Former Resident Visits Birthplace

Irvin McCoy of Los Angeles, Calif., cousin of Dan and Charles Brewer, was in Broadlands on Thursday of last week for a short visit and to look up his birthplace. His parents were former residents of Broadlands, his father having been a teacher in the local schools some forty years ago. Irvin was born in the house now known as the Methodist parsonage.

The past six months he has served as a steward with the Merchant Marines. While on a return trip recently in the South Atlantic, the ship on which he was aboard, was torpedoed by an enemy submarine. He was rescued by a lifeboat in which he spent three days, after which he landed in the jungles of Brazil, South America, to await his opportunity to continue his journey. His only means of conveyance available to reach the harbor was to ride a mule, on a wooden saddle, a distance of forty miles, which was no pleasure trip.

Mr. McCoy served in the armed forces in World War number one.

A reunion of the Brewer family with a pot luck dinner was held in his honor last Sunday at the D. W. Culton home near Newman. Twenty four were present.

Mr. McCoy left on Monday for his home in Los Angeles, having made a complete trip around the world, when he reaches the Pacific coast.

Illinois State Capitol News

Squirrels are said to be fairly plentiful in central Illinois, where the season for hunting them opened Aug. 15 and will continue until Oct. 30.

Soybeans show the best prospects of any of the leading Illinois farm crops. Fields of beans are said to be unusually free from weeds, and are making rapid growth during the mid-summer head. No official estimate on soybean acre yield will be made until September.

An increase in drilling in the Illinois oil fields during July, and a larger production of oil than in June is reported by the State Geological survey. There were 181 oil wells completed in July, compared to 118 in June.

July oil production in Illinois is estimated at 6,700,000 barrels, compared to the June estimate of 5,528,000 barrels.

Distribution of the 1943 Illinois hunting licenses to city, county and township clerks has just been completed by the state department of conservation. More fishing licenses are being sold this year than in 1942, and the prospect that shotgun shells will be available to hunters is expected to stimulate the sale of hunting licenses.

Despite a late start and the handicap of the corn borer and chinch bug infestation in some areas, Illinois corn promises to make a crop better than average, although considerably below last year's unusually high record. The indicated yield is 45 bushels per acre; last year the yield was 54.5 bushels. A total crop of 393,660,000 bushels is estimated by state and federal departments of agriculture.

A rapid expansion of the free maternal and pediatric care being given to the families of Illinois service men is reported by the state department of public health. This program of free treatment was started last year under instructions of Governor Dwight H. Green. It enables the state health department to utilize federal funds appropriated for the purpose of providing care of this nature.

The Fanatical Japs

Any estimate of the time it will take to defeat Japan must take into account the amply demonstrated fact that Japanese fighting men, almost without exception, prefer death to surrender. They have been taught that to die for their emperor is the highest honor, and that to surrender is an utter disgrace.

That they live up to this fanatical belief is shown by the few Japanese prisoners captured during the present war. On Guadalcanal, on New Guinea, on Attu, and now at Munda, thousands have died fighting long after all hope of victory was gone. Many are said to have committed suicide rather than become prisoners of war.

This means that the only way to whip a Jap is to kill him. Wounds, hunger or thirst do not cause him to give up. While there are some exceptions, they appear to be few.

The fanaticism of the Japs, who are also extremely crafty and treacherous, makes them most dangerous enemies, even if captured and disarmed.

In battle the Japs will retreat to new positions when too hard pressed, but they will turn to fight again, regardless of the odds against them. This was especially illustrated in New Guinea, where the Japs advanced to within a short distance of Port Moresby. MacArthur's forces drove them back across the Owen Stanley Mountains and finally cornered them on a narrow strip of coast in the vicinity of Buna. Here the Japs fortified themselves and fought until practically all were killed.

Most of the land fighting against the Japs has been jungle warfare, in which they are experts, and it has usually taken a heavy preponderance of Allied troops to make headway against them. The progress made by our troops in the Pacific islands has been slow and costly.

It has been a year since U. S. Marines first landed on Guadalcanal. Since that time Allied gains in territory in the Pacific have been small, but heavy losses have been inflicted on the enemy by land, sea and air. Our own losses have been large, but far less than those of the Japanese.

What future Allied strategy in the war with Japan may be can not be predicted, but present indications are that the struggle will be long and hard—made tremendously more difficult by the fanatical fighting spirit of the Nipponese.

Sidelights

Coffee sales have dropped, the grocers report. Immediately after rationing of the bean came to an end the sale of coffee went on a decline. Human nature is a funny thing—tell a fellow he can't have a certain article and he'll move heaven and earth until he gets it. Make it plentiful, and the desire of possession diminishes.

Billy Erwin must find himself a new act—the Humane Society has killed his old one. Billy, a night club entertainer, would wind up a tipsy act by eating gold fish out of a bowl. Some of the customers got a laugh out of it, but a few were shocked and reported the act to the Society—who promptly investigated. In order to head off any action, Billy was forced to reveal his secret. The gold fish were carrots cut to look like fish. It's a fine "kettle of fish" for Billy.

Occasionally we run across someone who finds that he does not need all the coupons allowed him in his ration book. No hardship comes his way by complying with the ration rules and regulations. But there's a fellow up in Rice Lake, Wis., who tops anything that we have run across. In a letter to the Barron County Ration Board he says: "Sirs, this is not against you personally but I have to write you. I have 600 pounds of sugar left so don't need any ration sugar. I have meat two or three times a day, mostly beef. I have all the butter I want all the time. I have two sets of first-line tires still with paper on and I have all the gas I want and more—so to heck with you."

Household Hints

To save time, cut poultry, meat or vegetables for salad with a pair of cheap scissors.

Drop cooked beets into cold water for a few minutes. The skins will peel off easily.

To keep powdered sugar from lumping store it in tightly covered tin or glass containers.

Kitchen shelves and drawers will clean easily if lined with remnants of linoleum.

A little dry salt or mustard rubbed on the hands and then rinsed off will remove onion odor after peeling onions.

If there are no flowers for the dining table, moisten a 10 cent sponge and sprinkle it generously with mustard and birdseed. The seed will sprout and resemble an attractive green ball to use as a table decoration.

IMPROVED UNIFORM INTERNATIONAL SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

Lesson for August 22

Lesson subjects and Scripture texts selected and copyrighted by International Council of Religious Education; used by permission.

GOD GIVES LAWS FOR HIS PEOPLE

LESSON TEXT—Exodus 23:1-9; Galatians 3:23-28; 5:13-14.
GOLDEN TEXT—Thou shalt love the Lord thy God with all thy heart, and with all thy soul, and with all thy strength, and with all thy mind; and thy neighbor as thyself.—Luke 10:27.

Our God is a God of order. To have order we must have law, hence God gave His people not only the fundamental law of humanity's moral sense of right and wrong, and the Ten Commandments which are the basis of all codes of law, but also those detailed regulations needed for the law's interpretation. The law of God was not intended to establish a legalistic system of salvation by work, but, as revealed in the New Testament, it was to guide and bring us to Christ, in whom it finds its true fulfillment.

These are matters of fundamental importance and suggest the need of a careful study of our three Scripture portions.

I. The Law Established (Exod. 23:1-9).

At Sinai the Israelites were brought into the presence of God in a dramatic and solemn assembly to hear the words of God from the mountain. These were later written as the Ten Commandments on the tables of stone. Here they learned in a new way of the majesty, the righteousness, and the love of God.

The Ten Commandments are recognized as the foundation on which all legal codes, ancient and modern, are built. They cover man's relation to God and his relation to his fellow man. They are unsurpassed as a comprehensive and compact statement of the moral law.

The passage in Exodus 23 gives us some of the rules and regulations for daily life which are in a sense an interpretation of the law. This portion gives us an idea of the type of laws provided by God for His people and reveals "the moral flavor of the whole divine legislation."

The thing which impresses us as we read of the divine requirements of justice toward all, of love for one's enemies, of refraining from false witness, of refusing all bribery, is that God's standards are very high.

God's law is good, it is right, of divine quality and perfect purity. It has, however, an even higher purpose than providing direction for life. We learn of that as we hear

II. The Law Described (Gal. 3:23-28).

What was the purpose of the law? It was and is a servant of God to lead the needy sinner to Christ. The word "tutor" in verse 24 does not refer to one who teaches, but the servant who saw to it that the school boy, possibly a bit reluctant, arrived at his destination.

The law convicts of sin and makes it evident to the repentant one that he needs divine help if he is ever to meet its demands. The law really puts a man in prison (kept in ward," v. 23), and makes him look to Christ to set him free.

When one trusts Christ he comes into the place of a son. He enters upon a spiritual maturity which makes it no longer necessary to have a tutor directing and disciplining him. He has entered into a new relationship by faith, and is a child of God.

Does this mean that the law has been set aside or abrogated? Not at all. Jesus Himself said, "Think not that I am come to destroy the law... I am not come to destroy, but to fulfill" (Matt. 5:17). This is our third point.

III. The Law Fulfilled (Gal. 5:13, 14).

Paul had warned against the folly of legalism. In Christ men are free from a slavish bondage to the law. But men, desiring to substitute license for liberty, were using the grace of God as an excuse for self-indulgence and sin.

Christ has set aside all the ceremonial requirements of the law, for He became the perfect, once-for-all sacrifice for sin, which was infinitely superior to all the offerings of the Old Testament law. He thus fulfilled the type of the offerings.

The moral requirements of the law were gathered up in Him, and in Him we have only one law to fulfill, the law of love. Obedience to that law meets all the moral requirements of the Old Testament law.

Liberty to the Christian is not a freedom to do as he pleases, not "an occasion to the flesh" that it may live in selfishness and sin. We are free only to be bound by the blessed law of love.

The tablets of stone were (and still are) important. Their laws have never been set aside or withdrawn. But in Christ God has done what He spoke of through Jeremiah the prophet, He has put His law in the Christian's inner being, and has written it in his heart. (Jer. 31:33).

FDR says: Curtail spending. Put your savings into war bonds every payday.

"There are many kinds of road hogs," says Charles M. Hayes, president of the Chicago Motor club. "These dangerous drivers who monopolize the highways include: the lane-straddler, who ignores traffic lanes that are clearly marked to help minimize accident possibilities; the double-parker who congests the street by forcing oncoming traffic to detour around him; the driver who makes U-turns in the middle of the block or at intersections."

This poster, prepared by the American Automobile association, is being distributed by the motor club to its branch offices and service stations throughout club territory, to 500 Cook county gas stations, and to 150 industrial firms in Illinois and Indiana. The poster is one of a Driver Education series, designed to give motorists safety education to eliminate the waste of manpower through traffic accidents.

Booby Trap Detector

In the snow, in the sand, on the beaches, on the roads, in the woods, everywhere the Axis soldiers hide "booby traps," to slow the movement of oncoming fighting men of the United Nations. The detector does the same work on land as the mine sweeper does at sea.

Like buying War Bonds, the soldier operating the detectors will never know just how much they have aided in the success of their campaign, but he knows his work is necessary and must be accomplished. If more Americans on the home front will come to realize this, the success of our War Bond campaigns will be assured.

"TURNED you down, did she?" chuckled Uncle Oliver, as he faced Dorry Lander's crestfallen countenance. "You're no match for the girls, Dorry, my boy!"

"She's not only one girl, Mr. Wylie, Marion is a dozen girls."
"One girl with the essence of a dozen, eh?" went on Marion's adoring uncle. "But I surely thought she liked you a little bit, my boy." He put his hand on Dorry's big shoulder.

The young fellow turned a dark, tense face, and humorous gray eyes toward the older man, but there was a tinge of bitterness in his voice. "I'm afraid it's a little bit—a very little bit, sir."

"Pshaw, Dorry, when I was a young chap like you, we knew how to make the girls like us, whether they would or no," blurted Mr. Wylie impatiently.

Dorry smiled. "Yet you never married one, sir!"

"True, my boy—but, she didn't like me even a little bit. Now Marion—" he paused and rumbled his thick gray hair. "Come into the study, I want to show you something," and Dorry followed Marion's uncle into a small book-lined room with the wall above the bookcases hung closely with rare engravings and hunting trophies from all over the globe, for Mr. Wylie had been a great traveler, and even now threatened another expedition into southern Asia.

He crossed to the fireplace and took a long narrow box from the mantelpiece. "I'm going to give you a love philter," he announced.

Dorry Lander stared and then his deep, hearty laugh echoed through the house.

"A charm?" repeated Dorry politely.

"Yes. It is a flute of old Ab Uys-suf, now a venerable shiek, and patriarch of his tribe in the Arabian desert. He told me wonderful stories of its power to win the love of a maiden—just play it before her—that's what he said—and believe me he must have been a handsome rascal in his youth. I took the flute—I thought I might use it some day—but deuce take it all, the only girl I had fancied married while I was on that trip and so the flute has never been used. I have kept it as a curiosity."

Dorry took the case and thanked the donor. "I feel like a fool, Mr. Wylie. I never played a flute."

"So much the better, just blow it gently in her ear, or under her window—somewhere—away from the house by all means," he added emphatically.

"Oh! I'll try the rose garden by moonlight tonight," muttered Dorry, looking very red. He hid the flute in his coat pocket for he heard Marion's light step on the stairs. "Tell her I will come over tonight—but don't tell her about the flute," he whispered, and slipping over the windowsill he disappeared among the trees that led to the side street.

It was not until after 10 o'clock that he re-entered the Wylie grounds and made his way to the lovely rose garden which was overlooked by the south side of the old house. Marion's windows were on that side of the old house, and a faint light shone there behind rosy curtains. "I wonder if she looked for me tonight," he thought as he took out the flute and replaced the box in his pocket. Never in his life had he played any musical instrument, and it was with some trepidation that he put the flute to his lips, and following Mr. Wylie's directions he blew softly upon it.

The result was so wonderful that he charmed his own senses and sat down on a marble seat among the roses. The most entrancing music came wandering from the flute of the old Arab shiek. It was like all the love songs of the world—it played itself as Dorry blew gently into the mouthpiece. The wooing strains seemed to kiss the bending roses, seemed to meet the falling dew, seemed to lift up to Marion's windows. He forgot her for the moment—he was entranced with love itself! All at once he saw a misty white form coming across the lawn, it drew nearer, nearer, and the moonlight shimmered on her golden hair—it was the girl he loved.

"Dearest," whispered Dorry beside her.

"Dorry," she answered in a muffled tone, "were you playing that for me?"

"Of course."
"I thought when I heard it that someone had stolen Uncle Oliver's prized possession and I came out to rescue it, and it was only you playing to the moon!"

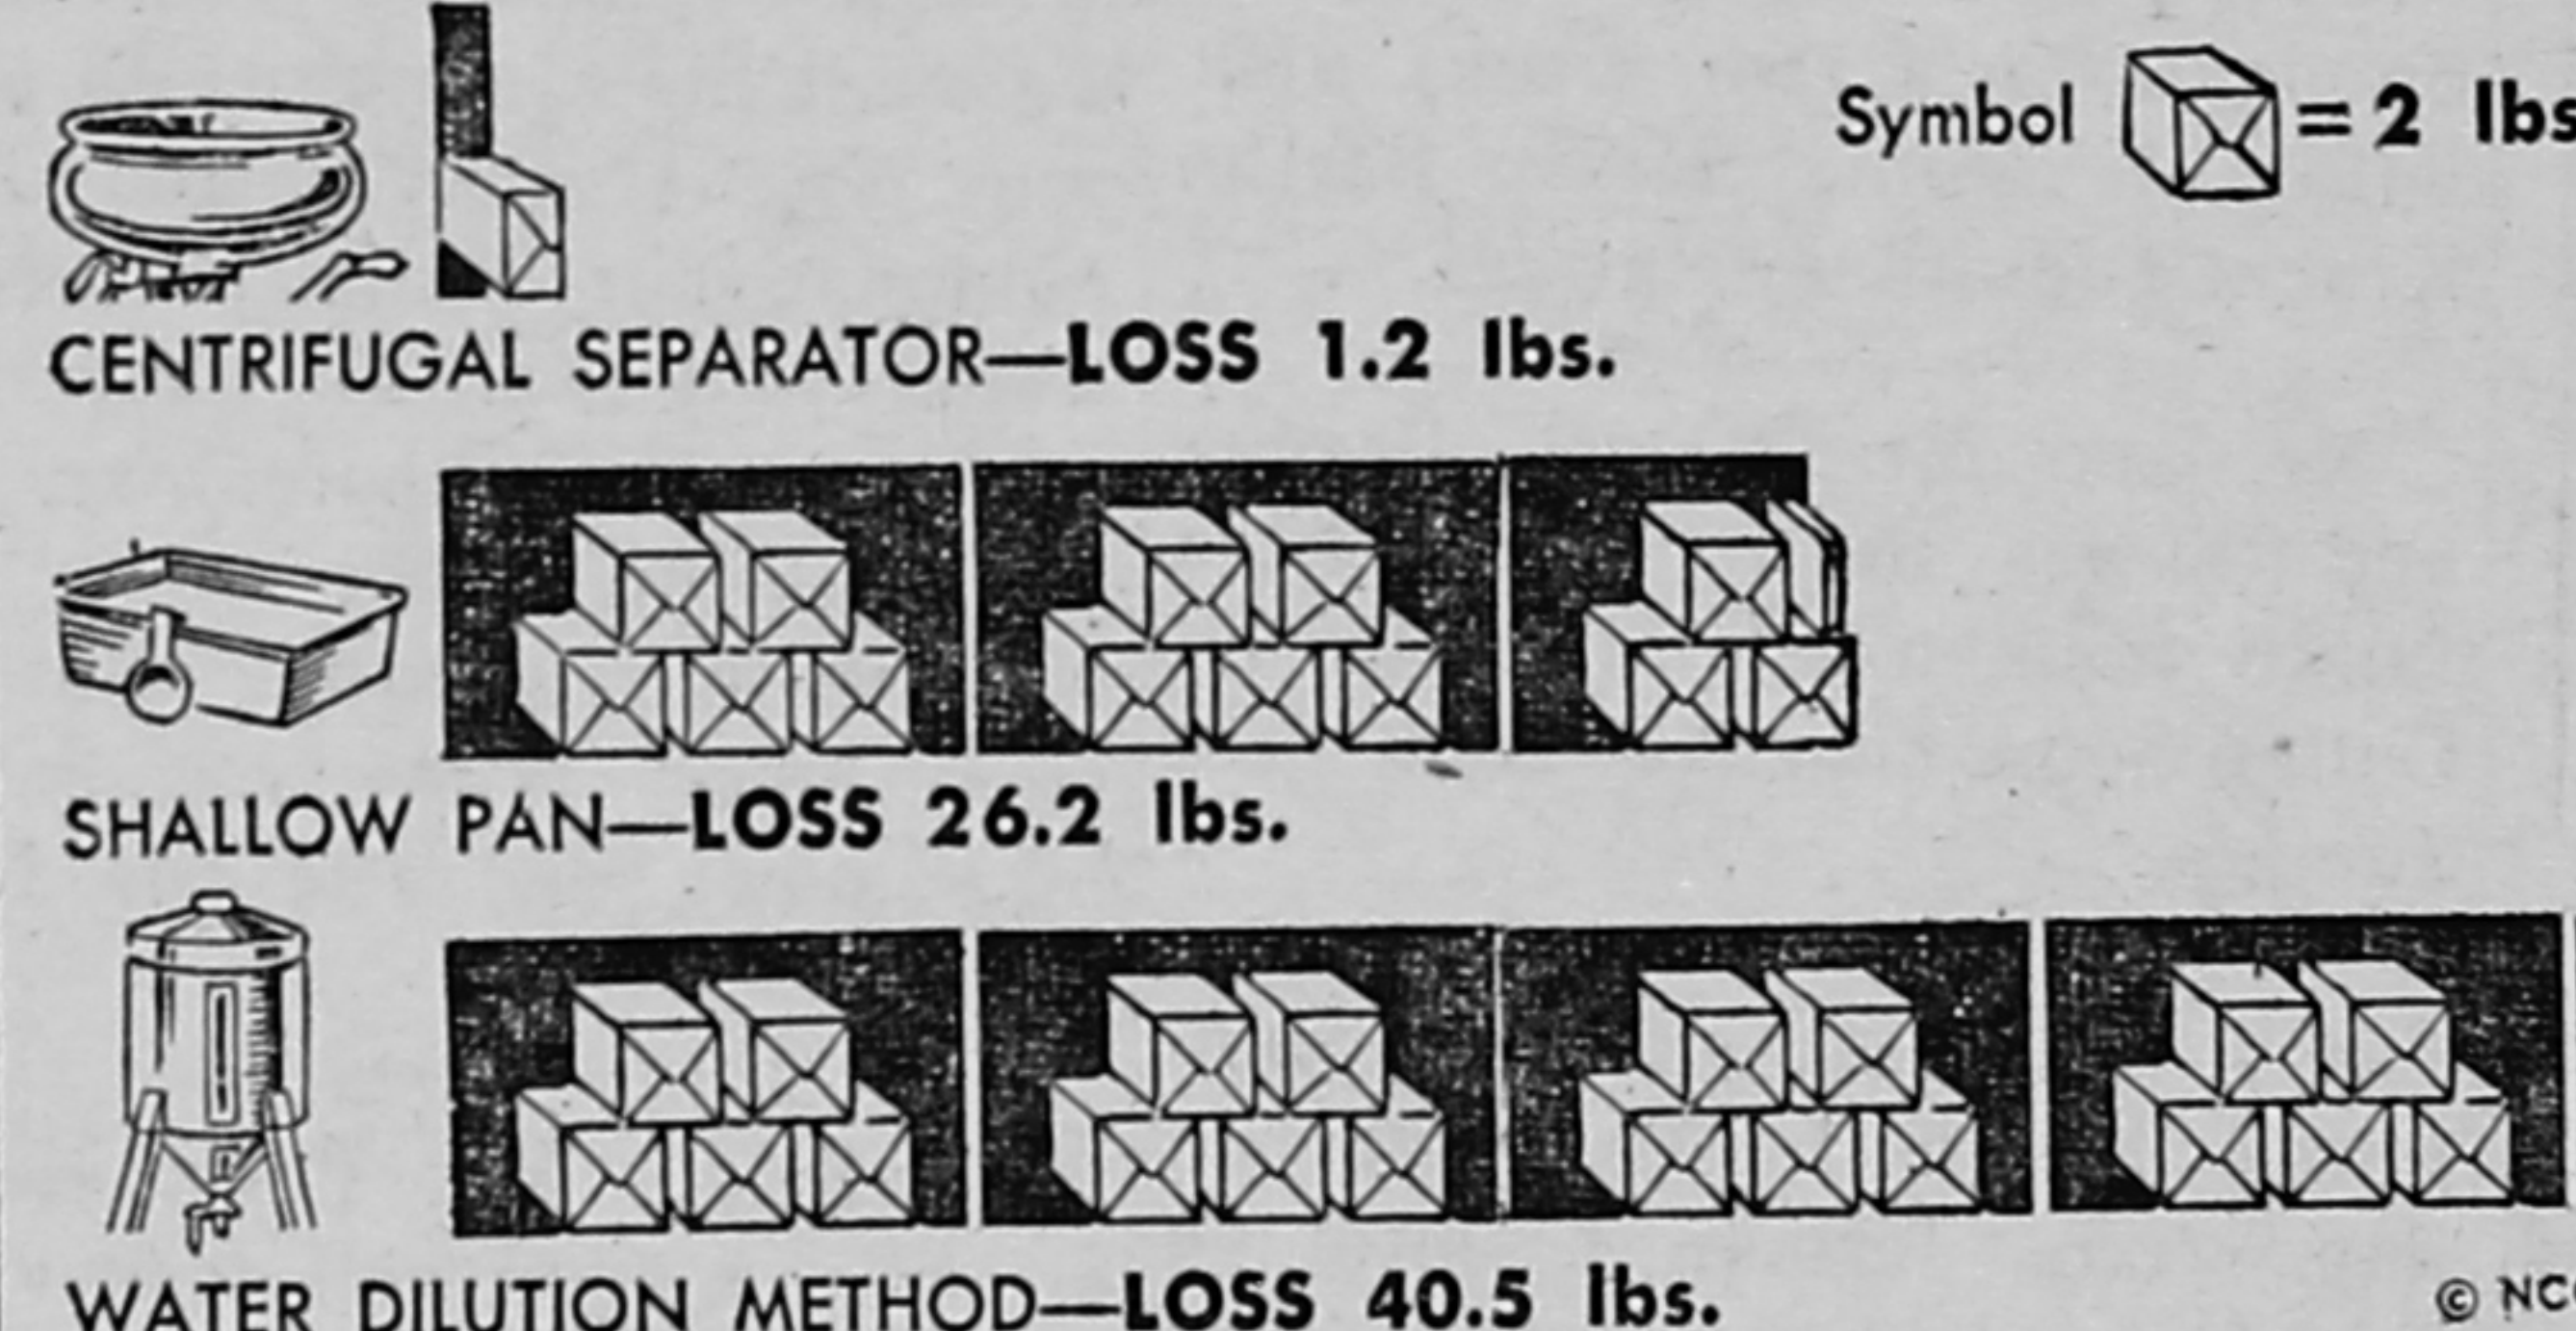

"Confound it all," said Dorry impatiently. "I knew it wouldn't work for a cent! You're only laughing at me after all!" He picked up the flute and turned away, but from among the roses her voice came sweet and low.

"Don't go, Dorry. Uncle Oliver meant well, but you don't need the flute to win my love, because—"

And Uncle Oliver gave them the flute for a wedding present, because he said he was actually afraid of its influence in the possession of a confirmed bachelor like himself.

POOR SEPARATION CAUSE OF HUGE BUTTER LOSS

Amounts of butter lost in 6,000 pounds of skim milk (the approximate production of one cow in a year) when separated by these three methods:

"A separator is a separator," say some farm folks. But based on performance, some hand-skimming separators might better be called cream wasters. "In fact," says a government publication, "farmers milking as few as two or three cows could usually pay for a small mechanical separator within a year from the extra amount of cream and better quality obtained."

The above chart summarizes the results of a series of tests at the Indiana State Experiment Station to ascertain butterfat losses in skim milk from three common methods of separation. Identical amounts of separation. Identical amounts of skim milk were tested, and the results computed in terms of actual butter lost. The water dilution method was found to be the greatest waster of fat—with a loss of 40.5 pounds of butter. The shallow pan method was next with a loss of 26.2 pounds, while the loss from mechanical separation was a bare 1.2 pounds. Not only are the farmers using the first two methods heavy financial losers but the nation, too, is losing a lot of butterfat badly needed for the war effort.

Experts hold that with a good mechanical separator any butterfat loss in skim milk above two hundredths of one per cent is preventable. This is a good standard for the farmer to go by in checking on the efficiency of his own separator. A monthly checkup is highly desirable. Due to the war it is no longer practical to call in the separator service man to make such a test, but this does not mean that you have to resort to the very inefficient method of setting aside a glass of skim milk to await the rising of the cream to the top. The state agricultural college and your vo-ag high school will no doubt be glad to make a test for you.

Some Tip
Mr. and Mrs. America leave about $200,000,000 a year behind them in tips when they go dining out.

This is according to the estimate of Miss Grace E. Smith, president of the National Restaurant association.

Miss Smith said that despite efforts of some restaurants to abolish the practice of tipping it seems to be as popular as ever.

She stated that the $200,000,000 figure was arrived at by considering the $2,185,000,000 worth of meals served by restaurants last year, eliminating cafeterias and certain other restaurants that have a "no-tip" rule and estimating the range of tips on other meals as from 10 to 30 per cent of the price.
