What You Buy With WAR BONDS

5 Ocean Navy

When Pearl Harbor burst upon us our great expanse of territory was protected by a one ocean navy of about 350 first line ships with an addition of an approximate number building.

Now we are in a five ocean war and we are required not only to pay for the building of enough ships of the line but also for hundreds of Liberty ships and auxiliary craft. The amount of money you invested in War Bonds when we had a one ocean navy was all right then, it isn't enough now. Buy more and more War Bonds.

Favorable Trend In Rate of Highway Accidents

The favorable trend in the rate of Illinois highway accidents which began more than a year ago is still continuing. During August, 115 persons lost their lives in traffic accidents, compared with a total of 150 highway deaths in August last year.

The 769 traffic fatalities reported for the state during the first eight months of this year represent a decline of 35 per cent from the corresponding period last year, during which 1,192 persons were killed in highway crashes.

Gaile Potter Weds Pvt. Ralph Mominee

Miss Gaile Potter, San Francisco, Calif., only daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Russell Potter, Broadlands, Ill., and Pvt. Ralph Mominee, Angel Island, Calif., only son of Mr. and Mrs. Paul Mominee, Toledo, Ohio, were united in marriage Friday, September 10, at 8:00 o'clock p. m., by candlelight services at the First Methodist Church, 1600 Clay St., San Francisco, Calif. The single ring ceremony was performed by the Rev. Jackson Burns of San Francisco.

The bride was attired in a navy blue silk bengaline suit trimmed in white, with navy accessories. She wore long white doebkin gloves and carried a small ivory bible.

Miss Phyllis Peterson and Miss Signe Newman, both of San Francisco, attended the bride. They were dressed in soldier blue and wore navy blue accessories.

Pvt. Walter Bannerman, Angel Island, Calif., served as best man.

The pipe organist played "I Love You Truly," "Let Me Call You Sweetheart," "Oh, Night of Love," and "Oh Promise Me" preceding the wedding march, by Lohengrin.

The bride is well known in this community. She is a graduate of the local grammar schools, and of the Allerton Community high school with the class of 1935. After graduating from high school she attended the Homer Community high school doing post-graduate work. She attended Eastern Illinois State Teachers' College, Charleston, Ill., and taught school in this community for four years. She has been residing in San Francisco for the past year and a half and is now a civil service employee, in the Payroll Dept., at Fort Mason, S. F., Calif.

The groom, Pvt. Ralph Paul Mominee, formerly of Toledo, Ohio, is a graduate of the Toledo schools and played professional football for nearly a year. He joined the armed forces Dec. 21, 1940—served in the cavalry in the Motor Cycle Squadron for over a year, and then was transferred to Angel Island where he is in the 313th M. P. Escort Guard Co. His duties consist mainly of guarding the German and Jap prisoners until they are shipped elsewhere.

There were 37 of the bride's intimate San Francisco friends at the ceremony. Among the honored guests were Mrs. James Darley, Allerton, Ill., and Mrs. Cecile Darr, now of San Francisco, Calif.

To the People of this Community:

DRIVE DEPENDS ON YOU!

Would you take a free ride on a wounded soldier's back? That's exactly what you would be doing if you did not do your duty in the Third War Loan.

Your idle weight would be felt by him on the battlefield. Every civilian counts in this kind of war. Every civilian must make his energy and his dollars work for victory.

Keep in mind that while our national goal in this drive is 15 billions of dollars, this money is being borrowed from you and you and you. You are, as an individual, the deciding factor as to whether we reach this goal. An extra $100 War Bond becomes an extra rifle, extra bullets and extra fighting power of every type.

Big Drive For Scrap Metal Starts Today

Illinois' intensive fall drive for 1,240,500 tons of scrap metal will get under way this Friday (Oct. 1.)

The quota, set by WPB, is for the last six months of 1943 and is 15 per cent higher than the quota for the first half of this year. Of the amount of scrap needed from this state, 20 per cent, or 250,000 tons, is general salvage, to be obtained from homes, farms, stores and small industries.

Champaign county's quota of this general salvage is 2500 tons. According to plans for the fall drive, it is expected that the county will reach its quota by Nov. 15.

Lt. Gov. Cross said scrap bins of the midwest's steel companies are getting dangerously low, according to WPB's general salvage division. Some mills, he said, have as little as an 18-days' supply of scrap on hand.

IMPROVED UNIFORM INTERNATIONAL SUNDAY SCHOOL Lesson

Lesson for October 3

Lesson subjects and Scripture texts selected and copyrighted by International Council of Religious Education; used by permission.

JESUS AND THE TEN COMMANDMENTS

LESSON TEXT—Matthew 5:17-20; 19:16-22; John 5:38, 40.

GOLDEN TEXT—Think not that I am come to destroy the law, or the prophets: I am not come to destroy, but to fulfill.—Matthew 5:17.

With this lesson we begin a series of studies which should be of unusual value, a consideration of the Ten Commandments in the light of the teachings of Jesus, and other related New Testament passages.

It is appropriate to point out that, far from being outmoded, the Ten Commandments are really the basis of all moral law. They need a diligent restudy and re-emphasis in our day of disregard of moral standards.

As interpreted by the Lord Jesus and applied to our daily living, the truth of these commandments should be brought home to every boy and girl, man and woman in our Bible schools.

We learn here that our Lord did not come to set aside or destroy the law, but to fulfill it in the most complete way. But the gospel takes us a step beyond the law, and it is a great step, for we follow the One who is greater than the law.

I. Built on the Law (Matt. 5:17-20).

The law of God is eternal, never to be abrogated, never set aside. Christ Himself, although we might properly say that He was in reality the Lawgiver and thus had power and authority over the law, indicated His purpose in coming to be that of giving the law its full meaning, not of destroying it. One could wish that those who profess to be His servants might have the same measure of regard for God's law. If they did, they obviously would not be so ready to ignore it, so quick to change it or explain it away, and far more ready to accept with their Master every "jot and tittle," that is, even the minutest detail of His Word.

Recognizing Christ as the fulfillment of the law should prepare one to manifest obedience to every moral precept through His grace.

II. More Than the Law (Matt. 19:16-22).

Obedience to the commandments brings a man up to the very entrance upon life, but to enter in, he must have more than the "things" of the law; he must have the Person who is "the Door" to eternal life.

The young man who came to Christ was rich. His mind was obsessed with things. He had made it his business to observe the law, and had done well (v. 20), but his soul was not satisfied. He thought one more "thing" to do would accomplish his purpose.

The general attitude of the man was commendable. He sensed his lack of the vital something which would remake his life. He came to the right one—the Lord Jesus—with his question.

His failure to go beyond the things of the law to a faith in Christ, however, showed that he loved his possessions more than he desired to follow the Lord.

Those in our day who are trying to please God and gain eternal blessedness by works, by doing things and keeping commandments, need to recognize that in Christianity we have the One who is more than the law. They need to look away from things to be done, to the great thing that was done once and for all on Calvary.

III. Greater Than the Law (John 5:39, 40).

The Scriptures are great because they bear witness to the Christ who can give life. But obviously the One to whom they bear witness is greater than they are.

Paul speaks of the law as a "schoolmaster to bring us to Christ" (Gal. 3:24). The picture is literally of a servant charged with bringing the child to school where he may learn the truth. So the law convicts man of sin, makes him conscious of his own utter inability to meet God's requirements, and makes him ready to turn to Christ in faith and repentance (Rom. 3:20).

These men of our Lord's time were very religious. They spent much of their time searching the Scriptures that they might find eternal life. But most of them failed to understand that the life they sought was in the One who stood before them—Jesus of Nazareth—and not in the letter of the law.

This has a vital bearing on the proper study of the lessons of this quarter. "The time has passed when men might seek life in the Scriptures apart from Jesus. Now that Jesus has come, life can be found only if the Scriptures lead one to Jesus.

"If our study of the Scriptures does not bring us to Christ, then it is vain indeed. For that reason we cannot study the Ten Commandments without turning constantly to Jesus as the One greater than the law" (Lesson Commentary).

Allied Naval Power

Although actual figures concerning American and British naval strength are kept secret, the U. S. News has made some unofficial estimates which are perhaps as nearly accurate as any available, and place the combined total at 3,700,000 tons by the end of 1943. Japan's naval tonnage is placed at only 1,000,000.

The News article was published before the Italian fleet was taken over by the Allies, and while the real value of these former enemy vessels is only a matter of speculation at present, their removal as a potential threat in the Mediterranean will release a good many Allied ships for use against Japan.

Large numbers of Allied warships will still be required to hold down the German U-boats and protect our landing forces, but we soon should have such an overwhelming aggregation of sea power in the Pacific, combined with air strength, as to make it possible to deliver terrific blows against the Japanese.

During 1944 it is expected that the American and British fleets will reach a total of 5,000,000 tons, while Japan can hardly build enough ships to replace her losses. That would mean a ratio of 5 to 1 by the end of next year.

In addition to the great navies of the United States and Britain, the Allies have a portion of the French fleet, the Russians have a considerable number of warships in the Baltic and Black Seas, and the Brazilian navy has been of much assistance in action against submarines in the South Atlantic.

But in spite of the Allies' overwhelming preponderance of naval power, it is difficult to use it effectively in the Pacific on account of the lack of adequate bases within striking distance of the enemy. How this handicap may be overcome is doubtless the problem which is now engaging the most serious attention of our admirals.

U. S. British Alliance

Recent expressions by national leaders point to the probability of some sort of permanent military alliance between the United States and the British Empire, whatever else may happen as a result of the war. Many who are skeptical about the successful establishment of a world organization to keep the peace are convinced that the closest cooperation among the English-speaking nations must be continued indefinitely.

In the present arrangement whereby the highest ranking officers of the combined forces of the two nations regularly consult regarding war strategy has worked well, and apparently without friction.

These officers meet frequently for consultation on all phases of war strategy and operations, and arrange for carrying out the plans of the President and Prime Minister. Thus a close relationship has been developed between the two countries in the conduct of the war, and this may easily lead to a continuance of cooperation on an even broader scale in the post-war period.

It is hoped to bring Russia and China into a closer relationship with America and Britain to form a definite organization for the amicable adjustment of the many delicate and difficult problems which will arise. It is not likely that an attempt will be made to settle all these problems at a single peace conference, as was tried after the last war with unsatisfactory results.

This time the world situation will be so complex and baffling that negotiations must inevitably take a long period of time. No one can foresee the final outcome but in any event the necessity for the closest cooperation between the United States and Britain is apparent. Nothing could be more disastrous than the development of serious differences between these countries.

Sidelights

Possibly the most illuminating sign to appear recently was that on the rear of a gaily bedecked honeymoon auto which read: "Till Draft Do Us Part."

Czech soldiers in London are pretty well. Said one to a policeman: "Please, Bobby, which watch?" Finally the policeman got it and held out his watch for the other to see. "Six watch? Such much?" said the soldier, and hastened on his way.

Gen. John J. Pershing, who recently celebrated his 83rd birthday, repeated his warning made in 1918, which was ignored, that Germany must be completely crushed and on German soil before this war is brought to an end. The leader of the A. E. F. of World War I, lurching with his one-time aide-de-camp, General George C. Marshall, now U. S. Army chief of staff, said that the United Nations "must make the German people aware of what defeat means by the presence of occupying troops."

Excitement was caused at Fort Smith, Ark., as the report was flashed throughout the city that someone was seen to parachute from a four engined bomber that circled over the city. Crowds gathered to learn the details as others began a search for the parachutist. The "parachutist" turned out to be a handkerchief with the corners tied together and attached to a small iron bolt. Written on the handkerchief were the names of the bomber's 10 crew members and a note requesting the finder to deliver to Mrs. W. H. Cockreham of that city, mother of the ship's copilot.

One of our every two families have at least two workers. Figure it out yourself how much beyond 10 percent of your family income you can put into War Bonds every payday.

What You Buy With WAR BONDS Powder Monkey

On board ship and in the artillery their buddies call them "powder monkeys." Not disrespectful, just a personal, intimate term between friends. Civilians call them gun crews. During a battle the crews of "powder monkeys" must work like trojans bringing the ammunition to the guns.

The gun may fire an anti aircraft .50 calibre shell or a broadside from the 16 inch guns of a great battleship, but in either event the "powder monkey" must pass millions of dollars' worth of ammunition to make the gun effective, and your savings in War Bonds are necessary to supply the financial ammunition that provides the shells.

Doug and Dai

By R. H. WILKINSON Associated Newspapers. WNU Features.

DOUG PAYNTER came into the dining room and saw his wife's pocketbook lying conspicuously in the bowl on the table which she used for a centerpiece. He picked it up and opened it. Bills and loose change were stuffed carelessly inside.

Doug's mouth set grimly. He stalked into the bedroom where Dai was sitting at her dressing table arranging her hair.

"How many times have I spoken to you about leaving your pocketbook lying around in plain sight?"

Dai inserted the last pin in her chestnut brown hair. "A thousand at least," she replied brightly. "Would you mind not bothering me now, darling, I'm in a frightful hurry." She selected a cerise dress from the closet and dropped it over her head.

A white line appeared around Doug's mouth. "Dai, this is the end."

"The end of what, darling?" "My endurance. I can't put up with it any longer. Your carelessness, I mean."

"Oh, for heaven's sake, Doug!" "I'm quite serious, Dai. If I were a rich man it would be different. It wouldn't matter if ten or twelve dollars were stolen."

"Stolen? Oh, Doug, that is funny! I've never had a cent stolen from me in my life."

"Abe Furbush had never been hit by an automobile until last week. Now he's dead."

"Oh, for heaven's sake!" "You can stand there and say 'for heaven's sake' from now till Doom's day. I'm finished."

She looked up suddenly, her eyes wide. "Finished? Doug, you're not serious. Not just because I left—"

"It isn't just what happened today. It's ever day, all the time. Not only leaving your pocketbook around, but carelessness in everything you do."

She stared at him, seeing for the first time the grimness in his eyes, the white line about his mouth. "Very well, Doug," she said quietly. "If that's the way you want it."

It wasn't as easy as he expected it would be. Before two days had passed Doug decided he'd rather have Dai back with all her careless habits than anything in the world. But pride and stubbornness forbade him calling her up. If he had thought that she might get in touch with him, beg his forgiveness, promise to do better in the future, he was bitterly disappointed.

He looked at his watch. Four forty-five. In fifteen minutes he would be through work. He would leave for home. Home! A rooming house on Blossom street. A lonely dinner in a near-by restaurant. He sighed deeply and picked up the evening paper. Almost instantly his eye fell on an item on the front page.

"Occupants of Apartment House Robbed by Masked Bandits. More than three thousand dollars taken from residents of 184 Astor street."

"Good heavens!" Doug sat bolt upright. That was his address. Dai must have been one of the victims. A horrible fear gripped him. He seized the phone, dialed his insurance company. "Hello, Joe? This is Doug Paynter. Did my wife cash in some insurance policies with you today? She did? Oh, Lord! Well, thanks. So long."

He rang the bell of the apartment. After a long time he heard a step. Then the door opened. It was Dai. Obviously she had been crying.

"Dai!"

"Oh, Doug!" He took her into his arms, holding her close, talking to her comfortingly. "I got here as soon as I could, honey. I just read it in the paper. You poor kid."

"Read what in the paper, Doug?" She sniffled.

"About the robbery," he said, handing her his handkerchief.

"Oh, that." She blew her nose vigorously. "It was pretty awful." "Did they get it all—the insurance money?"

She shook her head and stuffed the handkerchief back into the pocket of his coat. "They didn't get any." She smiled at him. "They didn't look in the right places. You see, when I got home with the money I dropped it in the bowl on the dining-room table and neither of the bandits thought to look there. The police officer who came to investigate said I was awfully clever, because thieves never look in the most obvious places. Oh, Doug, you do love me, don't you? You are coming back? And you'll never leave me again, will you?"

Doug took a deep breath. "Yes, yes and no," he said and kissed her.

Old King Cole

Old King Cole, legendary character of nursery lore, ruled a town in eastern England appropriately named Colchester. Although the name does not memorialize the Falstaffian figure, Colchester has named one of the massive bastions of the old Roman wall Colkyng's Castle.

The history of Colchester may be traced to the Roman occupation of Britain. Among the early Britons it was known as Caer Colun, which, in the era of the Angles and Saxons, was changed to Colne Caester. Colchester is in normal times a garrison town. It is 52 miles from London.

Do You Know Illinois?

By Edward J. Hughes Secretary of State

Q. Who was Nicholas Perrot?

A. One of the earliest white men to come to Illinois and the first European to set foot on Illinois soil. He came to what is now Chicago in 1671, two years before Joliet and Marquette.

Q. What was Perrot's object in visiting Illinois?

A. Nicholas Perrot was sent as an agent of the Canadian Government to call a great peace convention of the Indians of Green Bay, preparatory to the movement for the exploration of the Mississippi.

Q. During the Revolution who supplied the Continental armies with ammunition?

A. Powder came from France and Spain. The Sauk and Fox tribes of the Rock River in Illinois supplied a greater part of the lead. In 1780 the British intercepted 50 tons of lead intended for the armies in the east.

Q. What was the name of the ship that LaSalle built on Lake Erie?

A. The vessel was christened the "Griffin." It was a 45 ton boat and carried seven cannons.

Q. What was the fate of the Griffin?

A. While returning to Fort Frontenac with furs the Griffin was lost with her crew. No trace of her was ever found.

Q. Where was the famous battle of extermination of the Fox Indians fought?

A. According to Chaussegros de Lery's map drawn in 1730, the fort of the Fox Indians was located between the Illinois and Wabash Rivers, fifty leagues southeast of Starved Rock. Here on Sept. 9, 1730, the tribe was destroyed.

Q. Who exterminated the Fox tribe?

A. St. Ange. Representing the French government and commanding 1,400 men, St. Ange destroyed the Fox tribe after a siege of 23 days.

Q. How many of the Fox tribe were massacred?

A. Two hundred braves and 600 women. Fifty or sixty of the tribe escaped.

Q. When was Fort Prudhomme built?

A. March 2, 1862. Fort Prudhomme, one of the earliest forts in the Illinois territory was built by LaSalle.

Q. After whom was Fort Prudhomme named?

A. After Pierre Prudhomme, one of LaSalle's hunters. Prudhomme was lost for 10 days and when rescued was too exhausted to continue the voyage. LaSalle built a stockade, and named it after the rescued man and left Pierre and several of his men in charge.

YOUR STOPPING DISTANCE IS YOUR DANGER ZONE

CONTROL IT!

Motorists must be constantly alert to keep the danger zone—the stopping distance of your car—at a minimum if traffic accidents are to be avoided, is the warning of the Chicago Motor Club. This poster, prepared by the American Automobile Association, is being distributed by the motor club to its branch offices and service stations throughout the club territory, to 500 Cook county gas stations, and to 150 industrial firms in Illinois and Indiana.

The poster is one of a series of driver-education posters, designed to impress motorists with the increased need for caution at a time when traffic accidents are a serious menace to war work. The toll of traffic accidents far exceeds the toll of war fatalities, and it is toward the elimination of this waste of manpower that the driver-education program is directed.

Fitten an' Proper
By BARBARA BENEDICT
Associated Newspapers.
WNU Features.

"NOW, Minnie," declared Mrs. Falmouth, "you must be sensible. Jock Bowman said he'd buy two tickets to the Charity Bazaar if my maid would use the other one. Apparently," said Mrs. Falmouth striving to appear coy, "he's become quite smitten with you."

Mrs. Falmouth took a deep breath. "Now, Minnie, let's not be stubborn. This year we're determined to make the Bazaar bigger than ever. We've decided to solicit contributions from everyone, every man and woman who has a job. If I do say so it was very clever of me to ascertain that Jock Bowman, who clerks in the chain store on the corner, is the most popular young man in the district. If I can get his support and endorsement, all the other working people will follow. So you see how important it is that you accompany him to the bazaar."

"Nope!" Minnie's features were grim and determined. "That wouldn't be fitten an' proper, neither. It wouldn't be natural, if you know what I mean, Miz Falmouth."

"Oh, for heaven's sake, Minnie!" Mrs. Falmouth cried in exasperation. "I declare, this is the first I've known that—that other people stood on such principles."

A dangerous glint began to creep into Minnie's blue eyes as the possibility of this being an insinuation against her character began to batter against her sluggish brain. Feeling unequal to a continuance of the verbal bout, Mrs. Falmouth threw up her hands in despair and departed to more familiar recesses of the house.

"Such an impossible creature!" she exclaimed to her husband,

"Ain't I seen you before?" said the young man.

whom she discovered sitting in front of the fire with his shoes off. "I declare, I don't know what I'm going to do. It would mean so much if I could persuade her to accompany Jock Bowman. Edgar, put your shoes on!"

In the kitchen, Minnie finished the supper dishes, pulled a beret over her straw-colored hair and went out for a breath of air. As usual, Minnie headed for the park. She was an unusually pretty girl and long ago she had discovered that the park of a warm evening offered no end of adventurous entertainment for a pretty girl walking alone.

Presently she heard somebody walking behind her. Casually she glanced over her shoulder and her heart quickened its beat as she recognized the young and handsome boy who had attempted to flirt with her on previous occasions. She smiled briefly. Among other things Minnie had learned the correct timing for her smiles of encouragement.

Soon she found an unoccupied bench beneath a live oak tree and sat down with a casual and indifferent demeanor.

She looked up droopingly. The good looking boy had approached and was grinning at her uncertainly.

The good looking boy sat down beside her. "Ain't I seen you somewhere before?"

Minnie sighed wearily. "What a line. If it was Monday I'd tell yuh to go hang your wash on it."

"Listen, babe, you got plenty what I go for. Did anyone ever tell yuh what a knockout yuh was?"

"Aw, go flap your ears."

The boy edged closer. "How about us steppin' out together some night, huh? The Charity Bazaar next week."

Minnie gasped. "For heaven's sake! Are you going to that?"

"I am if you'll go with me. I told old lady Falmouth I'd go if she'd get you to use the other ticket. I was scairt to ask you myself."

Mrs. Falmouth came into the kitchen, and found Minnie humming to herself as she ironed her best dress.

"I guess mebbe I'll use that ticket after all, Miz Falmouth."

"Well, there!" Mrs. Falmouth declared. "I thought you'd come to your senses, Minnie."

"It ain't that," stated Minnie with dignity. "It's just that now I can go with Jock Bowman on account of it's fitten an' proper."

Rivers Carry Gold

In the eastern jungle regions of Peru, most of the rivers carry alluvial gold in commercial quantities. Some gold mines use planes exclusively for transportation.

Household Hints

Use a pair of scissors for cutting meat, chicken or turkey for salads.

Popped corn that has become tough can be made crisp by heating it in the oven.

When linoleum is very soiled add a few drops of kerosene to water used in cleaning it.

Add chopped, crisp bacon to your favorite muffin batter for a delicious Sunday morning treat.

Mend torn oilcloth by bringing the edges together on the wrong side with adhesive tape, then pressing.

A quick sauce for ice cream or pudding may be made by heating maple syrup and adding one-half cup of nut meats just before serving.

Before papering a room where there are greasy spots on the wall, add a coat of shellac to the spots. This prevents the spots from coming through on the new paper.

When cutting a large onion with the intention of using only part of it, cut so the remaining piece contains the root. Then the onion will not dry out so soon.

Smile Awhile

The reckless driver dents the front of his car . . . the cautious one, the back.

Boss—You say you can do anything? Can you wheel a barrow full of smoke?

Jack—Yes, if you fill it, sir.

Standing on a crowded street-car, a stout woman was vainly trying to find a nickel for her fare. All her pockets had been tightly buttoned as a protection against pickpockets, and no little commotion resulted.

Please let me pay your fare, said a man beside her.

Nothing of the kind, she replied. I've got a nickel here some place.

I'm sure of it, said the man, but I'd still like to pay your fare—you've unbuttoned my suspenders three times already.

Para-Ski Troopers

When will this war end? Nobody knows, so the Army is continuing its training of Para-Ski Troopers. They're parachute troops who know their way about on skis or any other place in snow covered mountainous country.

A great measure of the success of Russia's victories last winter is attributed to these troops who move with the silence of a snowflake. Our work on the home front is not so hazardous as that of the Para-Ski Troopers but it is important that we perform our daily tasks and make every effort to increase our regular purchase of War Bonds.

Illinois State Capitol News

In a proclamation declaring that the loyal and patriotic women of Illinois have never failed to respond to every call for a contribution toward national victory, Gov. Dwight H. Green designated the period from Sept. 27 to Dec. 7 as Illinois Women's Army Corps Rally time.

The United States Army is seeking seventy thousand volunteers throughout the nation for the Women's Army Corps. Governor Green is Illinois chairman of the drive. "I appeal to all the young women in Illinois who can meet the requirements for WAC service to enroll for this vital war work," the Governor's proclamation said.

The Union county state forest, near Jonesboro, has been opened for hunting up to and including Oct. 15. Sportsmen desiring to hunt in the forest are required to get permits from the state forest officer or the local conservation official.

U. S. Army men stationed at Camp Ellis are using the Mason and Henderson county state forest areas for practice maneuvers, consequently these will not be available for public hunting this season.

In order to increase the amount of fish available for food, the Illinois Department of Conservation has opened Matanzas lake, in Mason county for seining until the first day of June following the termination of the war.
