Yes, but what has that got to do with it?

That fellow asked me if I wanted to buy something for the mosquitoes.

What You Buy With WAR BONDS

Beans

So long as a soldier can eat and think up disparaging names for his equipment the Army will do all right. Food is either "beans," or "chow."

"Chow" may consist of a well cooked meal or if circumstances demand our fighting men have learned to subsist on "Ration K," the concentrated food that all of them carry into battle.

With millions of men and women in the services it will require a lot of War Bond buying on our part to keep them happy.

Household Hints

Lemons kept in covered jars in the refrigerator won't shrink.

Socks and stockings too old to mend make good dust cloths for applying wax or oil.

Add a small amount of lemon juice and rind to stewed dried fruit to improve the flavor.

Keep an egg whip on the kitchen work table to remove potatoes, doughnuts, fritters, etc. from hot fat. The excess fat will drip through the whip.

Don't throw away old worn quilts and woolen blankets. Make them into extra comforters by covering them with good-quality pretty, bright prints. Tack with bright-colored thread or yarn.

A coat or two of stove blacking or polish will prevent rust on stoves, furnaces, stove pipes. Clean all heating apparatus thoroughly and protect it with a coat of metal paint or varnish before it is stored for the summer.

The disease carriers of the household pests are the fly and the mosquito. Control them by spraying and by screening the house. Destroy breeding places—water, decaying garbage, manure.

Before the canning season gets underway remove stains and odors from the pressure cooker by washing with soap and water, rinsing well. Put a cut lemon and two cups of water in the cooker, hold the temperature at five pounds for five minutes to help clean and deodorize the cooker.

Keeping Up

You must be keen on the movies, old boy, to go twice a week.

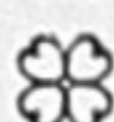

It's not that exactly. You see, if I don't go regularly, I can't understand what my grandchildren are saying.

In 1942, people in the United States spent an average of $1.00 each in retail vitamin sales, practically all of which could have been secured by correct diets alone.

Two complete manufacturing plants for making tin cans were dismantled in this country, shipped to Australia, and are being used to put up food supplied by Australians for our armed forces in the East.

Wartime use has served to popularize dehydrated eggs to such an extent that the Government has reserved the entire 1943 production of spray-dried whole eggs, leaving civilians the same amount of other dehydrated products as in 1942.

VIRTUE

By EMMA FORESTER
McClure Syndicate—WNU Features.

BOYCE MANN groaned inwardly as Flora Walters pushed her chair back from her brilliant dinner table with her regular invitation:

"Now, people, let's get set for a good game of bridge!"

Ordinarily Boyce did not object to bridge, especially bridge with opponents that played as quietly and cleverly as Flora and Fred. But Flora's soft pink hands moving languidly across a bridge table pained Boyce.

This was rather odd, for Flora's hands were plump and beautifully manicured; but they carried a burden of jewels that raked Boyce's soul with their many fangs of light.

He never dared look up from the cards on the table lest Bea, his wife, or the Walters, would read the agony passing through his mind. He knew how Bea felt, too, and that made the ache of his much worse.

The game flagged for a moment as the women lighted cigarettes. Fred, fumbling through his pockets for his lighter, pulled out a diamond ring which he handed to Flora, remarking as he laid it in her soft and scented hand, "Got this today, on a trade-in of cars. How do you like it?"

Flora grunted amiably through short satisfied puffs of smoke as she turned the ring around aimlessly and said after a careless inspection:

"I guess it'll do but I don't want it, Fred. It doesn't match a thing I have, and I'd never wear it."

Bea gave an eager, stifled gasp as Flora indolently tossed the ring over to her to examine. As it lay in her palm, quivering and gleaming in its own veil of glory, Flora genially suggested:

"Try it on, Bea."

Bea glowed with the rapture of a dazzled baby as she slipped the precious bauble on her finger and held her hand up turning it around for each of the others to see.

Fred Walters, smiling indulgently at her delight, said with open, easy cordiality, "Go ahead and keep it, Bea. Flora doesn't want it. Chances are I'll find it a white elephant to dispose of, and even then not realize anything on the transaction."

He offered the gift with quiet and candid dignity. It might have been an apple. His eyes twinkled in pleased response at her happy exclamation.

"Yes, take him up quickly before he changes his mind. That's the way I got these," bantered Flora, with lazy blinding gestures.

Only Boyce sat silent and grave as Bea turned her head and her hand to catch the burning loveliness of the diamond. Her eyes shone. Boyce knew what swept her mind and how terrific the urge of acquisition can be. Hadn't he felt it, this same bitter longing on every birthday, Christmas and other anniversary since their engagement—all of their married life?

His breath stopped for an instant as Bea hesitated. His heart gave a cruel twist, then an exultant leap as Bea coolly drew off the ring and handed it back to Flora, saying with unaffected gratitude:

"I think it's lovely of both of you. But, of course, I just couldn't."

Two hours later Boyce slipped behind her as she sat before her dressing table preparing for bed. She looked very girlish and lovely, lovelier even than he remembered her as his bride.

Memory pierced him. What hadn't he promised to do for Bea then? Yet the years had drifted across the calendar and the most of these deeds remained undone.

How long she had hungered, as she had often said, "For just one diamond."

He knelt beside her and pulled down her fragrant face, kissing her dewy lips and bright eyes.

He choked miserably.

"Bea darling!"

His voice broke.

Without warning a warm little hand crept into his.

He stammered and trembled as he began again, "Bea, darling! I was so proud of you, so terribly proud of you, and thankful, too, when you turned down that diamond ring that Flora and Fred offered you tonight . . . You poor kid! I know what a sacrifice it was, honey," he went on shakily. But I want to give you your first diamond ring.

"I know how patient you've been, Bea. But if you'll only trust me a little longer . . . you'll have them, Bea. Like the other girls. It was brave . . . fine . . . of you, darling, to turn down that ring."

"What do you mean . . . brave?" demanded Bea rising to face him and laughing brokenly into his bewildered face.

She was exceedingly gallant in that moment as she stood with the muscles of her pretty face as tight as those of a clenched fist, and lied stanchly as she admonished with a hysterical giggle—a giggle that shattered a stifling sob:

"Don't be silly, Boyce darling. I didn't have to be brave. That stone was too small."

One one-hundredth of a pound of beef was sliced off each American's plate per week from January to May this year because we sent food to our Allies.

American housewives salvaged almost 8 million pounds of waste kitchen fats in May this year, which was less than half of the needed quotas.

YOUNGSTERS—HELP WITH HOME-CANNING!

Don't worry if you're too young for the WAACS or WAVES. There's another important job for you. Save all the extra vegetables from your Victory Garden by home-canning. A few jars a day take little time and add up to well-filled shelves by the end of the season. Food costs are high in the stores and may be higher, but food grown at home still costs a few cents a jar.

There's a deep satisfaction in growing and canning your own food. Wait and see. You'll take inventory of your garden each day to see which vegetables are right for the table and how many extras there are to put in glass jars. Make it a point each day to gather everything at its prime, and make it a point of honor to get the extras into glass jars before they lose freshness.

That's the big secret of delicious, nutritious, home-canned foods—freshness. Home-grown, home-canned foods often have many more vitamins than those bought at the store, because they are fresh. And when you get a reliable home-canning booklet, you'll be surprised at how many different things may be put away for later use in glass jars.

Be sure to have the very best canning instructions and recipes. One fruit jar company offers a Blue Book free with a coupon packed with each dozen jars—or for ten cents if you have no coupon. The instructions are easy to follow. It is not necessary to have elaborate or expensive equipment. Form a canning club and have fun while you can!

PERRY LANCE lifted the dish cover and regarded the bacon and eggs with a skeptical eye. "All the world loves a lover," he quoted glumly. "But—"

"But—I have not finished my breakfast," added his guest, Billy Latham. "Of course, we all know that the world loves a lover, and all that, and of course I am aware that not one fair daughter of Eve cares two whoops for you! Right?"

"Right," gloomily assented Perry as he helped himself to a hot roll.

"It is all your own fault," went on Billy Latham. "You are a recluse, a woman hater, yes, indeed, dear boy! And yet you wonder why you have reached the advanced age of thirty and have never loved a woman!"

"Once upon a time you were engaged to a girl."

"She thought I was a wash-out. All that she liked about me was my bankbook."

"All girls are not alike, Perry. Put on your old clothes and come with me for a tramp. We can act as agents for Potcleaver's cooking utensils—eh?"

"Get about a bit and see the world through clearer eyes?" Perry laughed heartily.

"A lark, I'll say," replied his friend. "Come on, Perry, it's a fine spring day. Let's go out and buy a rummy looking old car and some sample pots and pans!"

Half an hour later the two young men drove away from the central garage mechanics crowded forward to see them depart.

"Some pranks those rich fellers play," grinned one of the workmen as the car disappeared.

"It is Lance's vacation—they say when he does work that he's at it day and night—writes books, you know."

Bill Latham was at the wheel of the second-hand car as it went its rather erratic way along the country byways. They had excellent luck in selling the pots and pans and they took many orders for them, but no money would be paid until the goods were delivered.

Girls they had met in numbers—demure country maidens—the more sophisticated city sisters—all of them more or less pretty—but not one of them with the unusual beauty, spirit and fire that Perry Lance yearned for in the girl he might love and who might love him.

One day he thought he had met her when a tractor passed them, a small tractor driven by a girl with a black smudge on her cheek and dressed in khaki overalls.

Behind them sounded the deep blare of a motor horn and the rumbling clatter of the tractor. Then it shot past them at top speed.

"Ye Gods!" yelled Billy. "She's put the tractor across the road!"

Perry stared ahead and saw the tractor lumber to a standstill across their path in advance. He saw the girl jump from the tractor and run toward them. It did not surprise him when she jumped on the running-board of their car which was evidently bound for destruction.

"Get off!" he shouted.

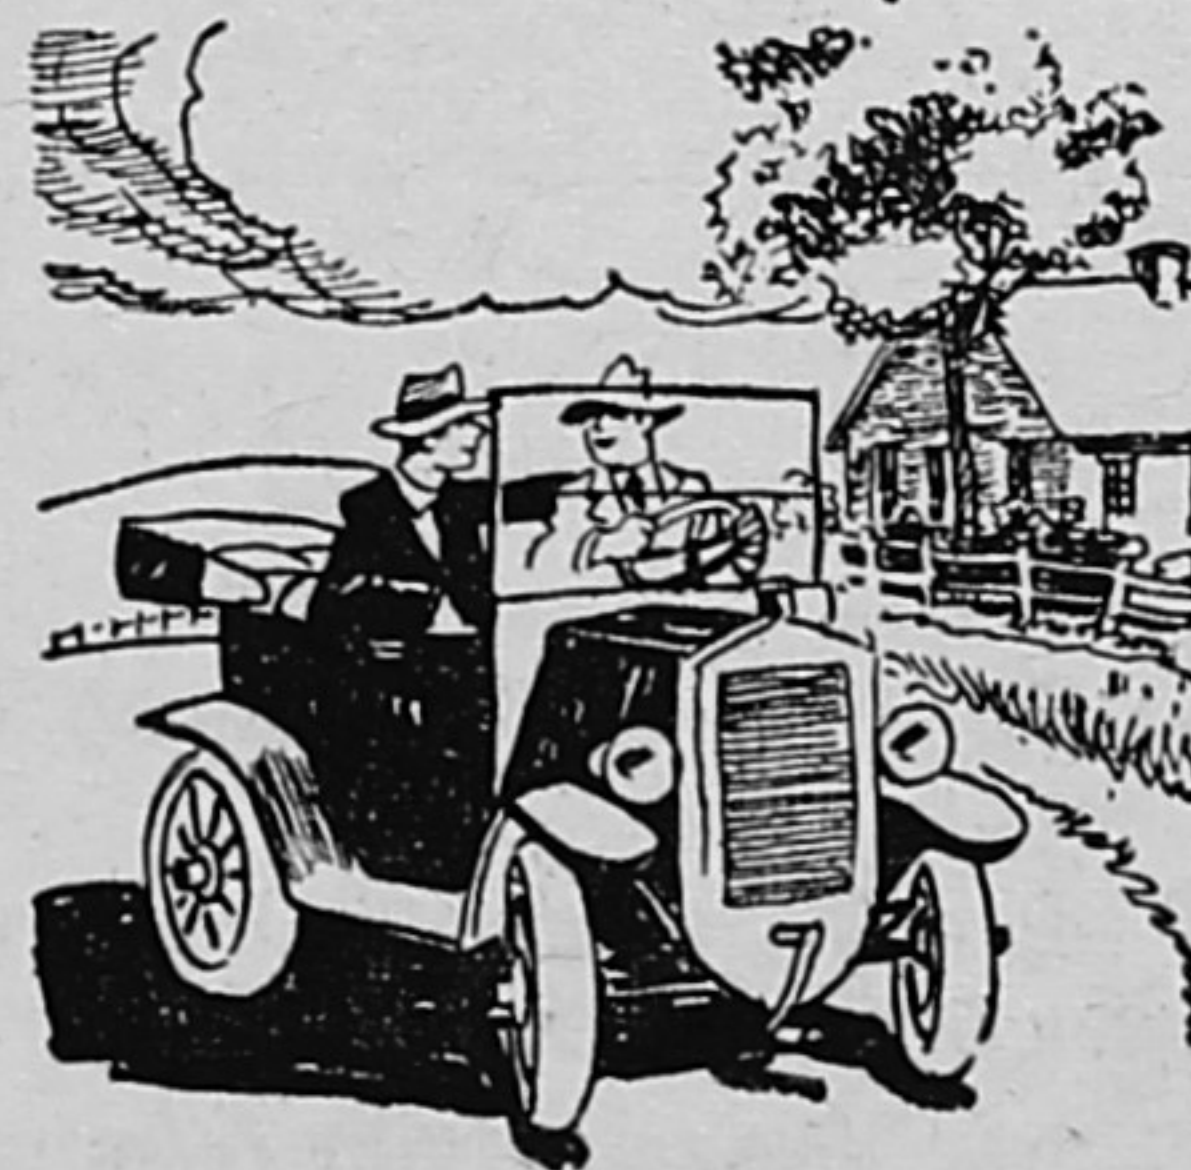

"Get off yourself," she laughed at him. "Come on jump off before it strikes!"

This being good advice to follow, she jumped off gracefully with a little running movement in the road and the two young men followed.

The flivver was not going fast but it hit the tractor with a sharp impact that seemed to settle her own disorganization, for when she stopped with no damage to either tractor or car beyond a shattered windshield on the latter, the three of them looked at one another cheerfully.

"The government is closing the road—you passed the traffic sign at the cross roads," said the girl. "We are building a stone wall right here next week."

If Perry Lane discovered that Betty Dunlap was the one girl in the world for him, and if he wooed her as an agent, who can blame him? He found out that her father was the contractor who had the particular job and Betty was driving the tractor because she liked to do it for a lark. This particular lark led both of them to the altar and Perry's faith in the female species was restored.

Bill Latham was at the wheel of the second-hand car as it went its rather erratic way.

SELLING ON GRADE BENEFITS GOOD CREAM PRODUCER

"E" pennants and pins are not being awarded to farmers, but producers of good cream nevertheless are receiving recognition and reward for their contribution to the war effort. The cream improvement programs of the various states approved by the War Production Board provide not only that cream should be purchased on grade but also that a higher price should be paid for cream grading No. 1 than for cream grading No. 2.

Here is how cream grading protects the quality producer. It prevents No. 1 cream from being mixed with No. 2 cream. This means that only No. 1 cream can go into the making of No. 1 butter and No. 2 cream into No. 2 butter and that, therefore, the producer of No. 1 cream can receive a price based on the price of No. 1 butter and the producer of No. 2 cream a lower price based on the price of lower-grade butter. Where there is no grading, inferior cream is mixed

The "wilting" method of making grass silage, without the use of molasses or acid preservatives requires that the moisture content of the chopped material be reduced below 68 per cent.

One bale of cotton lintners will make 20,000 rounds of machine gun ammunition. Civilian rayons are also made from lintners and they serve as the basic part in the production of plastics.

When perspiring freely, workers should plan to consume from with good cream, which of course results in a poorer quality of butter and a lower price. One can of poor cream can spoil a good many cans of top quality cream if they are all mixed together.

It is plain that if the producer of No. 1 cream and the producer of No. 2 cream both market their product at the same place and the price paid for each grade is the same, the former is really subsidizing his careless neighbor.

By the same token, should the producer of No. 1 cream find himself with a can on his hands that is off in quality, he should with all good grace expect to take a cut in price. When this happens, it means that he slipped up somewhere, either in the sanitary conditions under which he produced that cream, or in not cooling it properly, or perhaps in not marketing it with sufficient promptness. A check of the production methods and care of the cream will soon reveal the cause.
