Peaches Sell at Fancy Figure

Corden, Ill., August 11 — Top grade elberta peaches sold for $6 to $6.50 a bushel today throughout most of the southern Illinois fruit belt as orchardists began the harvest of a crop estimated to be only about 25% of normal. Housewives were paying $4 for canning grades and unclassified packing peaches sold as high as $5.

Some of the fruit still was green, and orchardists said they did not expect the peak of the harvest before next week-end. Pickers were being paid $4 for a 10-hour day and enough were available to assure harvest of the entire crop of slightly less than 400,000 bushels.

Flag Floats at Half Mast In Honor Dayle C. Potter

Allerton—Allerton's municipal flag floated at half mast over the village over the week end in honor of Technical Sergeant Dayle C. Potter who was reported killed in action somewhere in the Solomon Islands on July 10.

He enlisted at Chanute Field three years ago and after graduating there he was transferred to Texas and served in several of the southwest and western states. In March he was sent overseas.

Potter was born 26 years ago and graduated from the Allerton high school with the class of 1935.

Technical Sergeant Potter was an engineer on a bomber that carried a crew of 11 men.

Allerton High School Completes Teaching Staff

The Allerton high school board of education completed the teaching staff Monday night, when Mrs. Ruby Reynolds, (wife of the new Broadlands Methodist minister), and Mrs. Ruth Guthrie Sallee of Sidell, accepted contracts. Mr. Stanley Elam, formerly principal at Willow Hill, was hired as superintendent some time ago. Other teachers are the same as last year.

Pre-registration for high school students will be held Monday, Aug. 23, at the school building. Students are urged to drop in at any time during the day from 9 till 5 o'clock and plan their programs. Some changes in the curriculum make this particularly necessary. School opens Sept. 1, when students will come only during the morning.

$25000 Damages Asked For Crash Injuries

(News-Gazette)

Margaret Kemper had a $25,000 damage suit on file Wednesday in circuit court against Franklin Kibler. The action grows out of an automobile accident that occurred on Jan. 22, 1943, on route 4, about 1 1/2 miles from Urbana. The complainant was riding with her husband at the time and claims to have been permanently and seriously injured.

(The Kempers were former Broadlands residents.)

Illinois State Capitol News

The list of names on the Illinois old age assistance rolls has been growing shorter for the last nine months, due to increased war opportunities for elderly persons to find paying jobs. In July, 146,775 persons received assistance, a decrease of 299 as compared to June. However, increased budgets to meet rising living costs raised the total payments for July to $4,213,467, which is $19,703 more than was paid out in June.

And there was the citizen who went to the sugar rationing board and attested: "My wife has no sugar at all in our house, not an ounce of it."

Remember, now, you're swearing to this, the chairman of the board warned him. You've got to tell the truth.

The applicant hesitated, and repeated, Gotta tell the truth, eh?

Yes, or go to jail, he was warned.

In that case, I'll tell you the truth. We ain't married.

Seven species of mosquitoes never before known to exist in Illinois were discovered in a recent study made by the State Department of Public Health, with the assistance of the State Natural History survey. A few specimens of the mosquito that can carry yellow fever were found. More than two hundred thousand mosquitos were collected and identified.

Most Illinois mosquitoes are pests rather than disease carriers, although there is one fairly common species which transmits malaria germs.

A retirement system for employees of the state of Illinois became a reality when Gov. Green signed a measure which he had sponsored and which was passed by the 63rd General Assembly during the closing days of the session. The Governor has just appointed Herman A. Behrens, of Chicago, one of the leading insurance men of the country, to serve without salary as chairman of the system's board of trustees.

All state employees are eligible to membership in the retirement system, which provides pensions and sickness and accident benefits. The system will go into operation Jan. 1, 1944.

A number of changes in Illinois game laws were made during the recent session of the General Assembly.

The changes include: A fifteen-day extension of the open season on squirrels in the southern third of the state, making it last from July 15 to Oct. 15.

A fourteen-day addition to the open season on rabbits, which will now extend from Nov. 11 to Jan. 31 throughout Illinois.

The trapping season will henceforth be the same in all parts of the state—Nov. 15 to Jan. 31. It formerly was shorter than this in central and southern Illinois.

Under the new code, fishermen in northern and central Illinois will have a longer bass season. In the northern zone the season, formerly June 15 to Mar. 31, will run from June 15 to April 30; in the central zone the new season will run from June 1 to April 15—fifteen days longer than formerly.

The new season for trout (except lake trout) will be April 1-Sept. 30, forty-five days longer than the old season.

Do You Know Illinois?
By Edward J. Hughes
Secretary of State

Q. How were the Illinois and Michigan Canal boats powered?

A. By mules, usually four to six. Many of the boatmen owned their teams, but there were men who made a specialty of hauling boats who had relay stations at barns 20 to 25 miles apart along the line of the canal.

Q. What was the principal boat building center along the Illinois and Michigan Canal?

A. Lockport, headquarters of the Canal trustees.

Q. What were the principal imports to Chicago on the Illinois and Michigan Canal?

A. Merchandise, lumber and shingles, lath, coal, iron, sugar, salt and coffee.

Q. What were the chief exports from Chicago on the Illinois and Michigan Canal?

A. Furs, corn, wheat, flour, beef, tallow, hides, pork, hams and shoulders, lard, and wool.

Q. When did the Illinois and Michigan canal reach its peak?

A. Tolls increased to meet maximum in 1866, and the greatest tonnage carried in the Canal's history was in 1882.

Q. What was the fate of the Illinois and Michigan Canal after 1882?

A. Tonnage declined from then on to 1914 when commercial navigation practically ceased.

Q. When was the Chicago and Rock Island Railroad Company chartered?

A. On February 27, 1847, the Rock Island and LaSalle Railroad was chartered. On February 7, 1851, the charter was amended, extending the road to Chicago and designating the company by its present name.

Q. What was the nucleus of the Alton Railroad?

A. The Alton and Sangamon Railroad Company, chartered February 27, 1847 to connect Alton and Springfield.

Q. What was the time of transit in 1854 between Joliet and St. Louis on the Chicago and Mississippi (Alton) Railroad?

A. 12½ hours.

Q. When did the Chicago and Mississippi Railroad extend into Chicago?

A. In 1854-55 the Illinois Legislature chartered the Joliet-Chicago Railroad Company to be an extension of the Chicago and Mississippi, known by this time as the Chicago, Alton, and St. Louis.

Several men were traveling by train. Presently one produced a large fruit cake, which he devoured greedily.

Time passed. Suddenly he began groaning and doubling himself up and straightening out again. When this had gone on for some time a friend asked him:

"Smatter, Jim?"

"That cake I ate, groaned the sufferer. It had nuts, and I think the missus forgot to shell them."

Lor! said the friend. And you can crack them just by bending?"

The major menaces on the highway are drunken driving, uncontrolled thumping, and indiscriminate spooning. To put it briefly: Hic, hike and hug.

A school girl's essay in a Montana paper ran as follows: 'When we go camping, we must keep the place neat. We must be very careful to put out our fire. This is God's country. Don't burn it up and make it look like hell.'

The Locked Door

By MARTHA WILLIAMS
McClure Syndicate—WNU Features.

"YOU'RE not going a step. With your jaw swelled till you look like that heathen idol the Chinamen all worship, everybody would laugh at you and wonder why in creation I let you come," Mrs. Neal said, her tone less unkind than her words.

She was not fond of Amabel, her stepdaughter, but conscientious in duty toward the girl. Amabel was so like her mother, who had carried off the only man her successor had ever fancied, it was hard not to hate her—still the two kept terms decently.

Mainly, be it said, through Amabel's yieldings to authority; she had never thought of rebellion until Austin Ware proved to her that her feet and her spirit were equally made to dance.

The proving came to pass in a visit Amabel had paid to an aunt at the other side of the county. Her neighborhood was gay, full of young folk, given to dancing and dining, with the approval and example of their elders.

Even more than her husband, Mrs. Neal loved her church and her dominance in it. Tonight she would queen it at the annual supper, a full-fed occasion where gorging could be reckoned piety, since every edible was at a round price.

"Don't trouble," Amabel mumbled; "I can't eat; good night. Maybe I can sleep, but I don't feel like it now."

"This must be a mistake," she said with a hard breath.

That much at least was truth. Behind a locked door she flung off sober garments, freed her cheek of a huge wad of chewing gum, nodded to it saucily.

Stealthily, noiselessly, she slipped into a giddy, airy scarlet frock. She had left the outer door unlocked—as she heard it carefully opened she slid down the stairs, her long black wrap huddled over her arm, her carriage boots swinging in her hand, to meet Austin, who after a suppressed whistle flung the wrap about her.

It was bitter cold, the road hard frozen yet beaten smooth as glass. The motor purred over it at lightning speed. Amabel had no sense of time or distance. It seemed to her hardly a mile or a minute before she found herself in a warm, brilliantly lighted room, part of a gay, surging crowd simply danced. Something in the air set spirits on edge. She was ready, reckless enough to try anything.

They glided stealthily up to the Neal gate. Amabel forbade a nearer approach. "Go away. I can get in best by myself," she said. Austin only smiled. He drew her hand within his arm and half carried her up the slippery brick pavement that ran the length of the lawn. The door opened wide and Mrs. Neal, candle in hand, stood framed in it.

"This must be a mistake," she said with a hard breath. "Ours is a respectable house, it does not harbor scarlet women. I should hate to disturb my sleeping husband, so please go away, at once," turning at the last word to shut and lock the door.

A shut door was the only proper answer to such trickery, thought Mrs. Neal. She would open it after awhile, when Amabel, reduced to abject fear, should make proper supplication.

Up in her own room she waited tensely for the knocking that would tell her she had won. It did not come. Instead, she heard the motor moving rapidly away. She would go down and listen closely, maybe Amabel was outside the door, trembling with cold, afraid to knock.

She opened the door. Nothing, nobody. Heedless of her bare head she ran to the gate, then began a hurried search of the thick shrubbery, the summer house, the garage.

Shaking like a leaf, she crept back within, tried to rouse her husband, but in vain; he was one of those sound sleepers. Then she thought of the minister. He was always a safe counselor. And she was afraid for Amabel's safety out there in the bitter cold.

"That you, Sister Neal?" came a hearty answer at last. "You're just in time to be too late. I married your runaways hard and fast ten minutes ago, and I'm bound to say they seemed the happiest pair I have ever helped into double harness."

The good man stopped suddenly. Over the wire, he heard unmistakable sobbing, then faintly: "Oh, thank the Lord for this crowning mercy. But for it I might be a murderer."

Powdered Metal Making Its Bow Into Industry

TNT is not the only kind of powder that is useful in the campaign for the defense of democracy.

There is now another that is achieving victories in the preparedness effort and will accomplish even greater ones in the peace time to come. It is powdered metal, which is coming rapidly into extensive use in industry as a material out of which metal objects can be pressed in finished form, and in complex shapes, saving a vast amount of work in machining operations.

Apart from its industrial importance, scientists are revealing strange new activities of atoms when metals are reduced to extremely fine powders.

One of the feats of the atoms in tying powdered particles together is known as the "zipper action" in which free surface atomic forces in each of two adjoining metal particles reach out and establish contact across a small gap in space and lock themselves together with the tremendous powers that are inherent in atoms at close range.

In doing so, they pull adjoining atoms on either side into similar close contact so that the atomic powers can become effective, and they, too, become locked. This causes other nearby atoms to lock in a progressive chain reaction like a closing zipper. Powdered-metal technique differs from ordinary metal-working processes.

Grasshoppers 'Act' Like Humans

Someone who threw away a partly filled quart bottle of whisky near Fresno, Calif., is responsible for plunging several thousand of the nearby grasshopper population into the depths of drunkenness.

Carl Hughes, a deputy agricultural commissioner, picked up the bottle in a field near the highway and found it jammed full of grasshoppers, all of them hilariously intoxicated and trying to go places with as little success as a human drunk.

A few who could get out of the "miniature bar" had completely lost their equilibrium and they took a nose dive whenever they tried to spread their wings.

Out they came, one at a time, and wobbled around like sailors on dry land. Sometimes one would fold up with his nose in the dirt, just plain cockeyed drunk, and lay there.

The early arrivals went outside for a breath of air and when they returned for just one more drink, the bottle was seething with hoppers, young and old, and all of them four sheets in the wind and quite content to stay there.

No More Brass

On land or at sea our fighting men do their many chores by the sound of a bugle. All sorts of uncomplimentary epithets are used to designate the bugler, but nobody has yet been able to provide a satisfactory substitute for a bugle although recordings are used at some permanent bases.

Aboard ship the men fall in at the order of "Pipe muster." On land the bugler sounds "Assembly!" But no matter where the bugle is used thousands must be bought out of the money we are investing in War Bonds. Back the attack with an extra $100 Bond in the 3rd War Loan.

What You Buy With WAR BONDS

4 for 1

U. S. destroyers and other anti-submarine vessels of the Navy are equipped with quadruple tubes, meaning they are capable of firing four torpedoes simultaneously, making it more difficult for the target to escape.

Modern warfare is the most expensive destruction the world has ever experienced both for the destroyer and the destroyer. There is no point where we can stop in this war this side of peace so all of us will be required to buy an extra $100 Bond in the 3rd War Loan.

Good news travels fast—many of the thousands of folks who now take lemon juice for rheumatic pain—have found that by adding two table-spoonfuls of Allenu to one table-spoonful of lemon juice in a glass of water, they get faster relief for the aches and pains caused by rheumatism, lumbago. It's no surprise either, for Allenu is a 15 year old formula to relieve rheumatic aches and pains. In fact—if it does not help your money back. What could be fairer? Get Allenu today at any live druggist. Only 50 cents—Do it Now.

NEW! "BACTERIOSTATIC" FEMININE HYGIENE

Gaining Great Favor With Women!

Many doctors urge the regular use of douches for women who want to be refreshingly clean—for women troubled by offending odor, itching or discharge. Some products may be harmful germicides which burn, harden and damage sensitive tissues. But NOT Lydia E. Pinkham's Sanative Wash! Instead—Pinkham's Sanative Wash is an effective "bacteriostatic" (the modern trend).

It not only discourages bacterial growth and infection but cleanses, deodorizes, relieves minor irritations and discharge. Has beneficial effect on delicate membranes. Inexpensive!

Friday Morning

DEAR Jane—I've got to see you. And I never get a chance to see you alone. Every time I come to your house there's such a raft of people I just get a glimpse of you. How about lunch and the movies tomorrow afternoon? At least we'll be alone. Don't turn me down for some ritzy child of wealth who can offer you a better time. I'll be through at my office at one. Could you meet me at Bartlett's for lunch at one-fifteen? It means—well, everything to me to see you. And doesn't it mean something to you?

Yours for ever
Pete

P. S.—I'm sending this note by messenger. Your telephone is always busy, or else I have a feeling that there's an interested audience at your end of the wire.

Pete.

Friday Noon

Dear Peter—Your note by messenger just came. How amusing to write instead of telephone. And awfully extravagant. You're unfair to say I'm always surrounded when you come to see me. It just happens, sometimes, I suppose, that somebody else is here.

Of course I'll have lunch with you tomorrow. I'd just love to. And it won't be a bit of trouble to meet you downtown at Bartlett's. I'll be there promptly, so that I won't keep you waiting.

Until one-fifteen, at Bartlett's.
Jane.

Saturday Morning

Dear Jane—Eureka, and anything else that means "Oh joy." You're a darling to come this afternoon. But here's a change of plan I hope you'll like. I was lucky enough to get tickets for "Rose of the Valley." I know you wanted to see it and I just happened to get two tickets that had been returned. So let's meet at Winter's instead of Bartlett's. It's nearer the theater. Same hour, one-fifteen. I can't make it any earlier. I shan't be in the office this morning—I've got to be outside trying to dig up a new customer for the firm.

Jane, if you knew just what this means to me. Your note was so sweet. You know how I feel, Jane. I'll tell you this afternoon.

Until then,
Yours, Pete.

Saturday Morning

Dear Pete—I'll have to be a little late—I've got to dash out to my sister's in New Jersey this morning and the best train I can get coming back won't get me to Bartlett's until one-thirty.

Pete, perhaps I shouldn't say this, until I see you, but I want to see you as much as you do me. And you can take that as seriously as you want.

Sorry I have to be late. Forgive me and wait for me.

Your Jane.

Saturday Afternoon

Dear Jane—I'm exceedingly sorry you didn't care to go to "Rose of the Valley" with me. I waited around half the afternoon at Winter's, and finally tore up the tickets.

Pete

Saturday Afternoon

Pete, what a brute you are. I waited at Bartlett's for an hour. Then I tried to get you by telephone at your office, but found it closed. I even tried your apartment, but got a no-answer there, too.

Jane

Saturday Afternoon, later

Pete Dear—I'm awfully sorry. I was away from home this morning and didn't get your note until I got back just now. So I suppose you waited for me at Winter's while I waited at Bartlett's. And I did so want to see "Rose of the Valley." I suppose you'll find my note, saying I'd be late, at your office Monday morning.

Your contrite Jane

Saturday Evening

Dear Jane—I'm sorry I wrote the last note I sent you. I know you wouldn't leave me hanging up like that without a reason. Jane, I adore you. I'm poor, comparatively. But I'll work like blazes if you'll only marry me. Sometimes I think you care a little. Then I wonder how you can. I can't offer you anything to compare with the things some of the other men could give you. But I love you, Jane, and always shall.

Peter

Saturday Evening

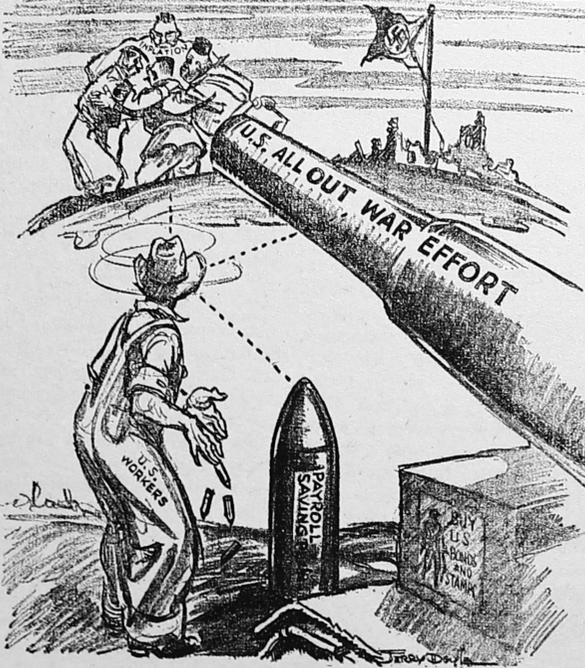

Dear Peter—Aren't you silly! Of course I will. But I can't write about it. Come on over. I'll be waiting for you.

Forever, your Jane.

Clean Sprayer

Neglect in cleaning, lubricating, adjusting and storing sprayers shortens the life of a machine more than the actual work done. Sprayers are attacked by corrosive materials in the spray when they are idle, and for this reason they should be thoroughly cleaned after using. Since this corrosion goes on each hour the machine stands neglected, it is suggested during the active season growers wash out the sprayer each night with clear water.

GOOD CREAM BEGINS WITH CLEAN MILK

|---|---|--|

In the truest sense, the cow-keeping farmer is a microbe-hunter. Every single day of his life he is on the trail of germs—those tiny invisible criminal creatures which are forever trying to sneak into his milk and to destroy it.

Fortunately, in his war on bacteria the farmer has an unfailing weapon—cleanliness. Cleanliness as represented in the washing and sterilizing of all his dairy utensils after each use and cleanliness in the surroundings in which he milks. No amount of subsequent sanitation can possibly undo the full damage that is done to milk if dirt is permitted to fall into it at the time of milking. A clean barn, well-aired, is of the utmost importance. Dust stirred up by cows coming in from a dry yard must be allowed to settle before milking begins. Dry feed and bedding are other sources of dust.

Therefore, their handling must wait until after the milking.

The long hairs on the udder and flanks of the cow should be clipped from time to time and the udder and flanks wiped with a damp cloth before milking. It has been stated that this practice alone would keep 50 per cent of bacteria-infested dirt particles out of milk. A small-mouthed pail is another essential.

The milker's hands should be thoroughly washed and dried before he begins milking. The new milk should be removed to the separator room the minute milking is completed. Delay in doing this invites the danger of added extraneous matter falling in and also subjects the warm milk to absorption of a "cowy" or "barny" odor which is transmitted to the cream, lowering its value.

Listen to Morgenthau-Marshall Tell Power of Payroll Savings!

Washington, D. C.—How important is the average worker's war bond purchases out of his pay every payday in the grand strategy of the Allied High Command? Does the extent of his or her War Bond allotment have a part in determining when, where and the strength of our military blows?

Any worker listening in on a recent conversation between General George C. Marshall, President Roosevelt's Chief of Staff, and Secretary of the Treasury Henry Morgenthau, Jr., learned the answers to these questions.

Said General Marshall: "Mr. Secretary, I want you to answer a question for me and to answer it with complete frankness. Can we military leaders plan to fight this war in an orderly way—in the surest and most effective manner—or must we take extraordinary risks for fear the money will not hold out?"

Replied Secretary Morgenthau: "General, the American public will take care of that. What they have done in the Second War Loan drive—the money they have produced and the spirit they have shown—is proof enough for me that they will not let our fighters suffer from lack of support until we achieve complete victory, no matter how long that may be nor how much it may cost."

Up your War Bond allotment out of your wages today. Figure it out for yourself how much above 10 per cent it should be.

Two Questions

By LEETE STONE

McClure Syndicate—WNU Features.

YOUNG Mr. Clive Williams, prominent legal light, sat with his eighty-dollar coat sleeve resting on his three-hundred-dollar mahogany desk, and anathematized the extravagance of women.

He had no wife; but he had a very modern mother and two very modern sisters. The problem of how to stretch thirty-five thousand dollars a year so it would encompass their domestic budget was extremely agitating.

His mother and the girls must have between them twenty or thirty gowns a year from Paris, a touring car and a town car, to say nothing of periodical reinforcements against boredom such as extended jaunts to the Riviera, Palm Beach, Bar Harbor and Lakewood.

No wonder Clive Williams pondered, with his fourteen-dollar shoes tightly pressing the four-hundred-dollar turkish rug in front of his desk.

A neat blonde head appeared at the softly opened door.

"Hello, Miss Fane! Want to see me?"

"There's a man from the garage to see you, Mr. Williams," said the attractive secretary.

How bright and comfortable, how cheery she looked, thought Williams, as he bid her send the man in. So neatly and tastefully dressed in clothes of distinguished cut and material. How in the world could his secretary appear so charming and desirable, and above all so serene, on thirty-five dollars a week when he could not even approach equanimity on thirty-five thousand a year?

The garage man had a refreshing bit of news. Williams' chauffeur "had been pinched for slicing a pie truck" and "if you don't mind running up to the police station and giving a hundred dollars security you can get him out tonight. They won't take a check—must have cash, you know."

"All right, Stevens, I'll go right up. Thank you!"

Williams pressed a buzzer for the office boy.

"Tell Mr. Jones to come in," he ordered.

"Cashier's gone, sir. It's quarter-past five."

"Then the safe's locked, I suppose?"

"Yes sir. Mr. Jones always locks it before he leaves."

"Well, somebody must open the safe. I need a hundred dollars at once."

"Sorry, sir; but nobody can open it but Mr. Jones and the managing clerk."

Dismissing the boy, Williams dug in his pockets distractedly. They yielded thirty dollars and three nickels. The banks were closed. The office force would faint at being asked for a hundred dollars. He telephoned some acquaintances in nearby offices. All had left for the day.

"The boss is in a fine stew," announced Henry, the office boy, to Miss Fane, the serene secretary, with juvenile glee. "He can't get in the safe, and he's gotta have a bunch of jack in half an hour. I ain't got more'n a hundred in me clothes or I'd oblige him—what? How much does he need? Aw, what's the use of telling you?"

Miss Fane hurried toward her employer's private office, and met him rushing out with hat, stick and gloves, his face a study in weariness and vexation.

"Just one moment, Mr. Williams. It—it's about the money. I've just heard you need some for something important. If you don't mind I'd be glad to let you have a hundred dollars."

Clive Williams could not help it. He laughed in sheer appreciation of the situation. Miss Fane smiled. Here he had been stampeding about the office, telephoning friends, digging in pockets and desk drawers for a stray, forgotten century note, and now came his enchanting secretary offering it to him on the spot. "I just happened to have it with me today," Miss Fane still smiled, "because I've been saving a long time for a piano, and I was going to pay this amount down this evening. I can pay it just as well tomorrow, you know."

Somehow, Williams did not realize that he should be expressing appreciation instead of standing in front of this girl, silently admiring her, and wondering over all manner of amazing economic puzzles. Thirty-five dollars a week and able to have lovely clothes and buy pianos! Thirty-five thousand a year and never out of debt!

What he realized most emphatically, however, was that he, Clive Williams, needed education and a change of viewpoint; also, that standing before him holding out a crisp note was the most perfect teacher of things serene that he had ever seen.

Fearing to give immediate vent to his emotions, Williams took the money and thanked the donor.

"Tomorrow, Miss Fane, when I return this, I have an important question to ask you. It deals with high finance. And tomorrow evening while you're motoring with me in the park, I have another, much more important question to propound. Meantime don't forget me!"

Used Car Salesmen Have Their Own Jolopy Jive

Used car salesmen have an expressive slang of their own, designed to say in one word what might otherwise require half a dozen.

Here are most of the more common terms, although not all of them are in good standing with reputable dealers:

BALONEY—A worn tire.

CANARY—A jolopy which is full of squeaks.

CHSELER—A customer who won't buy unless he can get a car for less than the dealer has in it.

CRACKER—A car that's been through a collision.

DOUGHNUT—A used tire; same as baloney.

GUMS—Another term meaning tires.

HEAT AND MUSIC—A car equipped with heater and radio.

HOP TOAD—The chap who drops in about once a week to look 'em over, but who never buys.

JALONEY—A jolopy equipped with baloney.

JALOPY, JERKER, CRATE or DOG—Just junk on wheels.

KIBITZER—The customer's pal who comes along to point out all the defects and perhaps queer the sale.

LONG SHOT—A non-standard make of car which may bring a big price from the right customer or on which the dealer may have to take a big loss.

MOLASSES—A single coat of cheap paint.

OIL BURNER—A car which is an oil-eater-upper.

ORPHAN—A discontinued make of car.

PACK—To sell a car at a low price and make up for it while figuring the finance charges.

SAGAMORE—A jolopy that lists or sags.

SKY WRITER—A car which produces plenty of smoke from the exhaust.

Remember Pearl Harbor!

Sally's Scribblings

During the very busiest time on the farm—if any particular time can be so designated there—Mrs. Brown received word of her sister's serious illness.

"Catch the 3 o'clock," said her daughter Mary, just arrived home for vacation after a year in a city business office. "I'll take over."

On the way home from the train, Mary smiled, remembering her mother's last minute instructions. Why did farm women make their work so hard, why didn't they have system about it as they did in a business office. That night she made out a schedule. It required will power to respond to her father's call at 5 o'clock the next morning. But, when he and the two hired men came in for breakfast, she was sitting behind the coffee pot, crisp and efficient. She glanced at her watch. Exactly 6 o'clock. Her schedule was starting out perfectly.

Where's the breakfast? her father demanded, seating himself. Speechless, Mary pointed to the orange juice, cereal and toast. Bring bacon and eggs, he ordered. We can't work on bird seed.

Breakfast over, Mary sighed. I should be through washing my dishes by now. I'll certainly have to rush if I ever get back on my schedule.

But that was only the beginning. When she should have been washing the separator she was answering phone calls. She spent bed-making time getting rid of an agent. A neighbor came over to get her mother's chili-sauce recipe, and another precious twenty minutes was gone. As she started for the garden to get vegetables for dinner, her father called, "Jump in the car and run into town and get this bar welded at Shell's garage. Tell them to hurry."

"But Dad, I won't have time to get the vegetables and prepare them when I get home."

"Open up some canned ones then. That's what your mother would do. Hurry. This is important."

That night a tired girl tossed a carefully planned sheet of paper into the waste basket. "Schedules are all right in some places she said, but a farm house isn't one of those places."

Mrs. Bertha Newkirk Files Chancery Suit

Bertha Newkirk had a chancery suit on file recently in circuit court against Barney Block, et al. The property involved is described as 1/2 of N. E. 1/4, section 17, town 18, north range 7 and; lot 2 of Adam H. Harman's subdivision of lots 3, 4 and 5, block 1, Trotter's addition to Champaign.

The property belonged to the late B. Albert Block.

Worst Shot

A keen-eyed mountaineer led his overgrown son into a country schoolhouse. This here boy's arter larnin', he announced, what's yer bill o' fare?

My department, sir, replied the professor, consists of arithmetic, algebra, geometry, and trigonometry.

That'll do, interrupted the old man, load him up with trigonometry; he's the only poor shot in the family.
